Program

With no office, no equipment, and no staff of its own, The Rhododendron returned after an 11 year hiatus. It all began when students filled out cards during summer orientation, to gauge how much interest there was in producing a book. Those interested in leadership positions, filled out applications, interviewed with the advisor, and were narrowed to four editors. The editors contacted interested students, held a meeting, and organized the staff into interest groups.

While, the staff met weekly to discuss cover and theme ideas, equipment began to arrive, and an office began to take shape. In no time the staff had access to twenty computers, six cameras, and ten years of newspaper and photo archives. With all of the equipment ready for use, the only other issue was finding office space. Workman Hall, which formerly housed the yearbook office, was demolished in 1993. The only other option was to share space with The Appalachian staff in the Student Publications Office. Needless to say, after ten years of the newspaper having their own space, staff members from both the yearbook and newspaper found themselves inconvenienced by this arrangement. With time, the staffs found middle ground and adjusted to each others' schedules and space.

Deadlines proved to be challenging due to picture conversion issues, late nights in the office, and first deadline falling on exam week. In addition to the yearbook staff's enthusiasm, the student body showed their excitement, evident in the great turnout for portraits. The monumental task of bringing The Rhododendron back was eased by such great support from alumni and staff.

Like the encores of Ron Howard, Michael Jordan, and Willie Nelson, in their respective careers, The Rhododendron, after 11 years, made a dramatic comeback.

Setting the Stage • In many science classes, students got hands on experience through required labs and projects involving animals.

Wrapping

Studying Hard • With the opening of Plemmons Student Union, students not only have the opportunity to study all day and night, but also have a place where they can socialize, relax, and grab a bite to eat.

Hello? • Head Football Coach Jerry Moore and Women's Basketball Coach Linda Robinson helped Yosef answer phones for a fund-raiser for the Yosef Club in 1995.

Serve and Protect •

The University Police may be found guarding campus by foot, bike and motorized patrols. In case of an emergency, they can be reached at 262-8000, 24/7.

Flying

High • In 1995, Cindy Miner broke the school record in the high jump category, with a 5' 9.25" high jump.

up the past

Appalachian State University has been without a yearbook for the past 11 years. This absence has caused a hole in the history of the school and its students' lives. After 70 years, the yearbook was cut due to lack of sales and the high cost. Without The Rhododendron, there has been a lack of pictorial history covering the many activities taking place on and off campus.

In the spring of 2003, Taylor Publishing Company approached Appalachian's Student Publications Office with a very appealing offer. For the next five years, Taylor would completely cover the entire cost of the yearbook, while also helping in the hiring and training of staff members. Appalachian is one of 25 schools across the nation that received this tremendous offer, and accepted it. The yearbook will be easier and cheaper to produce this year than in 1992. This is largely due to the fact that computer technology has vastly improved in the past 11 years because the majority of the yearbook's pictures are digital.

The following pages are dedicated to those years when Appalachian was without this treasured resource. Included you will find coverage of entertainment, student life, sports, academics, construction, and weather at ASU.

Through the University Archives and the Public Affairs Office, the memories of the past were brought back to life. Pictures from the early 90's through last year have been included in an attempt to capture those memories nearly lost forever.

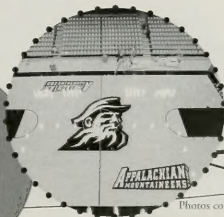

Driven by interest and desire to better document Appalachian's history, The Rhododendron has been revived and will include the missing 11 years of school history. With the completion of this year's book, students will be able to share with their children and grandchildren not only this year at ASU, but the 11 years missed as well.

Touchdown Yosef • Yosef, ASU's mascot since 1941, is remembered in this bronze statue. The statue stands at the corner of Stadium Drive and River St, since 2001. Yosef was constructed by the Belk brothers after the new Yosef design was approved.

Yay! No Class • The blizzard of '93 was so severe that the university closed. Students took advantage of the snow by hitting the slopes.

Let's Get Physical • Faculty members and students hit the Quinn to exercise in the indoor track facility in 1993. The Quinn is used by hundreds of students for exercise everyday.

Go App State • Pictured is the floor of the basketball court in the Holmes Convocation Center.

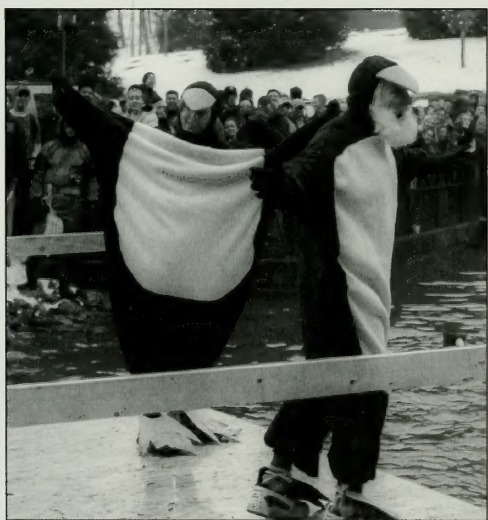

Each year brings changes to Appalachian; student hangouts close and new ones open, events are held, entertainers come to campus, and tragedies happen. However, there are some things that never change; students play in the inevitable snow, go to football games, and celebrate getting their diplomas.

From the annual Polar Plunge to the everyday lounging on Sanford Mall, students at ASU enjoyed many varied activities. Spring Flings, block parties, hanging out at Klondike on below freezing nights, and not to mention playing in the snow, added to the everlasting memories that compose every student's college life. Alumnus of 1995, Emily Baker says that she loves ASU and said that she "still finds it one of the most magical places I've ever spent time... I just have the most wonderful and glorious memories from that fine spot in the mountains."

Students have had to deal with some memories that were not so happy and glorious. The tragedies of September 11th affected this campus as well as the rest of the country. There were blood drives held, memorial services, and fund-raisers for the victims and the Red Cross. The University also had to deal with the loss of many students and faculty members on campus. The Appalachian family deals with death in its own unique way: a memorable book is signed by all and then sent to the families of the victims to let them know somebody cares.

Exciting events have taken place every year here with the many celebrity appearances, concerts, and special programs. Many memories were made over the past 11 years that will never be forgotten.

Life Behind

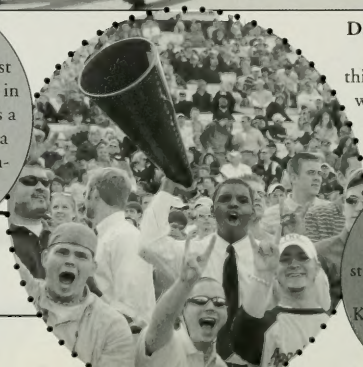

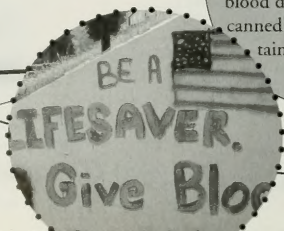

Annual Divers • Dick and Joan Hearn brave the icy waters of Duck Pond in ASU's annual Polar Plunge. Sponsored by the University Police, the event benefits the Special Olympics of Watauga County.

Daily Trek • Students enjoy their 10 minutes between classes on this warm sunshiny day. Days are warm until the November winds make walks unpleasant.

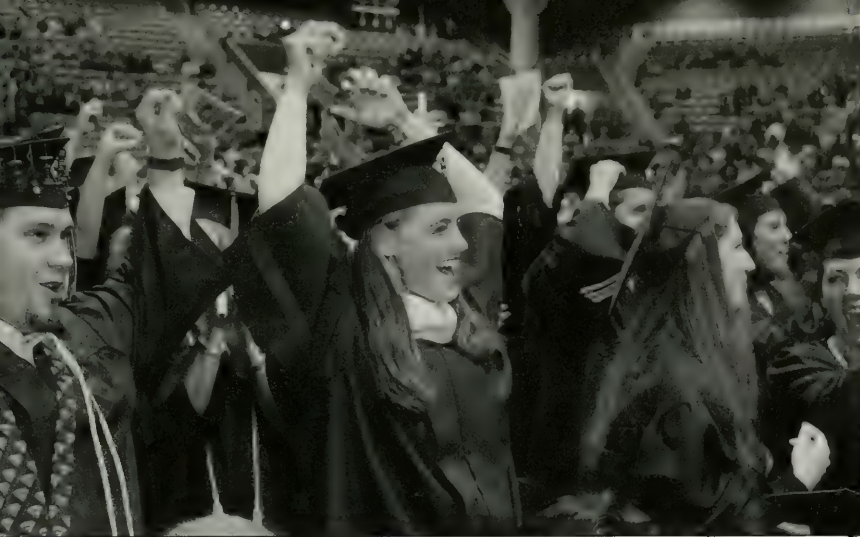

Charity U! •

ASU students continue to be one of the best service-giving institutions in the country. Whether it's a blood drive after 9/11 or a canned food drive, Mountaineers make great volunteers.

Let's Go App! • Football

Saturdays are some of the best memories ASU students have. Here, brothers of the fraternity Tau Kappa Epsilon cheer at this 2002 home football game.

Free At Last • Many graduations, like this one in 2002, have taken place since the last yearbook in 1992 was published. These graduates were obviously excited to be let loose into the world.

Ambassadors of '96 • Started in 1977 by Fred Robinet, the Appalachian Student Ambassador Program were known for giving campus tours and hosting Alumni Programs.

The '96 Snow Bowl • Some very cold guys play a game of football in over a foot of fallen snow on Sanford Mall.

Never Forget • Scott Maxwell, Shoina Christensen, and Sion Harris recite the pledge of allegiance in a somber memorial service for the victims of September 11th.

Up, Up & Away • The "Trampoline Thing" was arranged by A.P.P.S. & SGA at ASU's 1997 Spring Fling. A trampoline was used to propel students in the air.

Spring is in the air • Students relaxed and conversed next to the water fountain on Sanford Mall. Sanford Mall was a favorite hangout of students before it was blocked off for construction.

Many people might make the presumption that there is nothing to do in Boone, however, with organizations like Appalachian Popular Programming Society, this myth has been proven wrong. Entertainment here at Appalachian has included everything from concerts to celebrity guest speakers. Many famous people have graced Appalachian with their presence throughout the years.

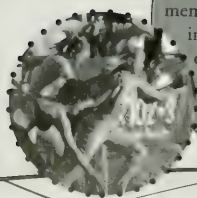

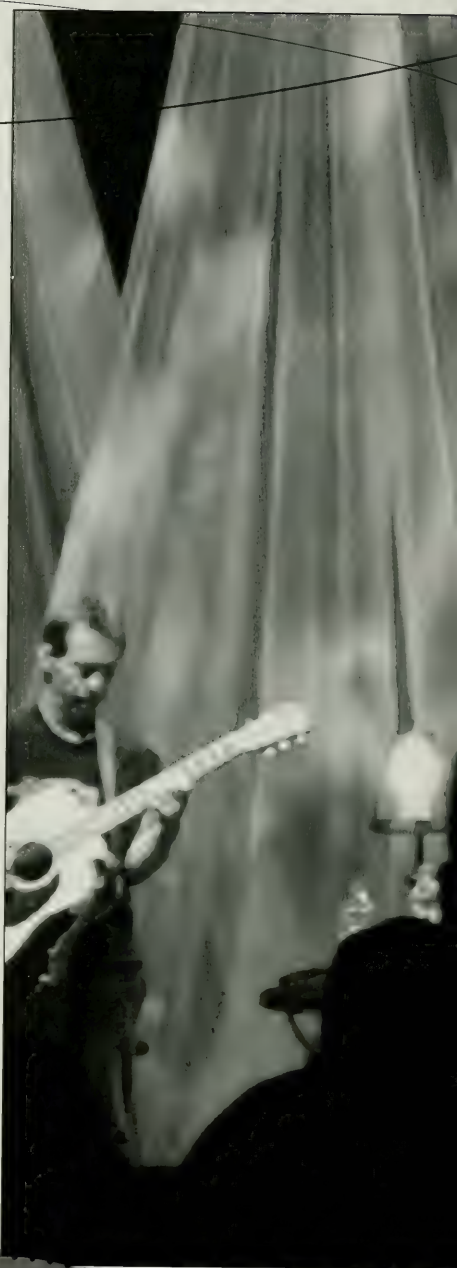

In 1992, one of the most famous classic rock musicians, James Taylor, performed at Appalachian. Students, along with their parents, came out to see Taylor's "New Moon Shine Tour" in Boone. Another famous celebrity that visited the campus in 1992 was actor and comedian Pauly Shore. Edwin McCain also performed at Legends in a sold-out show. "You might be a redneck if..." comedian Jeff Foxworthy made the audience laugh in Farthing Auditorium. Leftover Salmon held a concert in Legends in 1996. That year also brought comedian Carrot Top, bluegrass treasure Doc Watson, and perhaps the most well-known performance that year, rap duo OutKast. OutKast performed in front of a sold-out crowd in the Varsity Gymnasium. Actor David Spade spoke to a standing room only crowd at Farthing in 1997 for that year's Homecoming festivities. Also in 1998, film producer Spike Lee spoke in Farthing. In 1999, many famous acts were brought to campus including Vertical Horizon, Jimmy Fallon from "Saturday Night Live", Wyclef Jean and the Refugee All-stars, and Cravin' Melon. John Mayer and Nappy Roots performed for packed crowds in 2000 and 2001, while Lifehouse and Nickel Creek had sold-out shows as well. Perhaps the most famous concert that has been performed in the past 11 years at ASU was the Dave Matthews and Tim Reynolds acoustic show in March 2002.

While in the past 11 years there have been numerous concerts held for students to attend, that's not the only entertainment in Boone. With the help of A.P.P.S., students have movies to watch and MTV cameras to show off in front of.

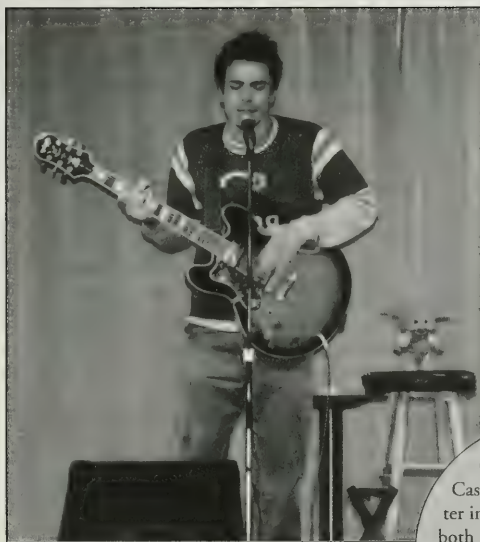

Dave and Tim • The March 2002 concert was one of the largest shows Appalachian has ever held, with 7,482 fans in attendance. Dave's debut to ASU in 1994 was sold-out with 1,000 tickets sold.

Campus Crawl • In 2002, MTV visited ASU's campus to film the first episode of Road Rules, Season 11. The cast member's missions included retrieving the keys to their Winnebago out of Duck Pond during Polar Plunge and walking a tight rope between Gardner and Coltrane Residence Halls.

Music and Coffee • While sitting and enjoying a cup of coffee at Crossroads, one can also hear the acoustical wonders of many students.

Presentation

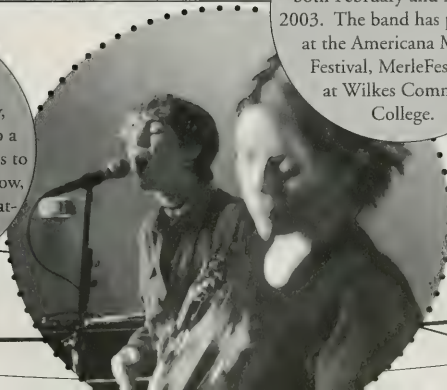

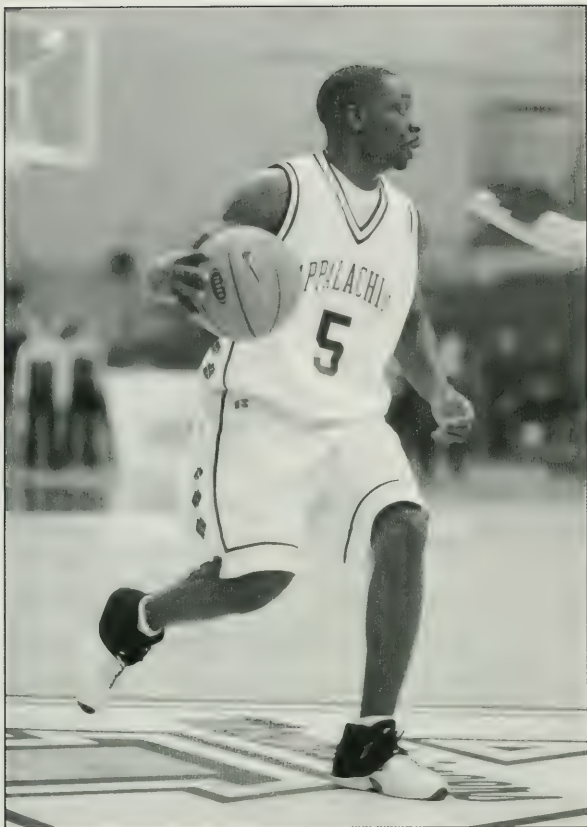

Shark Attack • On October 4, 2002, the Appalachian Popular Programming Society, A.P.P.S., sponsored a free showing of "Jaws" projected on big screen in the Broome Kirk pool.

Funny Man • Comedian Jimmy Fallon performed at Legends on March 24, 1999. Jimmy is one of the actors on "Saturday Night Live" who is known for his comedic renditions of popular songs. Tickets to Jimmy's show sold for only $5-7 in 1999!

Repeat Offenders • Justin Case played in Whitewater in the Student Union in both February and March of 2003. The band has performed at the Americana Musical Festival, MerleFest, held at Wilkes Community College.

The Bunch • In 1996, Barry Williams, the original Greg Brady, appeared in Legends to a large group of students to perform a comedy show, while also demonstrating a Brady family dance.

Ball In • Rufus Leach helped lead the 2000 Mountaineers to their first NCAA Tournament appearance since 1979.

Mountaineer Miracle • In the 2002 victory against Furman, Jermane Little sprinted with the ball hoping to score a touchdown.

It's Time

Magic in the Mountains • The 2002 Homecoming theme inspired students' floats and banners as the annual homecoming parade wound its way around downtown Boone.

Appalachian State University has had many athletic successes in the past years. Every sport has excelled in one way or another. Here are some important sports stories over the past years that deserved recognition.

On October 3, 1998, Coach Jerry Moore, SoCon Coach of the Year in 1991 and 1994, won his 100th game against Wake Forest in a 30 to 27 win in overtime. Coach Moore had been coaching for more than 15 years and his overall record was very impressive with 122 wins, 58 losses, and 2 ties as of the 2003 season conclusion. After the team's victory over ETSU on October 5, 2002, Jerry surpassed Duke's Coach Wallace Wade as the winningest coach in Southern Conference history. Jerry was a very humble man and gave all of the credit to the players and the coaching staff.

Wofford Hall-of-Famer, Coach James "Jim" Brakefield, died in October 2002 in Louisville, Kentucky. Brakefield built an outstanding offense based on the wide-open offense program that he learned from Texas. In 1971, the 53-year-old coach began his nine-year career at ASU. Coach Brakefield had his first victory on September 18 against ETSU, 28-24. While at Appalachian State University, Jim and his coaching staff held summer camps for players interested in the Wishbone Offense style. His overall record at Appalachian was 47 wins, 48 losses, 4 ties. Athletic director, Roachel Laney said, "He was the Father of Appalachian Football and the man of the most integrity that I have ever met."

In 1996, the Women's Basketball team had an impressive year with a 17-0 undefeated season in the conference. That year, the women also made an appearance to the NCAA under the coaching of Linda Robinson. Robinson led the Lady Mountaineers to many championships.

October 22, 2000 was a depressing day for the ASU community. The expected SoCon Player of the Year, Rufus Leach, drowned after experiencing leg cramps while swimming back to shore in Watauga Lake. Leach was a young man admired by coaching staff and teammates. Buzz Peterson, former Basketball Coach said Rufus was a "young man of impeccable character." The senior communications major led the basketball team with 16.4 average points per game. Leach also set a new school record with 100 three-point shots in a single season. The team dedicated the season to Leach for those at Appalachian to remember and keep in their heart the memory of an outstanding athlete.

The dedication of the baseball field occurred October 10, 1998 prior to the App-Furman football game. The field was dedicated to Appalachian baseball alumni and former trustee Edward Gerald "Red" Lackey.

Lackey was president of the Alumni Association from 1958-1960. He also served on the Board of Trustees for 18 years. In 1992, "Red" and his wife established an athletic scholarship at Appalachian. Lackey graduated from Appalachian State Teacher's College in 1937 with degrees in chemistry and physical education. He played baseball, basketball, and football at ASU.

Years coaching has given ASU Track and Field coach John Weaver unique insights into what was a potential 2000 Olympic Champion. Weaver never doubted that some of his athletes could make the Olympics. Three Appalachian alumni made an outstanding performance at the Olympic trials in Sacramento, California.

Sports accomplishments throughout the past 11 years have been an exciting adventure. Appalachian athletes provided pride in the university through their championships and personal achievements. The tradition of excellence continues as it has done in the past.

Pump Up the Crowd • The Varsity Cheerleading team builds a "wolf wall" to entertain and make the crowd cheer at a home basketball game. ASU and UCA (the Universal Cheerleading Association) join forces every year to provide a cheerleading training camp over the summer for those schools in the surrounding states.

Signs of Pride • Appalachian State University's sign stands tall and strong during one of the snow storms. The sign was however knocked down and stolen in early November of 2003 for about a month. The sign was a popular site for students and guest to pose for photos.

Rehearsing

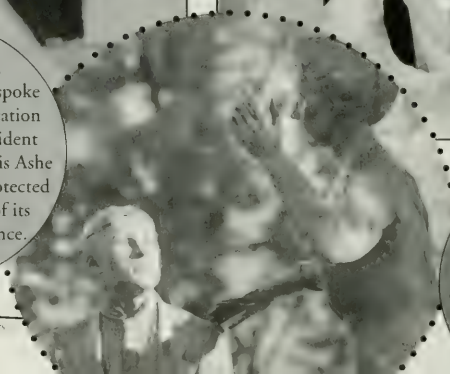

Happy Birthday • In 1999, Appalachian State celebrated its 100th birthday. The birthday celebration lasted all year long and every opportunity was taken to remember this monumental achievement.

Dance the Night Away •
Along with many traditional academic classes that are offered at Appalachian, there are also dance, music, and art classes to enhance the student's minds.

Old River •

On July 30, 1998, Chancellor Borkowski spoke at the New River Dedication function where President Clinton named this Ashe County river "protected land" because of its historic significance.

Teaching Statues •

The Bicentennial Statues on Sanford mall commemorates the phases of Appalachian State University. ASU began as a Teacher's College in 1899 and is now over 100 years old.

The most important aspect of college is education. Appalachian prides itself as being one of the top colleges in the state. The many awards and honors the university has received through the years only add to its prestigious reputation.

One such was the Time Magazine honor of naming Appalachian State University one of the "College's of the Year" in 1999, due to the Freshman Seminar programs and Learning Communities. Freshman have the opportunity enroll in Freshman Seminar which registers students together in at least one other course to form a learning community. The Seminar fostered new friendships, enhanced study skills, and brought in working professionals to familiarize students with a major or field. Students who were in small freshman seminars and learning communities tended to return to Appalachian for their sophomore year at a higher rate than their peers who did not partake in the program, 90% vs. 84% for 1999's freshman. More than 50 percent of the incoming class of freshman took part in the Freshman Seminar Program in 2001.

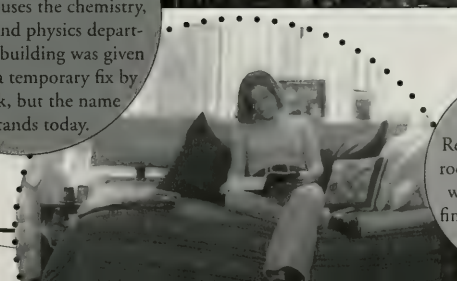

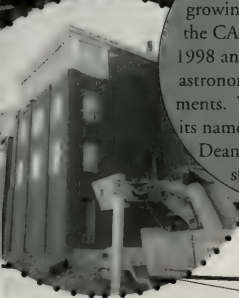

Accredited programs such as this make Appalachian a distinguished university. The school has gone from being a small teacher's college, to becoming one of the most competitive universities in the state.

The campus of Appalachian has drastically changed over the past 11 years with new and renovated facilities. Each year new additions are made to the university grounds in an effort to offer students a better learning and social environment. The new educational buildings and recreational facilities are available to better serve the students at ASU.

One of the most significant construction projects in the past years was the new addition to the Plemmons Student Union in 1993 and 1994. The new Student Union provided students, as well as faculty, a place to relax, catch up on some work, grab a bite to eat, drink some coffee, or socialize. The John E. Thomas Building, built in 1995, houses many important offices, such as the Office of Admissions. The McKinney Alumni Center was completed in 1996 as a facility for the Alumni Chapter of ASU. In 1998, the CAP Science Building was established to accommodate the expanding science department. The Holmes Convocation Center, built in 2000, is a state of the art facility that is equipped to handle a monster truck rally if needed. New residence halls have been added and many have been renovated to accommodate the university's ever-growing needs.

One can be sure that the next 11 years will bring about a great deal of transformation to the campus. The new library, bookstore, addition to the Student Union, and the new Student Recreational facility will soon be a reality. For now, students of ASU must endure more construction on campus, just as they have done for years.

Age of Construction • The John E. Thomas building was constructed in 1996, which presently serves as an information building for students and visitors.

Up In Smoke • Workman Hall, which formerly housed the year-book office was torn down in 1993; the building withstood a fire.

Come One and All • With the opening of the New Student Union in 1994, students had a new, modern environment for entertainment, food, and studying.

Finally Open • Once called h'APPy's, the student-run bar and nightclub, now called Legends, re-opened in 1989 after renovations. Legends got its name from the pictures of "musical legends" that hung on the walls inside.

Moving Time • With the opening of the Appalachian Heights in the Fall of 1997, upperclassmen now had a brand new apartment-style residence hall to live in.

Nature's

Fields of Gold • One of the most beautiful seasons here in Boone was spring. This was a time when many flowers, such as these Black-Eyed Susans, bloom.

Skiing on Sanford • The 1993 blizzard not only brought the snow, but it also brought an opportunity for some students to find a new location for a favorite past time, skiing on Sanford Mall.

Afternoon Stroll •

Many students take advantage of the warm summer days by walking their pets and enjoying the beautiful mountain scenery.

Unpredictable, erratic, and inconvenient are just a few words describing Boone weather. Each year brings about dramatic weather conditions at Appalachian. While walking to class in the morning, you may need to wear a sweatshirt and jeans; by the time class is over you need a t-shirt and shorts; after lunch, you may need your snow boots and winter coat. Mountain weather has always been very impulsive, changing by the hour. The 1993 and 1996 blizzards drenched the campus in record breaking feet. The Blizzard of 1993 caused ASU to cancel classes for the week, the longest amount of time classes have been cancelled at the school. The students endured an extended spring break. About 60 students who did not go home for spring break were snowed in without Appalachian Food Services for three days. Only about 150 other students braved the roads and returned to campus after the storm hit. Chancellor John Thomas encouraged students not to return until the following Sunday to give the university and the town of Boone time to get the snow cleared out of the parking lots and other places.

In 1996, another huge blizzard hit and delayed classes. Over 27 inches of snow fell from January 5-7. During this storm, 262-SNOW was established for students to call and get information on class cancellations. Students are still benefitting from this service today.

Although, Boone has very random weather, the beautiful fall and spring days make up for the difficult winters. Nothing can beat the striking colors of the leaves on a crisp sunny fall day or the beauty of the blooming flowers in the springtime. Boone weather is defiantly an inimitable and unique aspect of Appalachian.

Backdrop

Leaf Nap • Among the crisp fall leaves behind IG Greer Hall, Jason Sutis took a nap while studying. Sutis was a Watauga College program student in 1998 and 1999.

Ice, Ice Baby • In 1996, Duck Pond froze over from one of the most severe blizzards Boone has ever seen to date.

Call in the Bulldozers •

The Blizzard of '93 was so severe that they cancelled classes and called in people to help clear out all the snow on campus.

Sunshiny Day •

Baseball season starts up in the spring semester. Here is the field on a beautiful day.

A large, brilliant firework explodes in the dark night sky, creating a massive, starburst-like pattern of white and red light. Below the explosion, two individuals are seen from behind, looking up at the spectacle. They are wearing formal uniforms, likely military or ceremonial, featuring dark jackets with white lapels and cuffs. The person on the right is also wearing a dark cap. The scene is set at night, with the firework's light illuminating the surrounding darkness.

Behind the Scenes,

Academics was not the only thing on the minds of students this year at ASU. After class had ended and the sun went down, Boone offered many revenues to entertain its residents. Whether it was hanging out at Legends, or relaxing on campus watching a movie in IG Greer Theatre, Appalachian students had numerous opportunities to make their behind the scenes adventures memorable.

Lip Sync

Lip Sync has been an annual Homecoming event since 1997. This year the event was sponsored by the Campus Student Association, and was held on Duck Pond Field. RSAs, Greek organizations, and University Funded Organizations (UFOs) were all participants. For the first time this year there was a preliminary competition with five RSAs, Greeks, and four UFOs advancing to the finals.

The judges for finals were Judy Haas, Director of Judicial Affairs, Dr. Jeff Doyle, Director of Residence Life, and Dr. Williams, Director of Learning Communities and Watauga College. They were chartered with selecting the best group based on originality/creativity, incorporation of the homecoming theme, costumes and props, accuracy in lip-syncing, audience reaction, energy, and choreography as outlined in the Homecoming Handbook.

Hundreds of students showed up to watch their peers perform a wide range of musical selections. The Homecoming theme of "Black and Golden Oldies, 75 years of Football History" provided the opportunity for students to incorporate songs ranging from the 80's hit "Beat It," by Michael Jackson, to music from before most students' lifetime, like The Nylons and their song "Dream."

In addition to the music, the performance itself was critiqued. The groups were judged on accurateness of their lip syncing, and the dance routine was also a large factor in the determining a winner. Some groups chose to do go all out with well rehearsed, choreographed routine while other groups chose instead to have a few sing while others did improv' in the background.

As wide-ranging as the choreography and the music were the costumes. Some groups came in their pajamas, others in formal wear; however, most of the costumes were planned to follow the theme of the individual performances. Chi Omega dressed up as 20's flappers and braved the cold in their sequined tank tops and fringed skirts; their performance was centered around Chicago the Broadway Musical and now hit movie. The Ambassadors, however, dressed in 50's garb including neck scarves, khaki Capris, leather jackets, and white tops. They performed songs such as "Hold On," "Jail House Rock," and "Lollie Pop."

In the end, CRSA received third place and 30 points, Coltrane Hall was second with 50 points, and the big winner was Alpha Phi and Delta Chi who received 70 points toward the Homecoming Championship.

The groups seemed to put a lot more effort into this year's performances. I think it was the best Lip Sync Appalachian has ever seen.

Parade

One fall Saturday each year the Raley Hall parking lot sparks to life in the early morning. The Homecoming Parade, a tradition for putting on finishing touches to floats, warming up instruments, and pinning on corsages, has been a fun tradition at Boone for many years.

This year's parade traveled a shortened route around downtown Boone. The parade line-up started off with the marching band, followed by Grand Marshal Barbara Burgin, former Assistant Vice-Chancellor of Alumni Affairs, the Homecoming Court, and the many floats and kazoo bands. All clubs, Greek organizations, RSAs, and UFOs had the opportunity to have a float or kazoo band in the parade. All of the parade participants were judged within their category for championship points and also for cash prizes. A total of 150 points and $225 was given for the first place float and 100 points and $100 was given to the best kazoo band in each the RSA, Club, and Greek categories. There were also prizes awarded for second and third place. This year's parade, not unlike many others, saw a large number of guests, supporters, and children in the Boone community. The many participants are often what made the parade unique and memorable each year.

Game Day

Homecoming is traditionally one of the biggest football games of the year. Alumni, students, parents, faculty, staff, and friends were in no short supply this year. The festivities started before dawn. Alumni arrived early in the morning to get ready for the big day. The Director of External Affairs for the Student Government Association, April Stewart and her committee, arrived in Raley Hall parking lot before 8 a.m. to prepare for the parade. Organizations and rental companies spent the morning setting tents up on Duck Pond Field for pre-game tailgating. Hundreds of people showed up to relive old memories and make new ones.

ASU was victorious with a score of 21-7. The team was behind until the third quarter when ASU scored touchdown after touchdown. Rumors flew around campus that Outkast would be performing during halftime, for the MTV special "Homecoming Weekend 2003." During halftime there was no famous band to perform, but the Homecoming King and Queen were crowned. Queen Anna Burgess and King Brian Bettis were chosen by student votes online.

For the finale, the Appalachian football team proved to be victorious over East Tennessee. After the crowning and game, the tents came down and the alumni headed home, marking the end of another great ASU homecoming.

Starting the Season off Right

Midnight Madness was a basketball season kick-off event that took place in mid-October. The men and women's basketball teams were introduced to the few hundred fans and ASU students that came out that night. Each player ran onto the court with a spotlight shining on them while the announcer told the audience a little about them.

There were many events and contests that took place, including the Wachovia Dash for Cash. One hundred $1 bills were scattered around the floor. A male and female were chosen from the audience to run around the basketball court and try to pick up as much cash as they could in a minute. More free stuff was given away when Midnight Madness T-shirts were thrown into the audience for fans to fight over. Students also got a chance to participate in basketball relays and run plays with a few of the team members. People who were thought to be wearing the most black and gold came down to the court and the audience voted by applause on who they thought was the most spirited. As a reward for their time, free food from Jersey Mike's Subs and Papa John's was provided for all who attended.

To finish off the evening, Houston Fancher and Adrienne Shuler, the head coaches of the basketball teams, gave an inspirational speech to get the audience excited about the start of the basketball season.

VIC Mania • The audience holds up their Harris Teeter VIC cards in hopes of getting chosen to come onto the court. The MC picked who he thought was the most excited to participate in activities on the floor.

Number One • Students excitedly participate by giving the #1 gesture. There were relays, contests, and activities planned through out the evening to get the crowd involved.

Win It • Cheering during one of the relays is Adam Bright. Groups of three students volunteered to participate by writing their names down on a slip of paper to be drawn from a hat.

Dance Madness • The ASU Dance Team performs a short routine between basketball festivities. They sported their gray Midnight Madness tees and black stretch pants.

Halloween at ASU

Even though there was no national news coverage and people from all over did not flock here as they did to other NC schools on Halloween, there were still plenty of things going on at ASU. There were events for the holiday going on throughout campus and around Boone.

The night before Halloween, local children trick-or-treated in the residence halls. Their parents brought them around the buildings and they visited doors bearing a pumpkin to receive candy. There were more children than expected and many students ran out of treats to give them.

A costume party sponsored by the math club took place in Plemmons Student Union on the 30th. Many people showed up dressed in outrageous costumes. There was also a Jump Little Children concert held in Legends with a costume contest. The winners at Legends were Gumby, an oompa loompa, and a knight. Many other students chose to spend the evening at Geno's annual Halloween Fest.

On Halloween night there were also many varied activities. In IG Greer at the showing of 28 Days Later, there was a pre-movie mini-thriller involving a murder by the 'Greer Killer.' There were also the typical trick-or-treaters and Halloween parties.

Whether it was putting on a costume, going out, or watching a movie, there was plenty of fun to be had here in Boone.

You Go Girls • Dressed in their best for the costume party are Ashley Blackmon, Gina Wooten and Elizabeth Payne. Unseasonably warm weather the night before Halloween provided students with more costume options this year.

Gumby, Oompa, & Knight • At the Jump Little Children concert, the winners of the costume contest were announced: Crystal Genes, second place, Elizabeth Hodge, first place, and Andy Freeman, third place. The concert was one of many held that night.

Carvin' it Up • Intensely carving their pumpkins are Jack Minnich and Andrew Eggers. The jack-o'-lanterns were set on display near the Bicentennial statue for passers-by to admire.

We're Hungry • Joseph Blythe, Josh Gainer, Ben Lyons and Sklyer Harrison are enjoying food from McAlister's Deli on the 2nd floor of the Student Union. A McAlister's Deli franchise replaced The Blue Ridge Cafe in 2002.

Campus Candids

Behind the scenes of everyday life, students were found just hangin' around campus. There were many places students would gather to talk, study, and eat. In Plemmons Student Union, it was common to see group study sessions up until the late morning hours.

In between classes, studying was not the only activity happening around campus. Eating was a favorite past time for many, and considering all of the food-bearing spots the university offered, finding somewhere to eat was no problem. A popular food-joint for many, McAlister's, located on the second floor of the Student Union, allowed its guests to sit down and relax until their food was brought to them. Also located in the Student Union were Crossroads Coffee shop and Cascades Cafe.

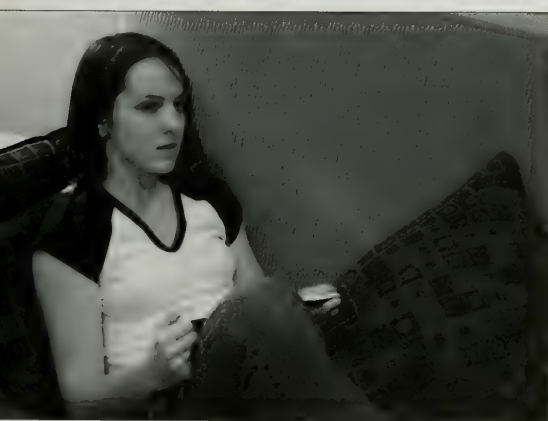

During the warm fall months, spending time with friends to play frisbee, hackey sack or nap in the sunshine was all accomplished on Sanford Mall. Although half of the mall was closed due to construction, this never scared away its frequent visitors. Taking a break from academics and spending time with friends was an integral part of the college experience at ASU.

Snack Time • Taking a break in Cascades are Chris Waddle and Ashley English. Cascades provided Cafe' style food such as sandwiches, hot dogs, smoothies, and a wide selection of candy.

Campus Activities

Whether it was attending a concert, performing at one, going to a dance, or jumping in freezing waters, there was always something to partake in on campus.

One of the biggest name bands that came to Appalachian this year was Lonestar. Being a popular country music group performing in the mountains of North Carolina, most people knew who they were and bought tickets to attend. The tickets were affordable, at just $18 each. People were asked up on stage to help the band sing songs, clog to some music, and serve as a subject for the lead singer to sing to.

Battle of the Bands took place in Whitewater, a room in Plemmons Student Union and three bands performed.

O.A.R. came to campus and performed in the Holmes Convocation Center. Many bigger name bands chose to perform in a bigger arena like the Holmes Center.

Winterwonderland Gala took place at Legends, giving a students the opportunity to dress up and spend the evening with their friends.

The Polar Plunge was an annual event held at Duck Pond, sponsored by the University Police. Students or organizations could pay a $25 entry fee (donated to the Watauga County Special Olympics program), and then jump into the frigid waters of Duck Pond in the wintry weather.

"Beforehand everyone is laughing and having fun, so when you hit the water, it completely takes you by surprise. Everything in your body stops working and you have to remember that if you don't swim, you're going to drown; but I'd do it again in a heartbeat," Kat Sharp said.

There was never a lack of things to attend. Opportunities always arose for students to get out and have a good time.

Tearing Tickets • A.P.P.S. members Ashley Myers and Elizabeth Munn tear tickets at the Lonestar concert.

This big name band coming to campus was an exciting event. "After ticket taking, I worked by the stage just making sure no one taking pictures blocked the view of those people sitting in the front row," Ashley said.

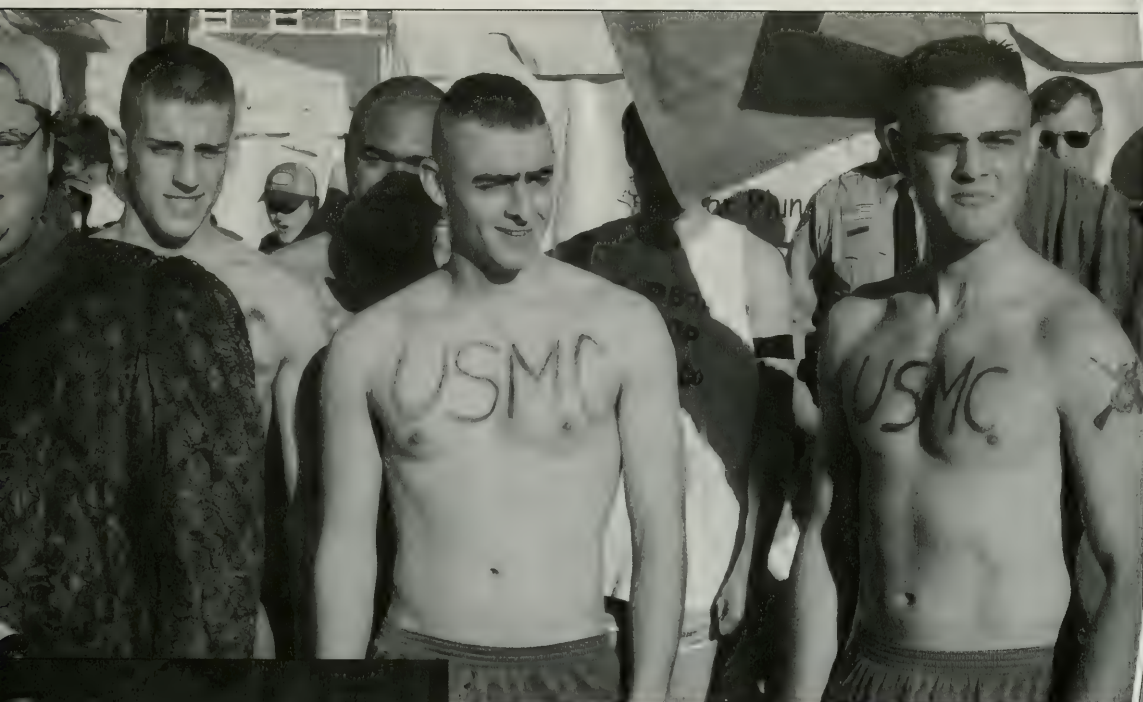

John Munn

Battle of the Bands • Performing at the Battle of the Bands Invisible. Bands signed up to participate in the event. Two other bands were present, Last Stretch and Where the Walk Ends. "I performed at Battle of the Bands. There was a really great crowd and it was just a lot of fun to get up and show what we could do," Jef Fiorello said.

Reprising the Crew • Waiting for their turn to jump in the freezing waters of Duck Pond are Scott Riley, Thomas Palmer and Rick DiCarlo. "Our chapter of the U.S. Marine Corps participated to donate money toward Special Olympics and also to raise awareness of the growing population of Marines and Marine Officers on campus," Scott said.

Waiting in Anticipation • O.A.R. fans wait in the Convocation Center for the show to begin. "I have seen O.A.R. nine times, the concert at App. was one of my top two favorites. I love their crowd interaction; if you yell out a song they'll play it, and I think that makes them an amazing band," said Emily McDermott.

Dance Fever • Busting a move at the Winterwonderland Gala at Legends are Anne Thompson and Stephen Mazingo. The Gala was a chance for students to get all dressed up and spend a night out on the town.

Funky Music • Shaking their tailfeathers are students in a funk class taken at Mt. Mitchell Life Fitness Center. Many different aerobics classes were held each day, including "Fab Abs," pilates, and yoga.

Getting and Staying Fit

Physical fitness was a very important part of some students' daily routines. Whether it was attending an aerobics class at Mount Mitchell Life Fitness Center, or lifting weights at the Dwight W. Quinn Recreation Center, students were always seen exercising in their spare time.

Students had many different reasons for their interest in fitness. "I used to be very active before I had a back injury and had to have surgery. Now I'm just trying to get back in shape," Kelly Grahl said.

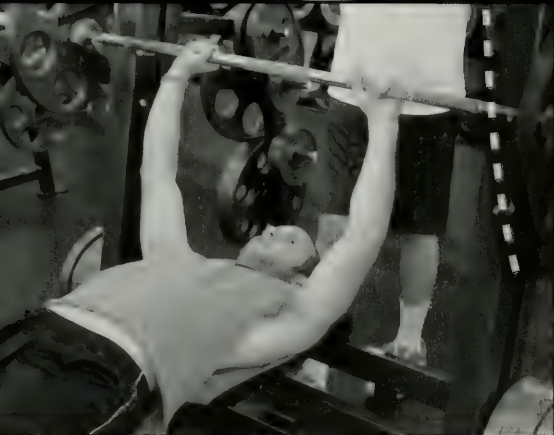

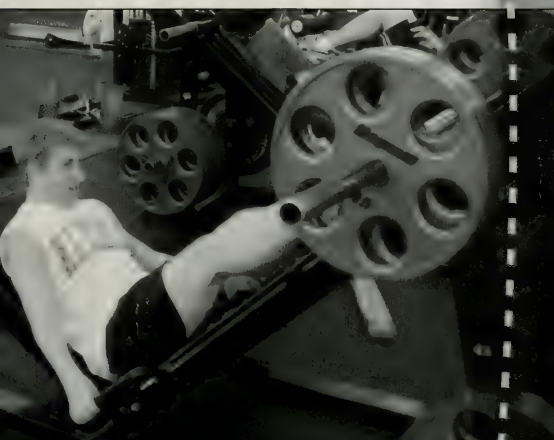

The Quinn and Mount Mitchell were the two indoor fitness centers on campus. The Quinn was located on Stadium Drive, and Mount Mitchell was on the third floor of Plemmons Student Union. The Quinn featured eight courts for racquetball, handball and walleyball. It also housed a cardiovascular area, complete with step machines, stationary bicycles and cross-trainers, a weights area, aerobics classes, and an indoor track with basketball/volleyball courts in the center. Mount Mitchell was smaller, with only the cardiovascular area and a multi-purpose room used for aerobics classes.

"I work out two to four times a week because I eat too much. Exercising is addictive and once you start, you just have to keep on going. I also don't want to gain the 'freshman fifteen,'" said Nellie Yang. The "freshman fifteen" was an epidemic on most college campuses. Students were said to gain fifteen pounds their freshman year due to different eating habits.

Whether exercising in the wee-morning hours or late at night, staying physically fit was a priority for some students.

Leg Pressing • Strengthening his legs is Brandon Cole. "I work out because there is not much else to do in Boone when you're a freshman with no car, so I might as well try to get a better life out of it," said Brandon.

Workin' It • Doing leg curls in the Life Fitness Center is April Blevins. Lifting weights, in addition to cardiovascular exercise, created a well-rounded work-out. "I love to work out. My Cannon girls and I always go together," said April.

Spot Me • Being spotted by a friend is Andrew Willis. "I am on the Triathlon Team so I have to keep up with endurance work-outs like running, biking, swimming, and lifting weights," said Andrew.

Ball Hog • Grabbing a couple yoga balls for an aerobics class is Lee Warden. The aerobics instructors made use of the balls for abdominal exercises.

Free Exercise • Looking in the mirror while she does leg exercises is Lauren Paat. The full-length wall mirror was an asset in seeing what you were doing while working out. "I try to work out three times a week," Lauren said.

Cycling Strong • Checking her stats on the digital display while riding the stationary bike is Kathleen Lemkes. Many cardio machines were available for use in both The Quinn and Mt. Mitchell. "I usually work out by myself because it's a good time to gather my thoughts and just relax," Kathleen said.

home is where the heart is

Dorm Life

Every year a new breed of freshman invaded ASU's campus. Freshmen were required to live in the dorms, therefore creating a limited amount of dorm space for upperclassmen. Juniors and seniors had to enter a lottery for their rooms, which were limited to only about 700, many of which were in Appalachian Heights. Upperclassmen had to wait to see if they won the lottery before they could choose their room, while sophomores were just assigned on a first come, first serve basis. Sophomores, juniors, and seniors got to choose their room in whichever dorm they wanted. While many upperclassmen chose to get an apartment off campus, a lot liked the closeness of living in a dorm.

Resident Assistants planned dorm programs for people on their floor to participate in. White Hall had a "mocktail" party in the fall. The R.A.s mixed non-alcoholic drinks like strawberry daiquiris and pina colodas for everyone in the hall to enjoy.

"On one of about every ten cups, we put an X on the bottom. This served as a statistic for the number of people who get date raped. ASU police then talked about alcohol and the effects on the body. Overall, it was a great program!" said White Hall R.A. Amanda Mahaffee.

Students liked to hang out in their lobbies and in neighboring rooms. They became fast friends after living near each other all year.

With 18 different dorms on campus, students were provided with a varied, but unified behind the scenes living experience at ASU.

Watching T.V. • Sitting on a loveseat are Nicole Sylvestre and Sara Osbourne. Some students chose to bring comfortable furniture to sit on instead of always sitting in the standard issue dorm chairs. "I like living in the dorms because you can easily form friendships by just walking next door," said Nicole.

Drying Hair • Drying her hair after getting out of the shower is Crystal Cuomo. "Living in the dorm is fun because you meet a lot of interesting people and there are always things going on," Crystal said.

Pretty in Pink • Getting ready to go to an eighties party is Anna Johnson. Living in the dorm provided a valuable resource for girls and guys alike to borrow clothes from their neighbors. "Living with a bunch of people in a community environment is fun and being on campus is convenient," Anna said.

Crystal Cuomo

Hanging Out • Sitting in the hallway of Newland Hall are Tim Cheek and Esau Saylor. Students liked to make use of all the available space to hang out in their residence halls. "I enjoy living in the dorms because you get a chance to meet more people. Also, you don't have to drive anywhere to hang out; you can just go down the hall," Esau said.

Good, Clean Fun • Reading magazines are David McNulty and Ian Cotter. Inviting friends over to hang out provided a fun time without leaving campus.

Jammin' • Listening to music in his room is Ross Bowden. Students had to abide by quiet hours set by their resident assistant at the first floor meeting of the year. "The dorms are convenient to live in because everything is so close by," said Bowden.

Hangouts

Thursday nights kicked off the weekends. There were always students outside Spoonerz and Klondike Café, two adjoining businesses on Hardin Street, from Thursday through Saturday nights. Spoonerz was a new hangout that opened summer 2003, while Klondike was a restaurant consisting of a dance floor for students and locals alike to utilize. Both were within walking distance from anywhere on campus and easily accessible.

"Thursday nights are spent at Klondike with friends. The atmosphere is one of a kind!" said Anna Blankenship.

Sometimes they were so crowded, people had to gather outside because there wasn't enough room indoors. Even freezing temperatures did not stop the crowd from coming.

"Spoonerz and Klondike are just places to chill out, unwind, and see people you know," said Mike Reed, who had spent many a night there.

Café Portofino and Murphy's both contained billiards and dartboards. Murphy's also had an outdoor deck for customers to enjoy.

Macado's was a popular place to go for a meal, with its wide variety of sandwiches and its close proximity to campus.

Klondike Café, Spoonerz, Café Portofino, Macado's, and Murphy's were all big hangouts for Appalachian students. Although they were not the only ones, they were certainly well known.

Just Chillin' • Sitting around outside are Jeff Laney, Kelly Fortenberry, Katie Bender and Ally Nesheim. Having a drink after class served as a way to relax some students after a hectic day.

Waking up the Sun • A few students are relaxing outside at the Arthenon Cafe on a very warm March day. Being tired of the cold weather and snow, an unexpected warm day put everyone in their summer attire and out of their room.

Snow is all Around

Matthew Brown

One thing that Boone wasn't short of was the abundance of snow during its winter season. Students used the first snow as a time to party. People got out their sleds, or if they were sneaky enough, their cafeteria trays, and headed to any and all hills that they could find. The hill behind the Broyhill Music building was popular among students. Students also played sports on Sanford Mall and one could find at least one snowman built there after every snow.

"I like to snowboard and sled in the snow," said Andy Blahnik who is originally from Canada.

After the first snow; however, it just became a nuisance to some. Many students did not like how nasty the snow became. There were mounds of snow that had been plowed out of the road that took up parking spaces in the parking lots. Those mounds, usually around until April, melted uncharacteristically early this year due to a bout of warm weather.

Students also got very irritated when classes were not cancelled, especially compared to other schools that did not have as much snow. "I don't like how classes aren't cancelled when it snows, so I just cancel them myself," said Erin Moore.

There were, on the other hand, plenty of students who enjoyed the many snows. Snow was a big reason that many students came to ASU. "I have a jeep, so I love challenging it with a few feet of snow," said Brent Polston.

Whether students enjoyed the snow or absolutely despised it, most bundled up and trekked to their classes regardless. With the mass accumulation of winter weather in Boone, snow became just another part of college life.

Wind Block • Finding warmth, on a snowy day, using the free expression tunnel are two students. Students bundled up and walked as quickly as possible in order to avoid being in the wet conditions longer than absolutely necessary. "It's amazing how windy it is here and how much snow accumulates in the tunnels even though they're underground," Sarah Dochow said.

Snow Plow • Sledding behind the Broyhill Music building is Maribeth Montgomery. The hill was huge with a jump built at the bottom and was crawling with students after every snow. Sledding is a good way to relieve stress," said Maribeth.

Lost Sled • Ashleigh Purvey gains her composure after leaving her sled a few feet behind her. Students took to the hills at every chance they got once it began to snow. "As a Floridian I do not function well on the snow, I did the best I could; sledding is a much more exciting way to fall," Ashleigh said.

Ski Jump • Out on the slopes is Don Carson. Many students tried to hit the slopes as often as possible during the winter season. Skiing was often taken as a PE credit; however, there were still students who never made it to the slopes. "I like to ski because I like to bust phatty-bo-batty jumps," Don said.

Where's My Car? • Walking towards the snow covered stadium parking lot, students are coming down the stairs from the Living and Learning Center. The ASU campus looked like a different place when snowy weather blanketed the area. "I personally love the snow, and this year was amazing. Even though we never got a big dump, the total amount was breathtaking," Rick Sutcliffe said.

No Pay, No Play • Cashier Jenny Bailey takes money from a student who was playing pool. Students who worked in Hawksbill Game Room supervised all the students who came to play pool, air hockey, and various other types of games.

Printing Money • Getting a print card for someone is Emily Provost. Employees of ITC Media Services, located on the bottom floor of Belk Library, were in charge of the public printers located in computer labs around campus. "I like being on campus because of the central location and flexible schedule," Emily said.

How Many? • Julie Strawn works the ticket office outside of Legend's. Supervisors of Legend's events sold tickets, checked student IDs, and kept everything under control. "I love working at Legends. The people are wonderful to work with and you get to see some of the best shows that come through this area," Julie said.

Student Jobs on Campus

Making money is an important aspect to many college students. Fortunately, there were plenty of opportunities for jobs on campus. The top five campus employers were Plemmons Student Union, University Recreation, Residence Life, ASU Food Services, and Belk Library. Students also worked in the tutoring center of D.D. Dougherty, in Lucy Brock Daycare, the campus radio station and various computer labs around campus.

Erika Farmer who cleaned for work-study at the Lucy Brock daycare said she enjoyed "being around the kids," but disliked "taking out the trash from the diaper pail."

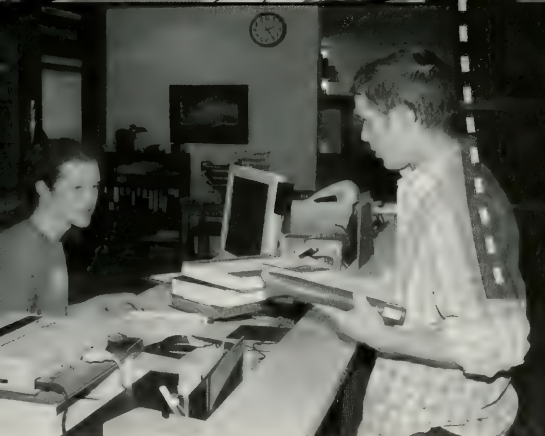

Students who were interested in working on campus could contact the Student Employment Office to get information on every job that was available. Once the student knew exactly where he or she wanted to work, they could contact that specific place. ASU worked hard to provide jobs for students because they needed students to help the university run efficiently. Approximately 2000 students held on-campus jobs.

"There is a lot of time where I can study and I also have the chance to meet a lot of people. On days when it's not busy, time goes by so slow and I feel like I am wasting my life away," said Monique Wells, information desk attendant for the Student Union.

Having jobs on campus were very convenient for students who lived both on and off campus. Working and attending class all at the same place, not only provided easy access but also an easy solution to scheduling issues.

Order & Serve • Serving food during the afternoon are Ben Stephens and Jamie Belinsky. Employees for food services had to serve people food and make sure everything was prepared and stocked properly. "The thing I dislike about being a server on the line is that people are indecisive on what they would like to order," Ben Stephens said.

Can It • Ringing up an item for someone in the University bookstore is Laura Jackson. Employees had to run the registers and keep the store stocked and looking neat. "I get to meet a lot of interesting people," Laura Jackson said.

Need Books? • Checking out a book for Nick Dawson in Belk library is Adam Wells. Students who worked in the library kept the shelves stocked and answered questions. "I am able to review all of the good books being checked in," said Adam.

Computer Caretaker • After clocking in for Academic Computing Services, Rachel Williams checks E-mail. "Working long hours gets tiring, but I'm learning a lot about the campus computer system and I get to meet new people," Rachel said.

Hello? • Answering the phone at the information desk is Sean Hickling. "It was a lot of fun because you get to deal and work with students, the best environment that I can imagine," said Sean.

Stay Awake • Ann Boschini makes coffee as part of her Java shop job. Employees of Crossroads Coffee House, received a lot of business from overworked, under slept students. "The people who work in the coffee shop are the most unique individuals I have ever had the pleasure of working with," Ann said.

Weekend Activities

School's out! Well, for the weekend at least. Many students on campus began their weekend activities on Thursday night. Thursday night was the biggest party night for ASU because many students go home or out of town on the weekends.

"Most of the time when I stay on campus for the weekend I like to socialize, so I hang out with friends and try to find a party," said Tim Bell.

Of course, partying wasn't the only thing ASU students took part in on the weekends. Students enjoyed a variety of endeavors in Boone; including shopping, movies, and eating out. These activities may not have always fit within the college student's budget, but sometimes students splurged to have a little fun. There were many shops on King Street that students enjoyed checking out, as well as the Tanger Outlet Center in Blowing Rock, just a few miles down the road.

As far as weekend movies were concerned, Boone offered plenty of theaters for students to choose from. The theaters off campus ranged in price from $1.50 at the Carmike Appalachian Cinema to $7.50 at Regal Cinemas and the Chalet. The most popular theater was the Carmike Appalachian, located on King Street within walking distance from campus; students only had to wait a few weeks after the newest movies were released to see them.

When wanting to satisfy their appetite some students chose to go out and eat with friends at the many restaurants Boone had to offer. There were a wide variety of different cuisines with a price range to fit any budget.

While most students used the weekends as times to go out, party, and stay busy, others used this time to get things done that they were not able to get finished throughout the week. Students caught up on homework, errands, and chores around the house.

"I love the Boone community and meeting all the awesome students at ASU, so on the weekends I like to meet different people and do different things every time," said Leigh-Lane Edwards.

Rupp. The weekends were often used to catch up on chores that were difficult to complete during the week. "The only chance I get to do laundry is when I scrounge up enough quarters to put in the expensive campus machines that cost $3 a load," student Megan Sumrall said.

Parkway Picnic • Eating Wendy's for lunch out on the parkway are Cassandra Christen, Hope Doe, and Jesse Watson. Trips to the parkway were often taken when Boone had a beautiful day and students did not have class to attend. "I knew that I loved the mountains, but I didn't know why until I found myself here," Jesse said.

Spending Money • Shopping for Clinique products in Belk is Michele Spainhour. Students visited the Boone Mall to pick up needed and some not needed items. "Weekends are a good time for me to shop for spring break," said Michele.

stylin' and profilin' Trends

Vera Bradley was a new student at ASU. One could find her hanging on the shoulders and backs of many ladies across campus. Vera Bradley has designed many different bags from small cosmetic bags to luggage. The prices ranged from $15-$100. The handbags had many different designs and colors, but were all made with quilted print fabric. Many ladies enjoyed these bags because, while yes they were expensive, they were very strong, durable and could hold up through anything. "They are great to carry books around in and can represent parts of your personality," said Elisabeth Heiser, who sported a light blue flower print bag.

Also, making a well-known appearance around campus on student's feet were Birkenstocks. These shoes came in all different styles. There were black ones, brown ones, red ones, and even plaid ones. The company makes several winter styles that feature closed toes, but they also make many different sandals for warmer weather. Regardless, all of the shoes feature a cork bottom for support and comfort. "They are the best shoes next to New Balance," said Eric Huskey.

Three more trends seen widely around campus were trucker hats, dreads and cell phones. The hats were baseball caps with foam fronts and mesh backs. They came in all different colors and could be personalized to say anything that students requested. Dreads could be easily found almost anywhere on campus. Cell phones were in abundance, as they were a main source of communication for many students.

One could look almost anywhere on campus and find one, if not all five, of these stylish trends.

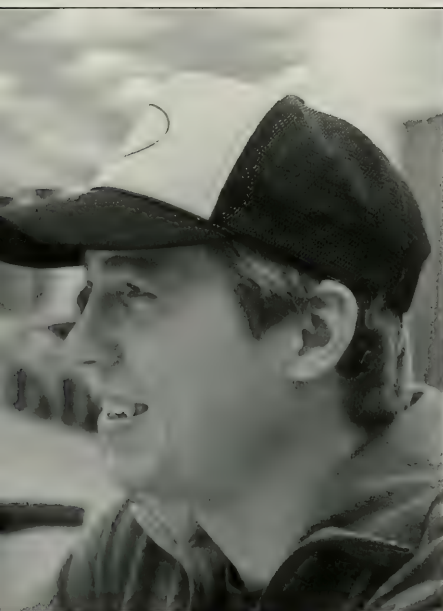

Dinner Time • Wearing Birkenstocks and buying food from Cascades is Abby Weber. "They're comfortable. They're fast and easy, and you don't really have to find anything to go with them," said Abby.

Quiz Me • Studying with a fellow student in the Student Union is Ellie Abernethy who carried two Vera Bradley bags. "I have had mine since my freshman year and they still look like new," said Ellie.

Hangin' Out • In Belk Library Ben Early works on an integrated communications project. Ben was wearing an LSU Cycling Team trucker hat that he had made just a few weeks earlier. Ben's trucker hat made him feel as if he was "heading out to the open road."

front porch looking in Lonestar

Throughout the year, Appalachian Popular Programming Society brought a plethora of bands for the student body and the town of Boone to enjoy. A.P.P.S was a university funded student run organization here on campus.

The country band Lonestar came to campus on February 6th. They played in Farthing Auditorium, which was filled to the rim with fans. Their tour was called "Front Porch Looking In," named after one of their most popular songs. Lonestar played mostly in small venues like colleges and small arenas. The stage was decorated to look like the front of a house with a front porch where the backup performers sat. Lonestar themselves actually performed on the stage area in front of the porch. They played their most well-known songs along with a few new ones that were to be released in the coming weeks.

Lonestar tried to get the audience involved and by bringing up a student who clogged along with one of their songs. They also brought a little girl on stage and sang a sweet song to her. Each participant got an autographed copy of Lonestar's Greatest Hits album.

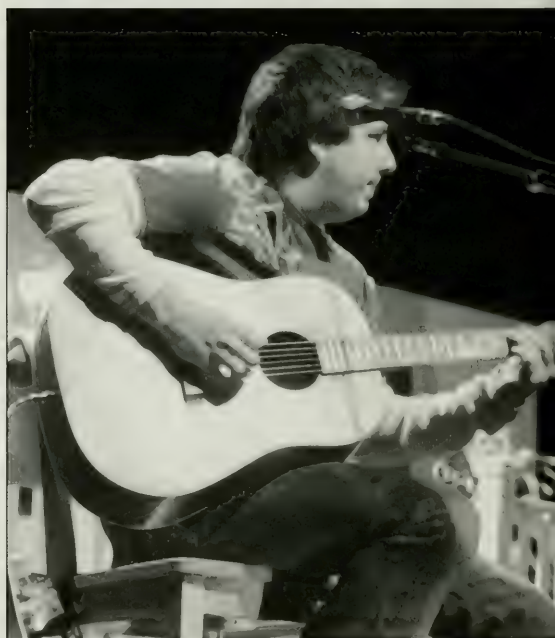

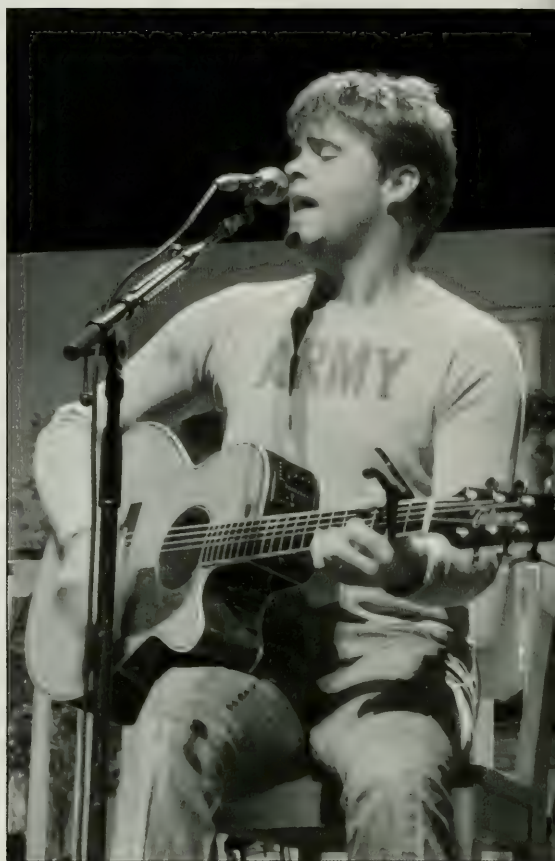

"I really enjoyed the Lonestar concert because they played all their greatest hits and there wasn't a bad seat in the house. They were down to earth and made everyone feel at home, like they were really on Lonestar's 'front porch lookin' in,'" said Steven Pennell.

Front porch • The stage is decorated like the front of a house. The title of the tour was "Front Porch Looking In," so the stage setup fit well with the theme. The four members of Lonestar sat in front, while their back-up musicians sat on the porch.

Home sweet Texas • Providing back-up vocals and guitar is Michael Britt. The whole band grew up in Texas, and got their name from the Texas slogan "The Lonestar State."

Sing his heart out • Singing a harmony and playing his guitar is Lonestar lead singer Richie McDonald. Richie wrote many songs for Lonestar, including their popular hit "I'm Already There."

Playing and singing • Tickling the ivories is Dean Sams. Sams played the piano along with providing back-up vocals. He started Lonestar back in the early 1990s and the rest is history.

The Revolution Begins • Lead singer Marc Roberge performs at the February 19 concert. "O.A.R. plays a wide range of music. They are basically a mix of ska and pop. Their sound is mostly contemporary," said Tommy Poulos.

Of a Revolution, or O.A.R., performed at the Holmes Convocation Center on February 19.

From Rockville, Maryland, O.A.R. had already released four albums off of their small record label.

Most of O.A.R.'s fan base was under age 25, so coming to ASU was the perfect venue for them. They toured with artist John Mayer last year and have snowballed into an even bigger group than they were then thanks to their fans.

They played all college arenas on their tour this year and sold out more than one show.

New Revolution • Saxophone player, Jerry DePizzo plays his part out on the sax. The band became popular when their friends started taping their concerts and posting them on the internet.

Revolution Continues • The backup guitarist for O.A.R. plays for the crowd. "The O.A.R. concert was a lot of fun because of the different types of music that they play, which really gets the crowd excited," said Brooke Wathern.

Battle of the Bands

The annual Battle of the Bands competition took place in the Whitewater in Plemmons Student Union on February 25.

Competing bands were announced on February 9th. Invisible, Where the Sidewalk Ends, The Dandelions, Rustic, and Last Stretch, were chosen to compete for the title of best band. These bands were chosen from a group of about 25 that auditioned for the competition. At least one of the band members had to be an Appalachian student to be eligible to compete.

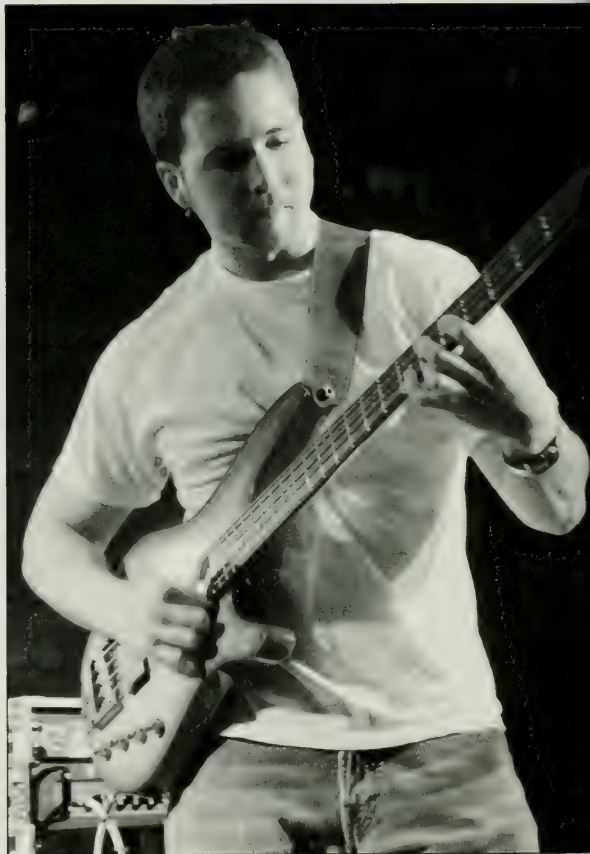

In the end the winners were the Dandelions. They performed that evening with two members missing, including the lead singer. They had a borrowed drum set and a broke guitar string. Second place went to The Last Stretch and third to Where the Side Walk Ends.

Where the Sidewalk Ends • A member of Where the Sidewalk Ends plays the piano at the competition.

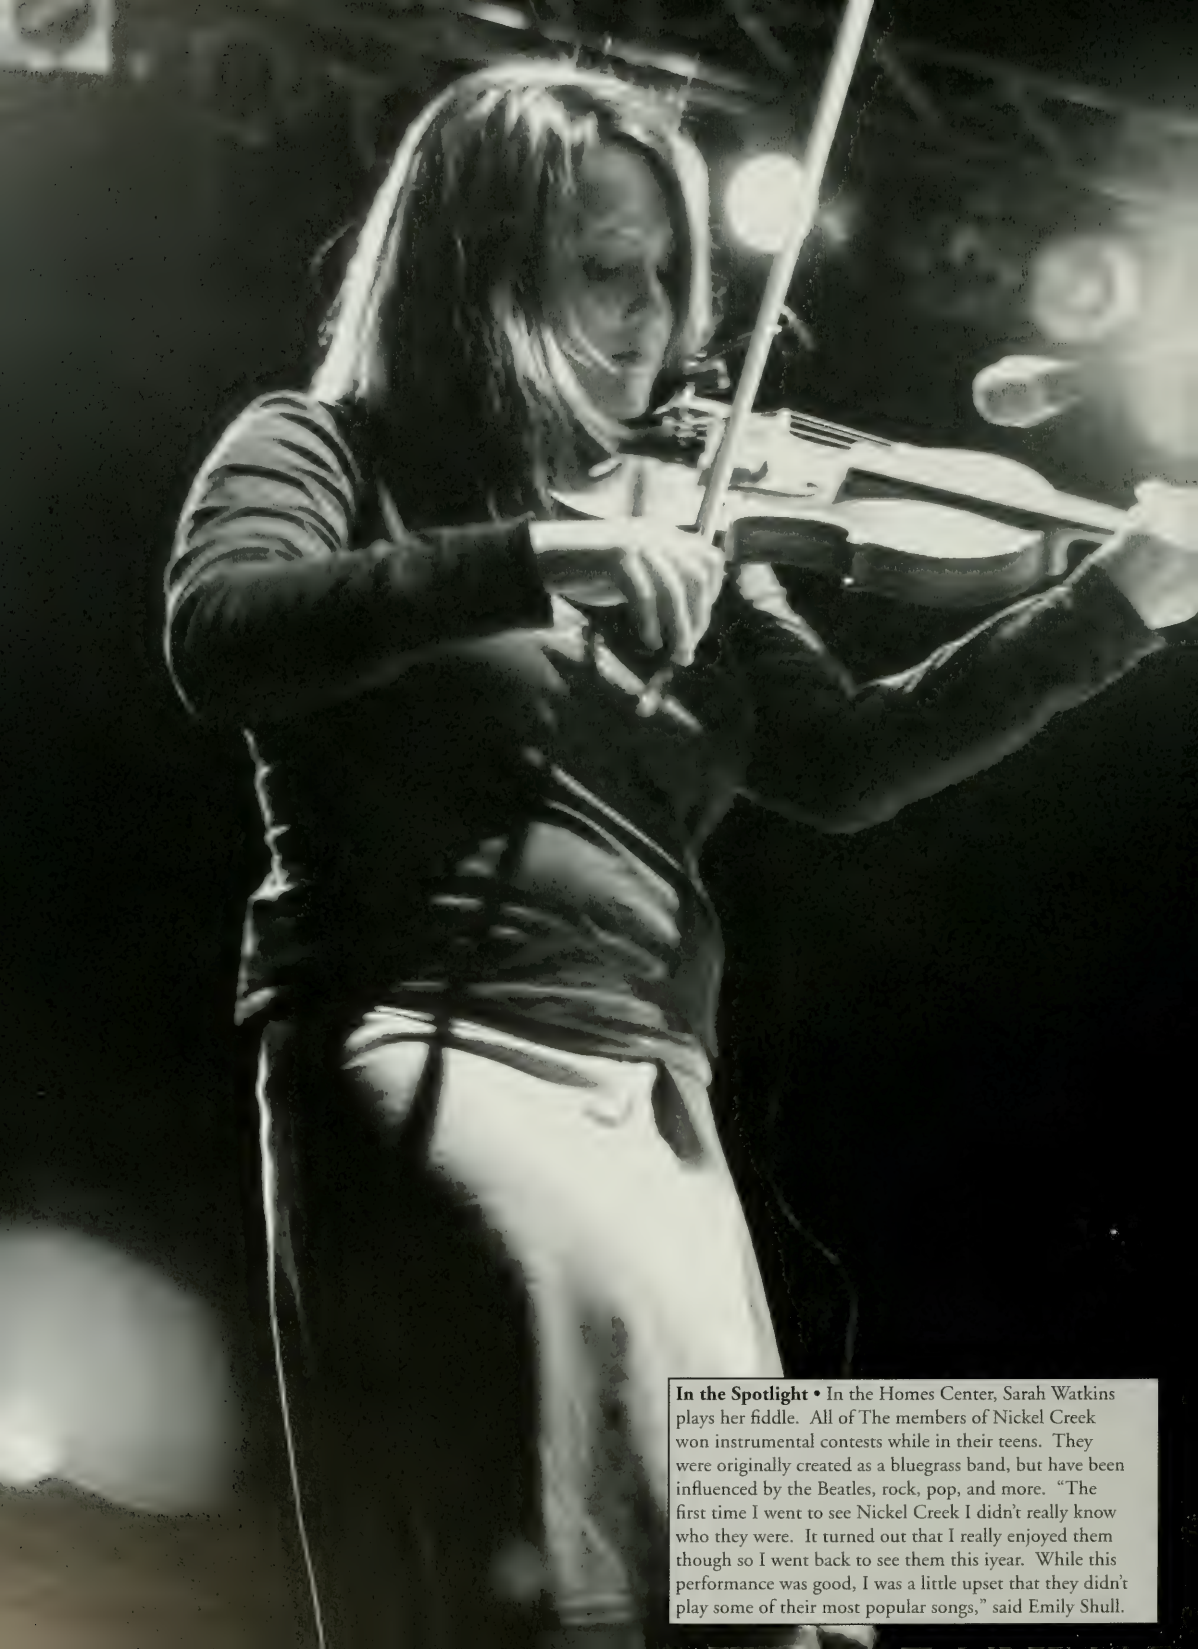

Last Stretch • The drummer for Last Stretch bangs his heart out on his drums. Getting the crowd riled up was an important part of winning the competition.

Last Stretch • The bassist, Brad Turner, for Last Stretch concentrates on his notes during the performance. "We had a great time playing. Winning or losing wasn't relevant; we just love to play live for our fans," Brad said.

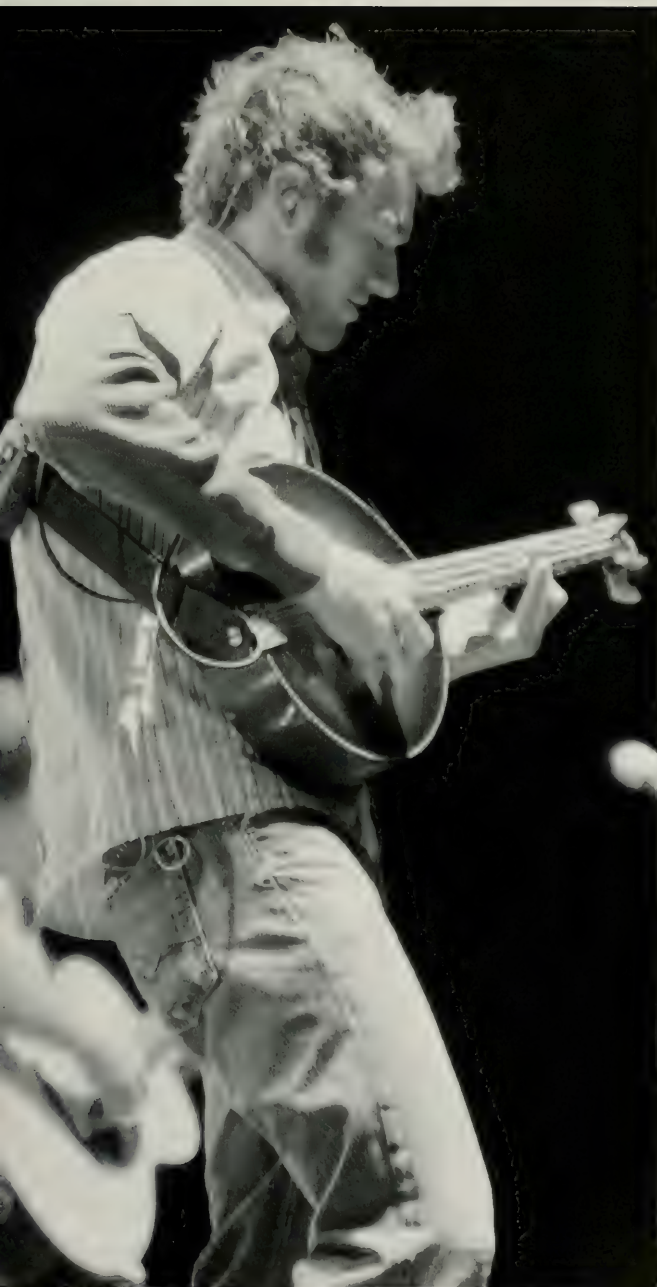

Last Stretch • Headbanging with his guitar is a guitarist for Last Stretch. Getting into the music was essential for crowd excitement.

In the Spotlight • In the Homes Center, Sarah Watkins plays her fiddle. All of The members of Nickel Creek won instrumental contests while in their teens. They were originally created as a bluegrass band, but have been influenced by the Beatles, rock, pop, and more. "The first time I went to see Nickel Creek I didn't really know who they were. It turned out that I really enjoyed them though so I went back to see them this iyear. While this performance was good, I was a little upset that they didn't play some of their most popular songs," said Emily Shull.

Mandolin Player • Playing the mandolin is Chris Thile. Nickel Creek met and became a band when their mothers took them to hear a weekly bluegrass show in southern California when they were young.

Nickel Creek performed at the George M. Holmes Convocation Center on March 25th. In addition to playing a few old favorites, they intrigued the audience with a couple of new songs that have not yet been put on an album.

They came back on stage for one encore, during which they unplugged all their instruments, turned off their microphones and did a totally acoustic performance. They asked everyone in the audience to get as close as they could so they could be heard. The floor of the Convocation Center was packed with fans as they crowded around trying to hear. The whole place was completely silent, so they could even be heard in the furthest rows.

Jolene, Jolene • Mindy Smith opens for Nickel Creek. Among the songs she sang was "Jolene," a popular remake of Dolly Parton's original.

Drum Banging • Playing the drums in the amphitheater is the Steely Pan Band. The Steely Pan Band consists of 19 performers and 38 steel drums. The band plays an array of music from classical, to traditional mountain music, to rock and roll.

Diversity Celebration

The third annual Diversity Celebration took place in Plemmons Student Union. The purpose of the diversity celebration was to “celebrate the diversity that makes up our community.” Along with performances by student groups such as the ASU Gospel Choir, many other groups from around the Appalachian area came to participate. Sororities, fraternities, Appalachian Campus Ministries Association, ASU Sweethearts, The Women’s Center and various clubs all participated in the celebration, as well as non-ASU groups such as Boone African Dance Group, Diana and the Vintage Boys, and Steely Pan Band. Attendees could enjoy a folktale, a native dance, workshops on how to handle racial slurs, spoken poetry, a salsa dance class, and much more. Food was provided for everyone who attended. Crafts were also set up on tables for people to purchase.

Learning the Moves • In Price Lake Room of Plemmons student union, Pricilla Meek along with local community members participated in dance workshop. The workshop was part of the diversity celebration.

Beautifully Brown • Catching some rays are Taylor Harmon and Jenny Bokeno. When the weather finally turned warm and the sun shone, many students took the opportunity to lay out and avoid the tanning bed.

Lazy Dogs • A couple of dogs are relaxing on the sidewalk. Some students tied their dogs to trees and benches while they went to class. Passersby were seen stopping in the middle of the walkway to give the dogs some attention.

Pretty Day • Enjoying a nice April day by hitting a golf ball around is Josh Dixon. "The unpredictability of Boone weather can be annoying at times. Things just run more smoothly when the sun's shining," said Josh.

John Bethune

Make Room • The new library starts taking shape. An entire parking lot was taken out in order to build a new, larger library to meet the needs of ASU's growing population. "I think the construction is good for Appalachian. It's just a shame that I won't be around to enjoy the finished product," said Lisa Cook.

Dig In • Construction workers move dirt to start building on to the post office. Many students went by the post office to get around campus, but when the construction began on the post office they had to take an even longer route. "I am sick of having to go through the post office to get to the book store," said Joanne Rasmussen.

John Bethune

There were many sounds of construction common while walking around campus over the past few years as Appalachian was in the process of receiving a face lift. Multiple construction projects were taking place around the campus each with its own set of chain link fences and loud machinery.

Two of the biggest projects were the construction of a new library and a new bookstore. The opening of the bookstore was delayed for a few months due to weather. Work on the new library began in the fall of 2003 and within months gave a drastic change to the scope of the campus.

Renovations of dorms began in the fall of 2002 with Doughton Residence Hall on the east side of campus. Students living in the dorms in that area were unpleasantly awakened on many mornings by loud machinery.

Due to the numerous projects around campus, students had to take alternate routes to class. Students began to realize that construction would be a part of everyday life on ASU's campus. "The construction can be a pain at times, but I think in the future the campus will be even more beautiful," said Maggie Carey.

Campus Construction

Looking Good • One of the big construction projects on campus is the new library. Construction started in fall of 2003 and by spring of 2004 was already under roof. "I do not mind the construction around campus because when I see it, all I see is that it is going to make the campus look even better than before," said Johnny Lail.

Break Time • Workers take a lunch break after a morning of hard work on the new bookstore. The opening of the new bookstore was nowhere near its originally scheduled date. "Students usually see construction as something that delays their walking time to class, but I see construction as a positive. We're making the university better for future students," said Michael Trivette.

Scared of Heights? • Worker stops for a break on a ladder. Workers had to be extra careful not to drop their equipment when up high so as not to injure people walking below. "I don't mind the construction, except for when beams start hitting students," said Desiree Ashwood.

Fill It In • Workers fill in a sink hole in front of Coffey Street Apartments. The sink hole nearly swallowed ASU student Billy Morris' car on December 19th.

Line it up • A worker surveys the structure of the new bookstore. Students often complained about the construction even though Appalachian was in great need of a larger bookstore. "People should stop complaining about construction. They are going to keep doing it no matter what," said Chelsi Zash.

Taking Space • Construction work takes up half of the mall area. Students had to go out of their way to dodge some construction to get to their classes. "I look forward to the end of construction on campus. No more detours or diesel fumes in the wee hours of the morning. Until it's done, I'm gonna keep my eyes peeled for flying 2x4's," said Alex Cacciola.

Tunnels

Rivers Street runs right through the middle of ASU's campus, requiring some students to cross the street multiple times a day. Two tunnels run under Rivers Street, making it easier for students to get from one side of the campus to the other, as well as making it much safer. However, some concerns were brought up regarding safety at night. Crime usually took place in dark areas and the tunnels were not very well lit at night, due to repeated painting of the lights inside the tunnels.

Students and organizations enjoyed decorating the tunnels with various announcements for a wide variety of events. Everything from upcoming concerts to parties to wishing friends happy birthday or simply displaying creative artwork was painted in the tunnels. The tunnels definitely allowed students to express themselves. As well as helping cut down on graffiti around campus. "It allows a place where people can do a typically illegal act in an area that makes it legal," said Dave Sapp.

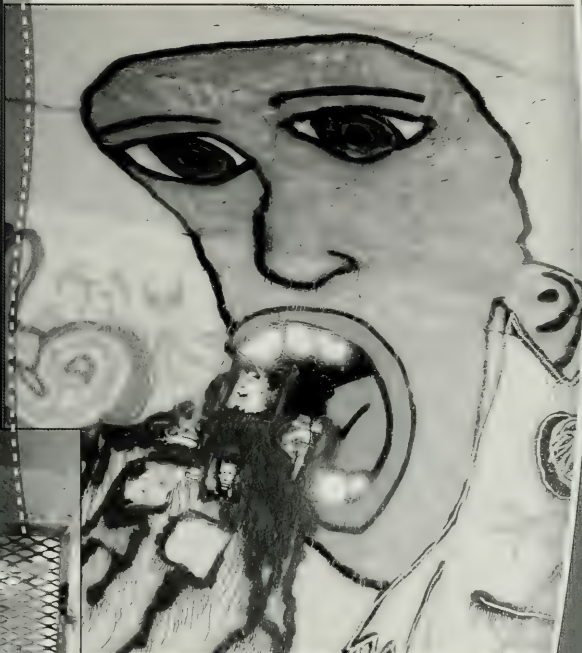

The tunnels allowed students to freely express themselves in an appropriate way. "I think it's a great way for students to be able to enjoy their freedom of speech," said Phong Yang. The policy for painting in the tunnels was that it was to be kept to the interior walls and ceiling only. Painting outside the tunnels, the steps, lights, handrails, floors, and exterior walls was considered a violation against state law.

Spraying Away • Jon Freeman helps paint the tunnel with the radio station. The radio station was promoting a concert. "I think the tunnels are great, except when they flood. They are a great tool and help promote upcoming events at the radio station," said Jon.

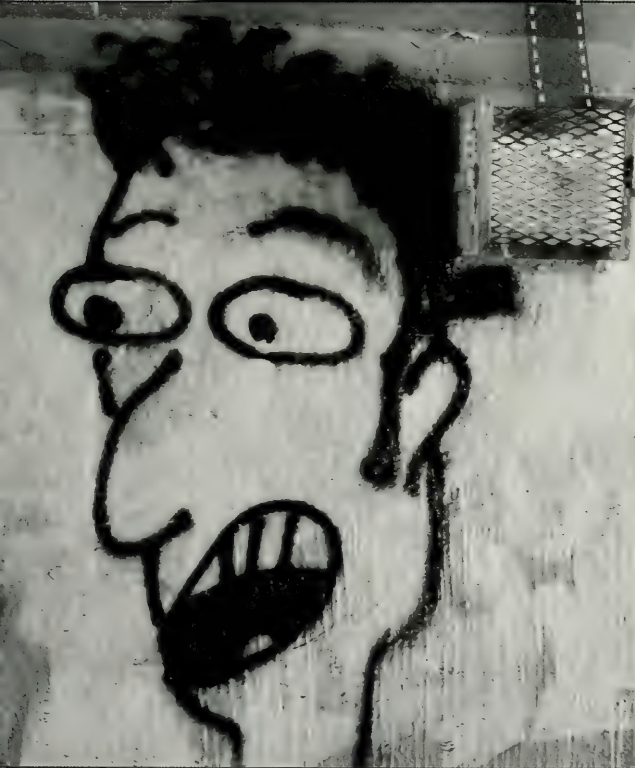

Get Creative • Students show their creativity through their artwork on the tunnel walls. Some students were able to stretch their imaginations onto the ceilings. "I really like it when there is artwork in the tunnels, not graffiti, but something that catches your eye," said Erin Brandt.

Cartoon Face • Students show off their artistic abilities by painting in the tunnels. The wall and ceiling in the tunnels are fair game for anyone to paint on. "The paintings and graffiti are cool on the walls, but I do not like the vulgarity that sometimes put up," said Mandy Gerdts.

You're Invited • Painting a message in the tunnel for the radio station is Stuart McLean. The tunnels were a great way for campus organizations to advertise upcoming events. "Painting the tunnels is an excellent opportunity to interact with the people in an organization you are involved in," said Stuart.

Spring Break

As March rolled around, it wasn't quite spring. However, students were overjoyed at the chance for their week long spring break. At that point in the spring semester, many students had just finished studying for mid-term exams and projects.

There were many opportunities for spring break trips offered by campus organizations. The ACT office offered service programs to Orlando and Eustis, FL, Philadelphia, PA, Charleston, SC, Washington, DC, Marietta, GA, Radford, VA, and New Mexico. Outdoor Programs offered a Sea Kayaking Expedition to the Florida Everglades and a Backpacking on the Appalachian Trail trip. Students also found trips with individual clubs and organizations they were involved in.

Other students often took it upon themselves to organize their own trips with a small or large group of friends.

There were many internet sites that offered packages to college students at inexpensive prices to places such as Bahamas, Caribbean, Jamaica, etc. Students also took road trips to various places across the US. Some just spent their time relaxing and visiting with family and friends. "The most exciting part was seeing my friends from high school that I have not seen in a while," said Tracy Vernon.

Overall, spring break was welcomed by all as it was a time to relieve stress and get away from school work. Many students came back red and blistered from the beaches they fled to in order to get away from Boone's cold weather.

Hunger and Homelessness • Working in DC Central Kitchen are members of the ASB trip to Washington. The kitchen provides 4,000 meals a day to homeless shelters, soup kitchens, etc. "We were cutting up that day's menu to be added to the giant mixture of chili or soup," said Natalie Hawely.

Cold & Snowy • Visiting Toronto, Canada are graduate students Adam Bennett and Dennis Jackson. "We visited the Canadian National tower (the largest free-standing structure in the world), Niagara Falls, and Yonge Street (the longest street in the world)," said Adam.

Wheel Thursday • Students in Washington DC, with the B trip. They were meeting John Edwards in this picture. We shook each of our hands and thanked us for what we were doing," said Caitlin Keeton.

New Mexico • Megan Steinweg, Jessica Dito, Courtney Varnum, Somer Privette, and Sara Angel are inside a cave on the Alternative Spring Break trip to Gila National Forest. Basic project activities included digging out rocks and stumps, cutting trees, and building rock retaining walls.

Alternative Spring Break • Students in Gila National Forest in New Mexico. They worked with the National Forest Service on the construction of a new trail. The worst part of the trip was "the pit toilet in camp. One toilet for 25 people - not pretty," said Katie Thomson.

Downtown Miami • Pictured are palm trees in Miami, Fl. The Lutheran Students of Appalachian took a mission trip to Miami and Key West working with the DOOR Organization. "It was a valuable learning experience and made me realize how much we take for granted," said Chris Sawyer.

Flip Side • Attempting a 360 is Chris Arnold. He and Kyle Guenther visited Steamboat Springs, Colorado where the snow was waist deep. "I only made it half way around and ended up doing back flips down the hill," said Chris.

Snow Jump • Also in Steamboat Springs is Kyle Guenther taking a jump off a rock. Some students enjoyed going to places with more snow than Boone had to offer. "The worst part of the trip followed with over an hour of unexpected hiking in waist deep snow to get back to the ski resort. Looking back, I can't say we regret it," said Chris Arnold.

Myrtle Beach • Ashley Simpson, Alicia Graham, Jenny Smith, Melanie Davis, Kasey Metcalf, and Katie McDevitt are all smiles while visiting Broadway at the Beach. The ladies enjoyed the variety of shops, places to eat, and activities available at this outdoor shopping mall. "The most exciting part of the trip was the Mardi Gras party at Broadway at the Beach. Spring Break 2004 is a time we will never forget with friends we will never forget!" said Alicia.

Beverly Hills • Pictured is Rodeo Drive in California. Christopher Knoll visited the western coast in order to see family and get a tan at the beach. "The worst part of the trip was flying out there and having to deal with plane delays and cancellations," said Chris.

Clear Blue Water • Jarrett Horne is visiting Cancun for Spring Break. He and friends from highschool stayed 3 nights. "The best part of the trip was the last night when we went to a club called The City. MTV was there that night and Method Man performed on stage. We saw Steve O, Trishelle from Real World and Katie from Road Rules," said Jarrett.

students from all over Why ASU?

Appalachian's beautiful campus and great location attracted students from all over the world. However, eighty-seven percent of the students were from North Carolina. Most of whom were from Mecklenburg, Watauga, Wake, Guildford, and Forsyth counties. Ninety-eight out of one hundred counties in North Carolina were represented at ASU. Appalachian brought in students from forty-one out of fifty states. The majority of states students came from were Georgia, Virginia, South Carolina, Florida, and Tennessee.

Students chose ASU for many different reasons. Some wanted to be close to family members, while others wanted to be further away. Long distances helped some students cherish the time they spent with family and friends while home on breaks. Attending school far from home prevented students from going to school with high school buddies, enabling them to make many new friends. "None of my friends from high school came here, so I met a ton of new people. Plus, because it is 5 hours away from Atlanta, when I go home I really cherish the time with my friends and family and they make a big deal about me when I'm visiting," said Ashley Freeman.

Some students chose ASU for their major. Appalachian is well known for many different areas of study. Having been originally established as a teaching school, many students chose ASU for its teaching program.

From a Distance • Looking down on ASU's campus from Howard's Knob. Howard's Knob was a popular place for students to hang out when the weather was nice. "After looking into App I really fell in love with the school. It was in the mountains and was the polar opposite of Georgia State. They had my major and it was a great place to study it because of the wonderful access to the outdoors," said Judy Thomasson.

From the Philippines • "It's a middle sized school. It just seemed and felt right," said Chris Gray in response to the question Why Did You Choose ASU?

From Marietta, GA • "I fell in love with ASU as I drove through the mountains to go to the freshman open house. I knew I wanted to go here before I had even seen the school," said Ashley Freeman.

All Around • Many different countries are represented. Students from all over the world came to Appalachian for many different reasons.

From Peachtree City, GA • "Boone makes you feel at home with all of the people and the community supporting the university," said Judy Thomasson.

From Uganda • "In Uganda, the temperatures are between 75-85 and we have only two seasons, the rainy season and the dry season. It is green all year round," said William Mubanda.

Dorm Style • Hoey Residence Hall offers traditional dorm style living. Two students share one room with bed, desk, dresser, and closet provided. A hall bathroom is shared with the entire floor. "I like Hoey's location," said Lindsey Buoyer.

Housing Issues

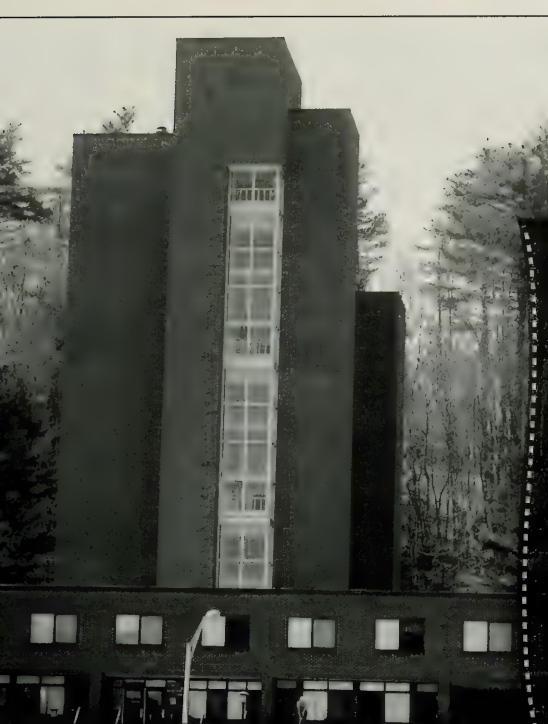

Besides schoolwork, the spring semester was packed with other "house keeping" things to be done. These were things such as getting financial aide, parking permits, registration, and housing figured out.

Housing was a big issue on campus. ASU only allowed 700 juniors and seniors combined to live on campus. Students who held these classifications had to go through a lottery in order to get placed in one of the three dorms offered to juniors and seniors. If a student did not receive their position on campus, then they had to search for an apartment, house, or some other living arrangement. "A lot of people prefer off-campus but on campus it's easier to get together and do stuff because you're closer together. You get to know people better on your hall than you do in an apartment complex just because you're forced to share space and you have to co-operate with each other," said Alana Bastic.

Sophomores had the best end of the deal because they could live in any of the dorms other than the ones for upperclassmen and they could bring in a freshman, junior, or senior as their roommate if they chose. Sophomores had to go pick their choice of housing based on the last digit of their social security number. If one had the last day to go, then they did not have the best choice as opposed to those who were able to go first. Students would camp out outside of the John E. Thomas building where they had to be at 7:30 in the morning in order to get their choice of rooms.

Of course, Freshman were guaranteed a place on campus, but they most definitely got the raw end of the deal because all of the upperclassmen had already taken the nicer dorms.

Many students were disappointed because they were not able to get their preferred dorm. In the end, all students found some place to live, but not without hard searching and stressing over whether or not their choice would be available at a cost that would be feasible.

Suite Style • Winkler gives students an apartment style home on campus. There are 4 bedrooms, 2 bathrooms, a kitchen and a living room for 4 people. "Having my own bedroom and only sharing the bathroom with one other girl is what I like most about Winkler," said Cassie Miller.

Down 105 • University Highlands offers an all inclusive apartment available solely to Appalachian Students. There are 4 bedrooms, 2 bathrooms, a kitchen, living room, and washer and dryer. "Highlands is a good package for kids that never have lived by themselves," Jess Hines said.

Down 421 • Mountaineer Village offers an all-inclusive apartment. There are 3 bedrooms each with its own bathroom, a kitchen, living room and washer and dryer. It is located about 10 minutes from campus. "I really like living in an area that I know is all students," said Lyndsay Cox.

Dude, where's my car?!

Parking Troubles

Sara Hilde

Parking was a big problem on ASU's campus. With only 5700 parking spaces on campus for over 14,000 students along with all the faculty and staff, it could be quite difficult to find a place to park. There was additional parking at State Farm and Horn in the West, but it was located off campus and not easily accessible by walking. Appalachian did provide transportation to and from these lots, but the hours were limited. Many students would get up early in the morning to move their cars before 7:00 am, but the AppalCart did not pick up immediately after 7:00 am. "If we cannot park after 7:00 am, then there should be an AppalCart ride directly after 7:00 am from State Farm," said Lorraine Little.

Students had designated parking areas on weekdays. Most of the faculty/staff lots were open to anyone on weekends and between 5:00 PM and 7:00 AM- during the week. Parking was even more limited due to construction taking over areas of campus.

On the weekends, when students were leaving to go out of town or returning from out of town, traffic around the dorms was very congested. Students who were unable to find a parking space created their own place in the grass, on the sidewalk, or in no parking zones. This caused many to end up with tickets, but did not stop them from parking illegally.

Some students returned to their cars only to find they weren't there. During the week, when cars were parked in faculty/staff lots, they were towed at the owners expense.

Blocking Dumpsters • Students create their own spaces in Hoey's parking lot. A sign specifically stated not to block the path to the dumpsters. Taylor Jones said, "Parking is a major issue for the majority of students due to the exorbitant prices of parking permits, the limited number of 20-minute parking spaces, and as was seen this past winter, the failure of the physical plant staff to scrape snow from several parking lots."

icked Lot • Students who wanted to have their cars readily available on the weekends could move them to Stadium Lot if they could find one of the often rare free spaces. "The parking is really bad and hard to deal with, but what can the school do? They only have a little bit of space and they are doing the best they can with it," said George Hining.

No Room • White Hall's parking lot is a popular lot to park in on the weekends. Students who could not find a place to park simply parked on the sidewalk instead of having to walk further to their dorms. "They could stop letting freshmen have parking spaces," said Jeff Kilpatrick when asked what could be done to help the parking situation on campus.

Rachel Williams

No Parking Zone • Students park as close to their dorms as possible, even if they are not in an actual parking space. Many students ignored the no parking signs. "There are so little spaces available for students, yet illegal parking is strictly enforced," said Lisa Nestor.

Don't Tow Me! • Students often stop along the curb when picking up friends. Sometimes students left their vehicles parked at the curb to run inside for a few minutes and prayed that they wouldn't be towed. "Parking is atrocious," said Anna Pittman.

Off-Campus Jobs

One thing every college student needed was money. A typical college student had a full load of going to class, doing homework, and working for a little extra cash. There were plenty of places for students to work around the tourist city of Boone, NC. "The pay is better off campus and since I live off campus it is easier for commuting purposes," said Adam Kanipe who worked as a meat wrapper for Lowe's Foods.

There were approximately 200 restaurants in Boone and the surrounding area for students to work for. There were also plenty of retail stores to choose from. The shops on King Street housed positions for many, as well as the Tanger Outlet Center in Blowing Rock, and of course the famous Walmart, every college student's favorite place to shop.

Of course there were many positions available at the ski slopes during the winter season. There were also places such as theaters, bowling alleys, gas stations, and carwashes. Some students found working off campus to be better than working on campus. "It is easier to get a lot of hours in at off campus jobs. There are always so many students trying to get more work when on campus," said Heather Nemetz.

Students should not have had much trouble in finding a job if they really needed it. Working off campus provided a break from being on campus all day long. Students who worked off campus were able to meet a lot of people within the Boone community and from surrounding areas because of tourists.

Check This Out! • Working at the Green Park Inn in Blowing Rock is Holly Rodwell. The Inn was 122 years old and still functioning. "It's nice to suggest something to a guest and if they take you up on it, you get their feedback," said Holly.

Take it Off • Chris Strobe is getting a shirt off a mannequin for a shopper to try on. "You're on campus every day, you don't want to be there when you don't have to," said Chris.

Thank You • Getting a receipt for a shopper in Hallmark is Amanda Creed. Working off campus was considered a hassle for some students because of transportation issues. "I like working with people," said Amanda.

Fighting for our country

Tribute to Student Soldiers

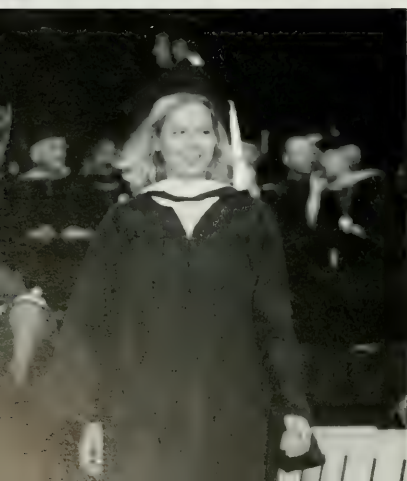

Instead of spending my senior year hanging out with friends, studying, and searching for a job, I was called to active duty to provide base security in the Washington D.C. area. It was a long year of watching people and traffic, but the year of work allowed me to save up some money before graduating this May, now one year later than I previously thought," said Eric Walters.

Appalachian had many students who were involved in the military while enrolled in the university. When the war with Iraq began many students had to cut out of their semesters early because they became active with their military duties. As of the spring semester of 2004 there were approximately 18 students active in the military.

Family and friends of these individuals were concerned daily for their safety as they served diligently for their country. We would like to take this opportunity to honor and give thanks to those students who have and still are working hard for this country.

"Most of the work we did while I was there [Kuwait] was the loading and unloading of rolling stock (humvees, trucks, anything with wheels) for transportation back to the states. We also were moving containers of ammunition for transportation back stateside. My unit is still in Kuwait, while I have returned home. On 26 July 2003, I fell down a flight of stairs on a naval vessel that my platoon was helping to load. I was medvac to Germany three days later, and then stateside on 4 August to Walter Reed where I had knee reconstruction surgery on 19 August. I returned home on 29 November," said
GT. Daniel Inman.

Graduation 2004

Graduation is a long process that begins the first day of college as a freshman. Not only must students decide on what college to attend, they must also choose what area of study they want to make their career. The semester before they graduate, seniors must meet with their advisor to check and make sure they have taken all of the right classes and are on track for the next graduation ceremony. Graduation fees must be paid, forms must be filled out, and cap and gowns must be purchased at the bookstore, all for one evening of glory. But all of the aforementioned items are worth it because in the end, the students get to walk across the stage in front of their families and friends, whom are all there to proudly watch.

There were two sets of graduation commencements, one in December and the other in May. There was only one ceremony in December with all of the graduates from all of the colleges graduating at one time. The ceremonies in May were a little more complex. There were two days of graduation with three commencements each day. Each college, arts and sciences, music, education, fine and applied arts, business and the graduate school, all had their own ceremony, which lasted approximately two hours each.

The May ceremony for the Cratis D. Williams Graduate School took place at Holmes Convocation Center. The college had 402 graduates in the May and 160 in the December ceremony.

Soprano, Anne Rominger, enlightened the evening with her rendition of "Alleluia from Exsultate Jubilate" by Mozart; Melany Dodson accompanied her on the piano. The commencement address was given by the President of the Council of Graduate Schools, Dr. Debra Stewart.

This year Biology graduate student Bradley Miller was the very first recipient of Appalachian's Graduate Service Award. Bradley won the award for his exemplary service to the campus and community in the GSAS Endowment Fund.

The May ceremony for The College of Fine and Applied Arts was held at Holmes Convocation Center.

The college had 523 total graduates, with 478 who actually walked in the ceremony. Graduates received degrees of a Bachelor of Arts, Science or Fine Arts.

Communications Major and ASU Student Ambassador, Jennifer Cowan, gave a speech to all of her fellow graduates. Bob Inman, author, playwright, screenwriter and retired Charlotte Media journalist, delivered the commencement speech.

The Military Science department, whom was part of the college but did not have a specific "major," was asked to pay tribute to the students enrolled in the program, as well as those who were presently overseas.

There were three faculty awards given out: Marie Heopfl, Technology Department, received an award for Teaching Excellence, Margaret Yaukey, Art Department, was honored on behalf of her Outstanding Service, and Frank Mohler, from Theatre and Dance, received an award for Outstanding Scholarship.

The Reich College of Education (RCOE) had 312 graduates in the
December. The May ceremony was held at Farthing Auditorium.

Education

The college existed to prepare traditional, as well as non-traditional students, for positions as administrators, counselors, librarians, media and technology specialists and speech and hearing therapists. RCOE housed the only Doctoral Program, in Educational Leadership, that ASU offered at the time.

Lindsay Black, a 2004 graduate, addressed the class with closing remarks. Dr. Charles Duke introduced the media presentation, "Transitions 2004," which presented Dr. Jeffrey Fletcher, the Associate Professor of the Department of Curriculum and Instruction.

At the graduation, the following retired faculty members were recognized for serving many years at Appalachian: Dr. Fred Badders, Mr. James Greene, Dr.
Terry Sack, Dr. Milton Spann, Dr. James Tompkins.
Degrees for the College included Elementary Education, Middle Grades Education, Communications Disorders and Special Education: Learning Disabilities.

The Walker College of Business had a total of 703 graduates, including those of the December ceremony and the August 2004 prospective graduates. Ms. Maria Peninger, the Regional Vice President for Sales Operation for Avon Products, was the keynote speaker. Also speaking were three graduating students, Matthew Gilbert of Accounting, Lisa Pointe of Economics, and Rachel Moore of Management. Dr. Peacock received a medallion for his many years of distinguished service to the Walker College of Business. After Dr. Harvey Durham's resignation as Provost, Dr. Peacock stepped up to serve as the Interim Provost. Graduates earned their degrees in accounting, economics, finance and banking, risk and insurance, health care management, hospitality and tourism management, information systems, international business, management or marketing.

The commencement address was given by Mrs. June Hinckley, a Music and Fine Arts Education Specialist from the Florida Department of Education. Graduates earned Bachelor of Music degrees in Music Education, Music Performance, Music Performance (Composition/Theory), Music Therapy or a Bachelor of Science in Music Industry Studies. Each graduation ceremony was unique because the graduating seniors showcased their talents with a performance. This year the vocal talents of Tammy Griffin and the violin talents of Kristin Rash Miesbauer were featured. The School also recognized Interim Chancellor Harvey for his hard work and dedication to the University.

Including the December 2003, May 2004 and the August 2004 Prospective graduates, the College of Arts and Sciences had 1003 graduates, the largest number of graduates of any college within the University this year. Awards were given out in 16 different departments, with a total of 41 graduates awarded. Dr. Rainer Goetz, the Assistant Dean, introduced Henry McKoy, the African Regional Director of Peach Corps, as the guest speaker. Degrees earned from the College ranged from chemistry, political science, interdisciplinary studies, psychology, community and regional planning, philosophy and religion, computer science, anthropology, biology, sociology and social work, secondary education, criminal justice, mathematics, physics, astronomy, statistics, english, geography to foreign language and literatures. The College had eleven retiring faculty this year.

The graduations took place in Holmes Convocation Center, Hayes Music Building, and Farthing Auditorium.

A tradition for many graduates was to adorn their caps with phrases, sequins, balloons, snowy scenes, or any other personality-telling feature. May graduation this year fell on Mother's Day weekend, and many graduates had "Thanks Mom," or "I love you Mom," on their caps.

At the December graduation ceremonies, Anne Marie Edge decorated her cap with an apple and the letter "A+" informing everyone that she was graduating with a Master's degree in Reading Education. Also at the December graduation, Adrian Rhodes, a Recreation Management major decked out his cap with a snow scene, complete with pine trees, pine cones and a plastic girl skier.

Since the economy had not prevailed with numerous job opportunities, many graduates were wary as to what they were going to do after they graduated. Feelings of apprehension fear and worry mixed with those of joy and elation. Many of the graduates were afraid to enter the realm of the "real world."

Graduation is a time that students get to show everyone that they have succeeded; that they have accomplished their families and their own dreams. After graduation, students either come back to earn more degrees, or leave the campus to make a dramatic entry into the world.

summer's almost here

Exams and Move out

The end of the semester was a stressful time for students at Appalachian. The end of the spring semester was especially stressful. Students had to pack to move out of their dorm rooms and apartments as well as study for exams.

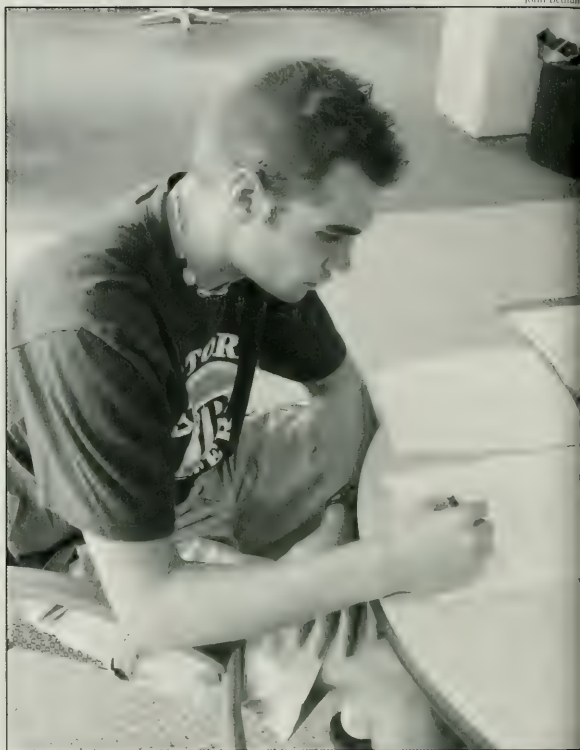

Most students took exam time very seriously. The outcome of a final exam grade could determine whether or not a student passed a class. Some students formed study groups with people from their class while others opted to study alone. Twenty-four hour quiet hours were implemented starting on the last day of regularly scheduled classes for students who chose to study in their rooms. Many students studied in the Student Union or the library. If the weather was nice, students found a place outside to sit and study. "I usually cram last minute, that's why I'm in the library the entire week of exams," said Blake Stiegmann.

Move out was a tiring process. Cars lined the roads outside of the dorms. People parked as close to their dorm as possible to make loading the car easier. For some students, moving out took a couple days. Parents came up to move out refrigerators and other larger items ahead of time, so that students wouldn't have as much to move out at the last minute. Students took move out time as an opportunity to throw a lot of stuff out. The dumpsters behind dorms were overflowing during the last week.

The ACT office sponsored "Don't Throw It Away!" This was a non-profit program to collect items that people didn't want anymore. These items were used at the beginning of the fall semester in the BIG Sale. Proceeds were given to Mountain Alliance and the New River Earth Institute.

Cram Time • Ashley Pudelski studies for her Spanish final.

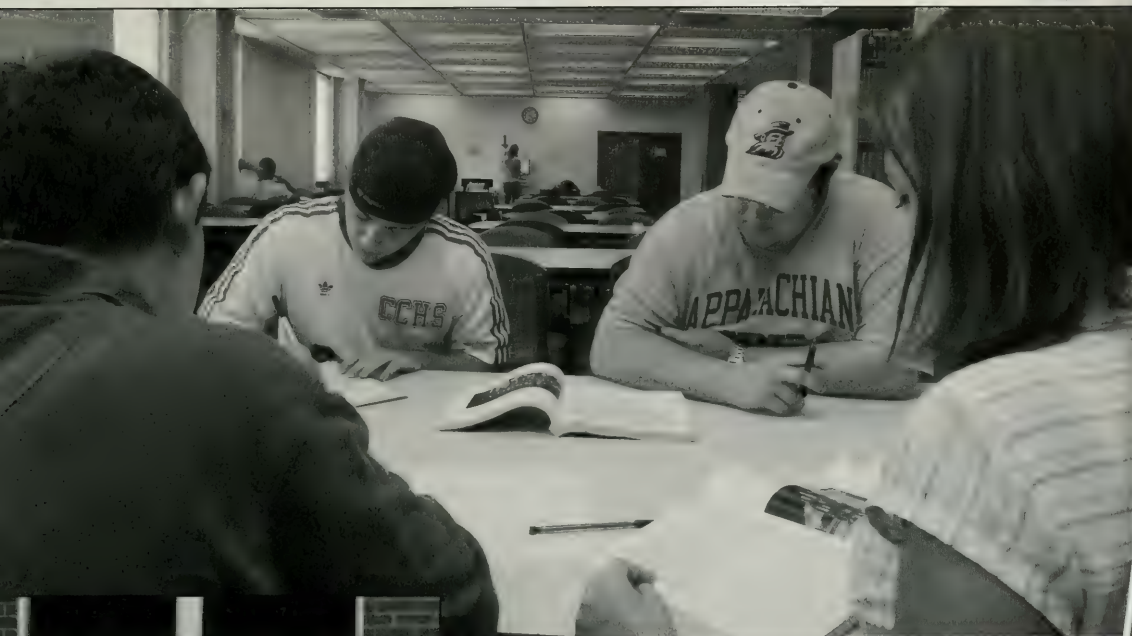

Many students found a place in the Student Union to spend time studying. "Exam time is the only time of year I actually study," said Ashley.

Work Hard • Johnny Groff studies for his Biology exam in Wiseman's Lounge. Students knew that they had to work extra hard during their exams in order to maintain or improve their grades. "Exam time is the one time of year when you just can't slack off on the books," said Johnny.

Group Study • Studying for a theatre exam in the library are Drew Stovell, Adam Staffor, Blake Stiegmman, and Jessica Bennett. Some students found it easier to study with a group than alone. "Exams really test how much you have studied throughout the year," said Drew.

Don't Toss It! • The "Don't Throw It Away!" pile in the lobby of White Residence Hall. Instead of throwing out items that were no longer needed, many students donated to the program that was sponsored by the ACT office. "Moving out is stressful on-campus because residents must pack, study, and say goodbye to friends all at the same time," said Cameron Cary.

Fill 'er up! • Students cram as much into their cars as possible. Students didn't realize how much stuff they had in their rooms until they tried to fit it all in one car. "It takes too many trips and the parking is a pain," said Heather Sanders.

9:30 A.M. • Lez crams for an Abnormal Psychology exam. Students were often found outside their classrooms looking over notes for a little reassurance right before a big exam. "I really enjoy this class," said Lez.

8:00 A.M. • Half-asleep, Lez walks into the shower on the 6th floor of White Hall. A large number of undergraduate students lived on campus in the traditional style dorms and got to experience the joys of community bathrooms. "I like to take showers in the morning at the same time as my roommate Amanda. It gives us time to talk about our day and other important things," said Lez.

12:00 P.M. • Waiting for the teacher to start their Statistics class is Lez and friend/study partner Lisa Fowler. The girls worked hard on a statistics project that only left them stressed out because of computer problems. Stress was a huge factor in just about every college student's life. "I'm not real fond on group projects, but I knew Lisa from one of my other psychology classes and I trusted her," said Lez.

A Day in the Life Undergraduate Student

12:00 P.M. • Time for lunch! Lez grabs lunch in Cascades, which is located in the Student Union. There were a wide variety of places to eat on campus. "The food is O.K. on campus. WRAPS is my favorite place to eat," said Lez.

The life of a college student is very different for all students. Every student has a different major, interests, jobs, and priorities. However, there are a number of things that all college students do have in common. All students eat, drink and sleep. They go to class, even if only on occasion. They all have exams to study for and projects to finish up.

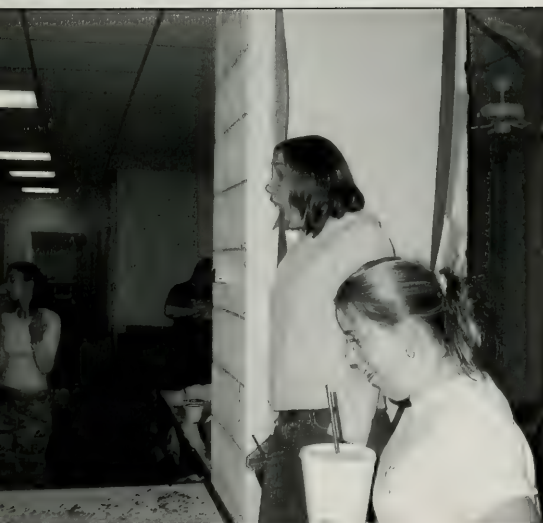

The following is a sneak peek into one undergraduate student's life. Sophomore psychology major Leslie Hall thanked her parents and everyone who helped her get to ASU because she loved it.

Starting from 8 a.m. until dinner Lez was followed around campus, capturing as many "college moments" as possible.

3:00 P.M. • Lez runs into a friend, Erika Farmer, on her way to study in the library. Students often run into friends at various places on campus and stop for a quick chat. Lez enjoyed studying in the library because she was able to accomplish more with less distractions.

8:00 P.M. • Lez watches an RA, whose drink spewed everywhere, at the Salsa End of the Year party hosted by RSA. Lez was the president for White Hall RSA and is proud to say that they got Hall of the Year. "I love RSA!" said Lez.

9:30 A.M. • Working in the OS (Operating Systems) lab is Josh. This was one of the graduate courses that he was enrolled for. "Working in the OS lab can be very unnerving at times," said Josh. He finds the graduate courses to be more demanding, but interesting and one gets to know the professors on a different level than when an undergraduate.

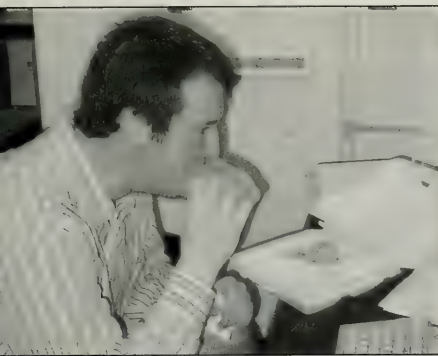

8:00 A.M. • Josh starts his day off with a nice bowl of Total cereal. Many college students have trouble getting this meal in, but Josh feels that it is an important part of the day. "It really helps to get your body going," said Josh.

11:00 A.M. • Josh takes time to work out in Mt. Mitchell. Many college students attempted to work out and had many facilities available to them. Josh worked out six days a week, three of cardio and three of weight training. "The reason I work out is to stay healthy and it helps me unwind," said Josh.

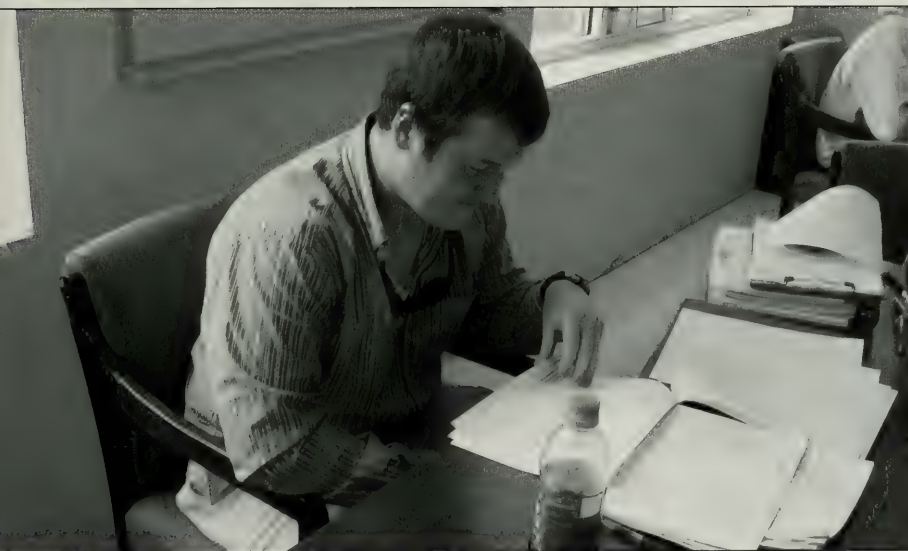

10:00 P.M. • Josh eats lunch from Trivette while at work. It is hard to find time to eat with his busy schedule. Josh worked in the computer labs on campus and felt lucky to leave that job because he met a lot of new people.

College is not only made up of undergraduates. There are plenty of graduate students roaming the campus of ASU.

A graduate student's life is very different from an undergrad. There definitely is not one day that is similar to the next for these students. They continue to take classes just like undergrads, but they also concentrate a lot on their research. They have big group projects that last a semester long, they have thesis papers to get information for, and most graduate students have several jobs to help pay bills.

Josh Rountree was working on a Master's of Science in Computer Science. He likes ASU's atmosphere, the summers, the ever changing face of the campus, and the professors.

5:00 P.M. • Josh studies for his Data Communications and Networking final exams in the CAP building. He prefers studying by himself as opposed to a group. "There is definitely more studying as a grad student; more reading, more projects," said Josh.

6:30 P.M. • Greeting guests at Maple Lodge in Blowing Rock is Josh. He enjoys working off campus because he is able to work over holidays when his on campus job is not available. "I have many roles at Maple Lodge and have done everything from housekeeping to cooking to reservations. I do pretty much anything needed," said Josh.

alcohol awareness

S.P.A.R.C.

During Spring Semester, a new program came to campus, S.P.A.R.C., Study to prevent Alcohol Related Consequences. As a result of a nation wide trend to study the effects of alcohol on college students and their lives' Wake Forest University initiated a study in North Carolina. They selected five universities to act as control schools, where none of the drinking circumstances would be altered only measurements taken. They also selected five universities, which included ASU, to act as experimental schools. Each school hired a program coordinator.

ASU's coordinator is Kendal McDevitt. She has started a plan with a bottom up approach. Her goal was to make changes through students' help. The first step she took was getting her name out around campus by visiting various clubs and organizations as well as working with classes around campus. S.P.A.R.C. also hosted a last day of classes event for students.

The event was held on Sanford Mall, there were speakers informing students about the program, as well as giving testimonials about alcohol related experiences of their own. Surveys were given in exchange for free pizza. There was an Air Walk, Virtual Bar, logo contest, and information booth. Live entertainment for the event was provided by Melissa Reaves.

Walk Straight • Students were given the opportunity to see the impairment of different blood alcohol levels with special goggles. William Mayfield tried to keep his balance while wearing the "drunk glasses." "1.6? I ought to be passed out somewhere," said William.

Fallen Castle • Due to an electrical problem, the castle shaped moon walk on Sanford Mall collapsed with five students inside, however no one was injured. The moon walk was provided free as part of the S.P.A.R.C. events.

Local police, as well as the sheriff's department, Campus police, and the Director of Judicial Affairs were in attendance to answer student's questions.

Setting the Stage

Academics are such an integral part of college life; they set the stage for growth and development. ASU offered around 100 undergraduate degrees and more than 75 graduate majors, making the university a diverse learning environment that prepared students for the opening act in the career of their choice.

for growth and development.

College of Arts and Sciences

Sixteen departments, nine areas of study, nine special programs, more than 80 undergraduate majors, over 60 scholarships, and six student awards all formulated themselves under a single college. This was the College of Arts and Sciences of Appalachian State. Offering the majority of the undergraduate core curriculum courses at the university, the College provided higher education for students and made their futures possible.

Departments of the College of Arts and Sciences incorporated the humanities, mathematical, natural, and social sciences. The College's areas of learning ranged from internet studies to the study of gerontology. Learning opportunities provided by the college were numerous.

The College not only bestowed upon students core curriculum, but also had programs for both undergraduates and graduates with concentration on education. The College of Arts and Sciences offered Honors, Study Abroad, Humanities, and Dual Degree Engineering programs. Some of the College's programs were pre-professional and cooperative degree programs, which prepare students to enter medical or dental schools. The College's mission statement said, "The breadth and depth of learning provided... are necessary for productive citizenship in a free society."

The College's faculty had outstanding teaching skills and was known to have a passion for educating. The College recognized exceptional enthusiasm for educating students with an Academy of Outstanding Teachers. Most senior members were known nationwide in their particular fields.

The College of Arts and Sciences prepared students with education for prosperous and successful careers in the future. "This college is central to the mission of the University and the educational needs to all students at Appalachian," Former Dean, Dr. Donald W. Sink, said.

Teaching to the extreme

Reich College of Education college excels in preparing the teachers of tomorrow today

As soon as one enters any educational building, they can see a portrait hanging on the wall of a person posing for an artist with their hands folded, a hint of well-intended grin on their face. However, the woman in the portrait hanging in the Education building holds a children's book open as if she is reading to her students. In the background, a teacher faces a blackboard where it is written, "Education is the beginning, the root of everything that is good." The College had a mission of producing the best of the best in education excellence.

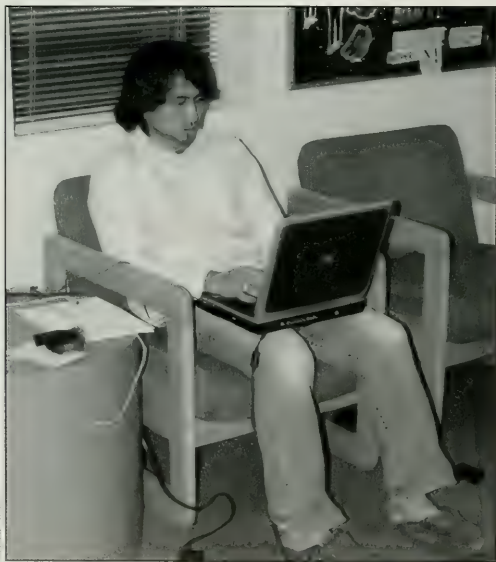

Appalachian's College of Education was the largest teacher education program within the NC system. It housed around 2,000 students, and offered up to 90 courses off-campus. Appalachian was home to the only established site for the Fifth Dimension program in North Carolina and was the lead college for the Rural Teacher Technology Alliance. Undergraduate student, Susan Meadows, feels like she "will be prepared" by the time she graduates.

Scholarships in the College of Education included The Lois and Ed Reich Scholarship and the Junior/Senior Scholarship. Another scholarship offered was the North Carolina Teaching Fellows with 250 students; Appalachian had one of the largest programs in the state. The Teaching Fellows Scholarship Program rewarded students in North Carolina who committed to teach in the state for four years after graduation. Anna Reid, Teaching Fellow recipient, thought "[the program] was really good." Recipients took courses in leadership and understanding the "at-risk" child; they attended seminars and tutoring.

With a combination of knowledgeable professors, assisted programs, and both traditional and non-traditional experiences, Appalachian produced many educators who carried on the tradition of all that is 'good-education.'

Group Study • Students study together in a group for an upcoming exam. Working with others was important for business majors because dealing with professionals involves listening to others opinions.

More Homework • Joe You works on his laptop in the study hall of Raley Hall, cramming to complete an assignment. Laptop computers were convenient when needing to work on the go.

Meeting Minutes • Sharing a laugh or two, members of the Business faculty attend a meeting. Communication between department faculty was crucial to the success of their students and the department.

Sticking to their motto

Walker College of Business

The business leaders of tomorrow are at Appalachian today." That's their motto and they're sticking to it! The Walker College of Business strived to teach their students the responsibilities of leadership roles through abilities dealing with technology and hands-on experiences. The College, credited and qualified by the Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business, engraved basic business principles in students' minds and worked with those principles through real-world experiences. Students within Walker College of Business are destined to be successful leaders of tomorrow's world.

The College prospered from several programs and events. Its International Study Program had 93 students participate in the school year of 2002-2003. The Chronicle of Higher Education recognized Appalachian State for one of the largest involvement in the studying abroad program. The Harlan E. Boyles Distinguished CEO Lecture Series allowed students to interact with executive business officers. Entrepreneur Summit brought entrepreneurs into the classroom to give students hands-on practice and understanding of their work. The Beroth Golf Tournament, held each year by Advisory Council member, Winfield Beroth, raised more than $400,000 in support of the College.

The Business Advisory Council consisted of 24 male and female business leaders who met twice a year. This council advised Walker College of Business's administrators on the needs of the business world. Professionals on the Council included accountants, manufacturers, realtors, bankers, lawyers, consultants, and many more. There were numerous opportunities for students to interact with businessmen and women, again focusing on practical experiences to learn more about the business community.

As John Clancey stated in Looking Beyond Borders, "with changes come opportunity... careers are waiting for those of you who have a keen business sense." Nothing could state the mission of the College of Business more sufficiently. With the education Walker College of Business provided, the students enrolled were sure to be the distinguished business leaders of tomorrow.

The College of Fine and Applied arts was one of seven degree-granting colleges at Appalachian. The college was composed of seven departments that range from Art to Military Science. Dr. J. Mark Estep, Dean of College of Fine and Applied Arts, said about the College, "...a sense of academic unity toward the common goal of providing the finest education is... maintained."

The Department of Art offered a variety of educational opportunities for art students with five majors. In order to be accepted into the Department of Art, a student must pass a portfolio review. The Communication department was accredited as being one of the top comprehensive programs in the NC university system and currently the second largest department on campus, with over 700 majors ranging from Advertising to Public Relations.

The Department of Family and Consumer Sciences offered both graduate and undergraduate courses of study ranging from Child Development to Food and Nutrition. The Department of Health, Leisure, and Exercise Science provided undergraduate degrees in five academic areas including Athletic Training and Recreation Management. The Department of Military Science combined a nationally ranked ROTC program with Appalachian, and upon graduation students could start active duty as a second lieutenant in the US Army immediately. The Technology Department was one of the largest departments on campus. More than 90 percent of the courses required lab or studio time, which provided the students with a 'hands-on' learning environment in their field of study.

The College of Fine and Applied Arts had over 3,000 undergraduate and graduate majors and more than 120 faculty and staff. The diversity within the College did more than enough to set the stage for these graduates and prepared them to use their new-found knowledge in the career of their choice.

Hayes School of Music

With a faculty comprised of 38 teachers, researchers, and composers, the Hayes School of Music offered Appalachian students one of the most extensive and fulfilling musical educations possible. With degrees in vocal and instrumental performance, music education, composition and theory, sacred music, music industries, and music therapy, students had the opportunity to have professional training in a broad range of fields. A Master of Music degree was also available to those advanced students who had desire to continue their knowledge further in the music world.

Located on the west side of campus, the Broyhill Music Center provided students with two performance halls, a recording studio, opera studio, electronic studio, over 50 practice rooms and an extensive music library. Also an integral part of the Hayes School of Music was Rosen Concert Hall, which presented over 150 recitals and ensembles each year featuring students, faculty and special guest artists. In the summer, students from high schools across the state could be seen on the Appalachian campus participating in the Cannon Music Camp, one of the most comprehensive courses in musical instruction across the southeast. During the academic year, students could participate in unique courses such as "The Alexander Technique," which guides music students through a pathway of self-discovery and perfecting their talents. The International Program provided students with the opportunity of traveling to other countries. The program gave students a first hand glimpse at different styles of music from local musicians.

In addition to the performance based programs, the school also offered a Music Industry Program. These students often worked closely with the business department. This major focused on the aspects of the music world not always associated with performing, however, students were still required to be able to perform and attend concerts, just like all the other majors with the school of music.

With six student organizations and dedicated professors and staff, the Hayes School of Music offered students a musical education of exceptional quality and depth. Hayes School of Music presented students with every opportunity to achieve the dreams they had upon arrival at Appalachian State University.

Caring community

Watauga College

a close-knit community brings academic and social support

Watauga College is not for the weak of mind or the faint of heart. No assumption goes unchallenged, no platitude goes unquestioned, and no risk goes unnoticed," as their mission stated.

Watauga College began as an "experimental college" in 1972 to provide first and second year students with an alternative way to fulfill their core curriculum requirements. All students of the program lived in a common community where they studied and attended classes together. Integrating academics with students' personal and social development in a non-traditional way was the basis for Watauga College. Students participating in the college came from very diverse backgrounds and had different opinions, ideas, attitudes, and even lifestyles, but the concepts and practices of the program helped these students challenge, understand, and accept these differences, which created a strong sense of community.

Watauga's students lived in the Living Learning Center (LLC), a very relaxed environment. The LLC had numerous study rooms, lounges, social spaces, and a courtyard. By the end of 2004, not only did Watauga College celebrate their thirtieth birthday, the students also celebrated their own small cafeteria that was opened a few hours each day. The comfortable arrangements of the LLC helped foster the students' growth in Watauga's community, making it easier to extend to other areas of the campus.

All classes were held in the LLC which usually consisted of only 12 to 18 students. Professors offices were also located on the LLC premises, making them virtually always available to students. Sara Smith, a sophomore Watauga student said, "The professors are so supportive and caring in Watauga. They always notice when a student is having issues or problems inside or outside the program and they always do what they can to help improve all aspects of a student's college experience."

This program provided an environment that promoted growth and development through planned interaction and forced community. "If it wasn't for Watauga, I probably wouldn't be at Appalachian anymore. Coming in as a transfer student, the strong sense of community and extreme concern and help from the caring professors really kept me going," Smith said.

The Honors Program provided students with several opportunities to become an involved honor student. The Honors Association promoted academic achievement among students through a partnership with the Honors Program, while creating a bond between all. Any undergraduate who maintained a grade point average of 3.0 and enrolled in the University's Honors Program could have been a member of the Honors Association.

Scholars Weekend, February 21 through 22, was a huge recruitment time for the Honors Program. During this weekend, a series of interviews of scholarship applicants took place. The Chancellor's Scholarship was an extremely selective scholarship that was awarded by the Honors Program that weekend. The scholarship awarded 25 students each year with up to $4,500 a year. To be part of the Chancellor Scholars program, students were required to enroll in at least one Honors course each semester for their first two years. The scholarship was renewable up to four years if the scholar maintained a 3.4 grade point average and had not declared a major or was tied to any college.

Students involved in the Honors Program were given the opportunity to create a bond with faculty while refining their talent. The Honor's Program encouraged students to set high academic goals to better their futures and develop a respect for greater knowledge.

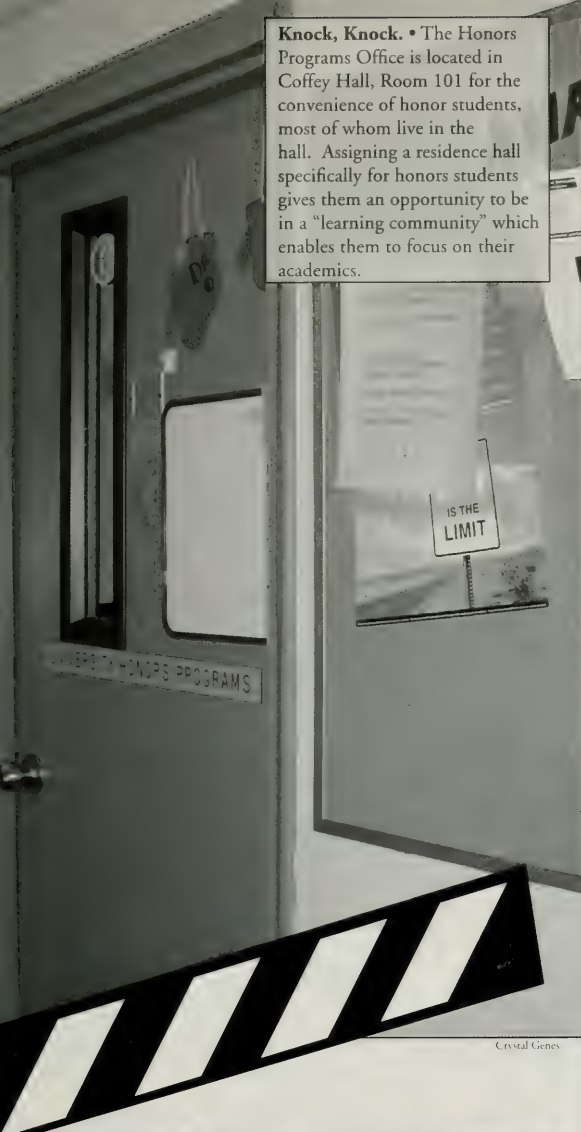

Black Jack • Janet Coggins and Jennifer Clark, play cards while they relax after a hard day's work in Coffey Hall. "The Honors Programs is very challenging and involved but rewarding," said Jennifer.

Cram Time • Working tediously in her dorm room, honor student, Jennie Nicholls becomes fatigued. "The program presents students with more opportunities than if you went in with the other undergraduates," said Jennie.

Hanging Out • Taking time to lay low, honor students, Erika Wuerzner, Drew Howard, Nathan Franke, John Foley, and Scott Mitchell hang out. "Honor students are people too," said Scott.

Knock, Knock. • The Honors Programs Office is located in Coffey Hall, Room 101 for the convenience of honor students, most of whom live in the hall. Assigning a residence hall specifically for honors students gives them an opportunity to be in a "learning community" which enables them to focus on their academics.

The department of accounting was one of six departments in the Walker College of Business. "The professors and classes are extremely helpful," said Junior accounting major Jennifer Barbee. "It's great that the department offers programs for students to meet with companies and firms for networking purposes and possibly future internships and employment." Accounting alumni continued to set themselves apart from other professionals in their field. The Epsilon Kappa chapter of Beta Alpha Psi, Appalachian's honorary accounting society for students, contributed to their success. The Epsilon Kappa chapter of Beta Alpha Psi sponsored numerous activities for students throughout the year. These included recognition dinners for students who were excelling in the beginning accounting course and the Junior-Year experience that provided business etiquette and interviewing skills.

For students who wished to continue their education in accounting after graduation, the Department of Accounting offered a Masters of Science in Accounting program. A student must have had an undergraduate degree in accounting in order to be admitted to the graduate program. If a student did not have an undergraduate degree in accounting, and still wished to be admitted, that student could take undergraduate equivalent courses and then be admitted. It usually took a student who already had an undergraduate degree in accounting two semesters and a summer session to complete the graduate program. The MS-A program was awarded Appalachian's Deans' Award for excellence in graduate education.

Active Volume • As students enter and exit Raley Hall, they become aware of their focus is accounting, they rarely go far from the building itself. Raley Hall was completed in the summer of 1990. "Raley houses the best undergraduate business school in the state," said Liam Cox.

students receive immediate feedback on writing skills

If students wanted to brainstorm, better understand a professor's assignment, work on organization, or needed someone to explain grammatical rules or documentation to them, the Writing Center would have helped. The Writing Center was located in Sanford 203-B. Director Elizabeth Carroll said, "The center is here for everybody. We aim to talk to writers all over the university and help them. We are useful to anyone who has a writing problem."

The Writing Center assisted all students with any stage of the writing process. They worked with any form of writing: pre-writing, specific course assignments, resume development, short stories, poetry, personal writing, business writing, or application essays. The center offered many resources; such as, handouts and handbooks to get students started.

The staff consisted of graduate students from English, as well as, other departments, faculty consultants, and undergraduate consultants. The staff at the center not only worked with English students, but also worked with students from other departments. Many ESL students used the center to help them better understand the English writing process.

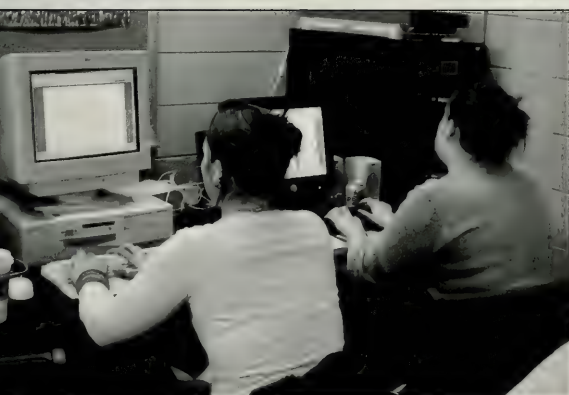

The Writing Center offered a collaborative and supportive environment that assisted student writers. They aided students in the writing process and fostered creativity, while encouraging the student's voice.

Comfortable Ambiance • The Writing Center exudes a welcoming atmosphere. Students could make an appointment or come in and wait on the couches for an available assistant. "The Writing Center is a great place for students because they get immediate feedback," said Graduate Assistant Tonya Hassell.

Always Improving • Graduate Assistants, Tonya Hassell and Jessica Chapman, work on a class paper while waiting for students seeking help to come to the lab. Jessica said, "I realize that writers at any stage need readers. I wish I had utilized the lab as an undergraduate."

Awaiting the cue

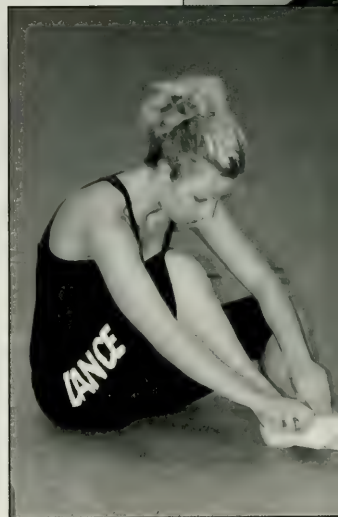

The Department of Theatre and Dance was an accredited institutional member of the National Association of Schools of Theatre. The department provided academic and professional experience that prepared students for graduate school and careers in teaching and theatrics.

The Theatre Department brought several productions to Voberg Theatre, including Shirley Lauro's, A Piece of My Heart, and Robert Bolt's, A Man For All Seasons.

Dance was another growing program housed within the Department of Theatre and Dance. The program offered a strong minor in dance and plans were underway to expand the program as facilities became available.

October brought the return of the North Carolina Dance Festival to Appalachian for the sixth year. The three-day affair consisted of professional touring companies, various choreographers from across the state, as well as, pieces choreographed by the faculty and advanced choreography students.

As the Department of Theatre and Dance continued to grow and yield quality student productions, it took very little for them to attain their departmental goals.

is successful

After ten years as Chancellor, Dr. Francis T. Borkowski stepped down in June. Following Dr. Borkowski's retirement, Dr. Harvey Durham, was appointed interim chancellor. There wasn't a permanent chancellor to take Dr. Borkowski's place until a Chancellor Search Committee was formed and began its work. Robert G. Fox, Jr. headed the seventeen-member Chancellor Search Committee. The committee interviewed and reviewed several candidates for the position. The candidate list was narrowed down to a final six. These six candidates were Dr. Stan Albrecht from Utah State University, Dr. Kyle Carter from Central Missouri State University, Dr. Michael Hanes from Georgia Southwestern State University, Dr. Kenneth Peacock, the College of Business Dean, Dr. Daniel Papp from University System of Georgia, and Dr. Paula Short from the Tennessee Board of Regents.

The University chartered a group of trustees, alumni, faculty, one community member at large, one staff representative, and a student with the job of filling the open chancellor position. This group hired a search firm to bring in as many qualified applicants as possible. They were then narrowed through a series of interviews to six candidates who were invited to campus. The committee cut the list, after all the candidates had seen the school and attended open forums. The final three choices were recommended to the University of North Carolina System President, Molly Broad. Dr. Kenneth Peacock was chosen and unanimously approved by the Board of Governors on February 13th 2004.

Chancellor Elect, Dr. Kenneth Peacock, was the College of Business Dean from 1992 to July 2003, and Interim Provost from 2003-2004; he had been with the university for a total of 22 years. He took office on July 1, 2004 with a salary of $210,000.

Twenty Questions • As one of the student representatives involved in the interview process for the chancellor search, SGA Chief-of-Staff, Heather Robertson, asks Dr. Kyle Carter what steps he was going to take to become a part of the Appalachian family. "I thought Dr. Carter was an excellent candidate for the chancellorship," Heather said.

Congratulations • Board of Governors Member, Mr. Charles Mercer, speaks with newly appointed Chancellor, Dr. Kenneth Peacock following his acceptance speech in Chapel Hill. Dr. Peacock, was approved by the Board of Governors on February 13, 2003. The Chancellors Search was a long, but rewarding process.

Thank You • As their eyes are fixed on the screen in the Student Union, students and faculty watch a live broadcast of Chancellor Dr. Kenneth Peacock deliver his acceptance speech from Chapel Hill. "My dream is that one day, as historians look back on this day-February 13, 2004-that this day will prove to be as much of a defining moment in the life of this great university as it is in the lives of Rosanne and Ken Peacock," Peacock closed.

communication involves untapped skills

With 4 student organizations and a wide variety of courses, the Department of Communication had much of which to be proud. With 700 declared majors, the department was the second largest on campus. Their 18 full-time faculty and 15 part-time faculty instructed students in a myriad of courses including advertising, applied communication, broadcasting, journalism, and public relations.

There was an extensive, international internship program, which enabled students to gain practical work experience in the field and earn semester hours at the same time.

The Department of Communication also boasted several active student organizations including: the Ad Club, the Society of Professional Journalists, Public Relations Student Society of America, a regionally recognized debate team, and WASU, the university's very own award winning, student-run campus radio station.

Despite all these accomplishments, the department still strived for more. "We plan to be recognized as the most highly visible and premier communication department at a comprehensive university in the Carolinas," said Dr. Stuart Towns, chairperson of the department. "We are well on the way to achieving this vision."

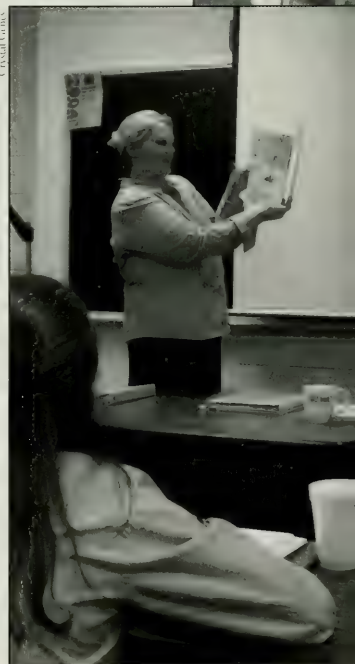

Two other goals of the department were to develop a Master's degree program and to eventually become a College of Communications. "With the help of the University administration and our alumni," said Towns, "we expect all of these goals to be met within the next decade."

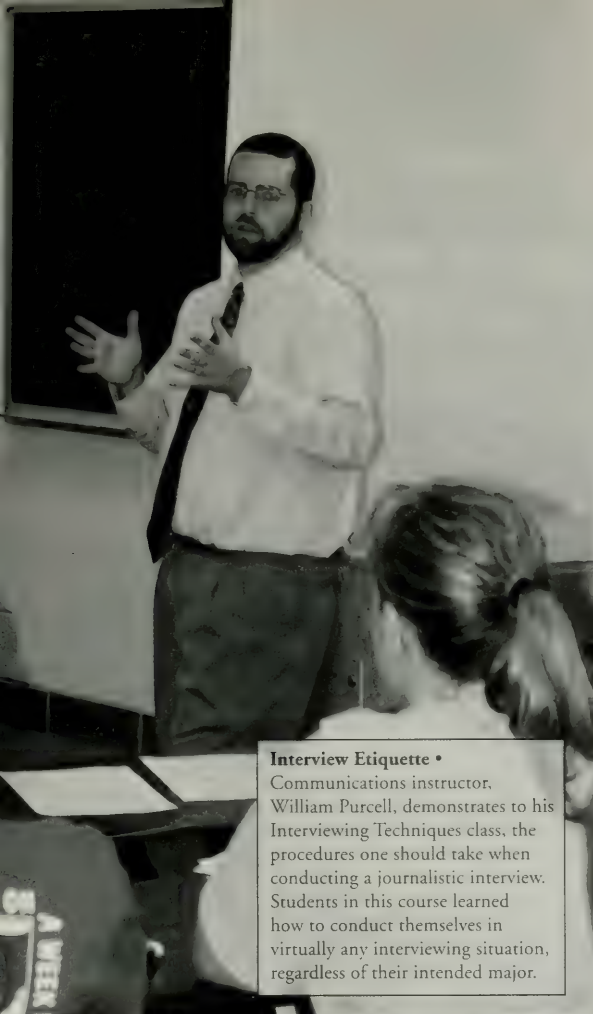

Money Search •

Searching for a career

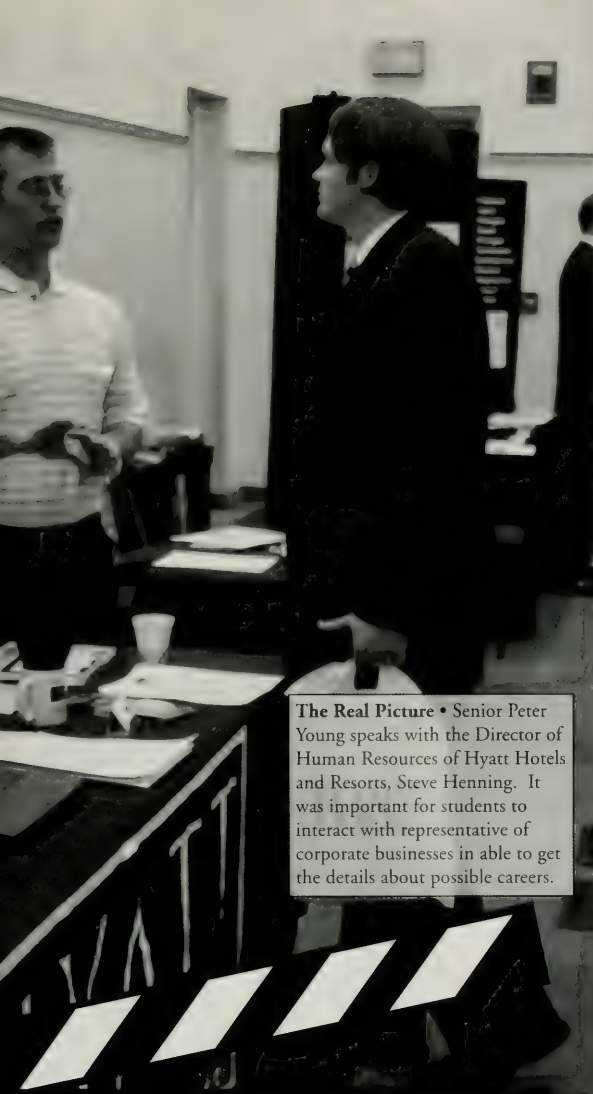

What will your life be like in 10 years? Where do you hope to be 20 years down the road? Students were asked these or similar questions and often weren't able to give answers.

The Career Development Center offered current and former students career services that helped them understand where they will succeed in the world and have the biggest impact. The center provided career counseling, interviews, and job searching tools where students could, based on their strongest assets and interests, decide where in the world they fit best.

The Center provided three programs for students to utilize in able to find the career they wanted to pursue. E-recruiting is an online career account. Their internship program gives applications to students and helps them set up an internship that is best for them. Student employment is another way that the center can provide students aid.

Several career fairs on campus provided students with additional information and tips for the application process; as well as, provided students with the opportunity to meet company employers and representatives. Jobfest 2004 and the Education Job Fair were both held in March while the Internship and Volunteer Fair was on January 28th. The Center could also assist students with constructing resumes, completing applications for internships, and preparing for interviews.

With the help of the Career Development Center, students could focus on their future, and begin searching for their lives after college.

Left, left, left, right, left!" The Military Science Department taught students how to develop self-discipline, physical stamina, and the general art of leadership through training and experience. ROTC teams and clubs were constantly involved in competitions; many of which proved to be very successful, earning high places and receiving honors.

There were three clubs in the ROTC department that were active all year round. These clubs were: The Commando Club, The Pershing Rifles, and the Scabbard and Blade Society. The ROTC attended two Field Training Exercises, or FTX, in the spring and fall, and labs throughout the year where they put their skills to the test.

One of the major competitions that the Ranger Challenge teams took part in was the Fifth Annual ROTC Brigade Ranger Challenge in Fort Jackson, South Carolina in early November. The competition tested teamwork abilities, physical fitness, and leadership and technical skills. It consisted of 27 teams from schools across North Carolina, South Carolina, and Tennessee. Cadets completed an Army Physical Fitness Test, a map reading written test, day and night orienteering, a rigorous commander's event, a grenade assault course, assembly and disassembly of the M-16 rifle in 50 seconds, building and crossing 10 cadets over a one rope bridge over water, and a very demanding obstacle course, marching several miles from event to event. All events were timed; lowest times receiving higher scores. The whole competition lasted a total of six hours.

The Gold, or junior varsity, Team finished third place in the Division III competition, winning ninth overall. The Junior Varsity team consisted of all new members who were excited to receive such a high place in the competition. The Black, or varsity, Team won the Division I championship competing against 10 other teams. This was the first time the Varsity team won the competition since 1999. Both the Black and Gold Teams captured second place honors in the Division I competition. As in all competitions, just to complete the course was a huge achievement and to receive high placements was truly a rewarding accomplishment for both teams. The competitions were "a testament to the strength of their hearts, minds, and bodies," LTC Douglas G. Jett, professor of Military Science, said.

Learning in far lands

students travel internationally to gain cultural knowledge

Students sometimes forgot about the bigger world outside of their little mountain campus. The Office of International Programs was dedicated to making students aware of this by bringing international students to Boone and offering students the opportunity to travel internationally.

International Programs began in the mid-1970s and has grown tremendously. Nancy Wells, Director of International Student Exchange and Study Abroad, has been involved with the program since 1996. "Only fourteen students studied abroad in 1996 and about 200 participated in Summer Programs," Nancy said. Last year approximately 100 students studied abroad and 350 students participated in summer programs abroad. Students could study virtually anywhere for any subject. "Students shouldn't make assumptions about cost because it doesn't always have to be an expensive undertaking. Start early enough and you can do it!" Nancy said. Many programs cost the same as tuition at Appalachian. Students were usually required only to cover travel and personal expenses.

In addition to offering programs abroad, International Programs were responsible for approximately 80 international students studying at Appalachian, some for a semester and others for an entire degree. International students come from as far away as New Zealand and Japan, and many students are from China, Western Europe, and Central and South America.

International study was a great opportunity that many took advantage of. Nancy Wells said, "There have been more precautions since 9-11. We have to educate students better so they are savvy travelers. I think the economy is affecting how many people are studying abroad, but the numbers are definitely going up!"

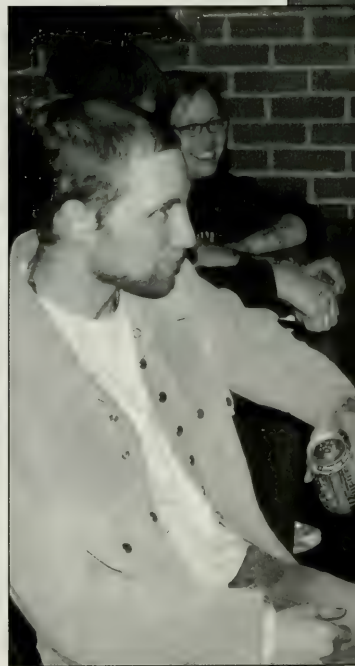

Desolate Hour • A student studying abroad in Sunderland, England took a day trip to Durham to capture this picture of an English couple on a dreary day in April 2003. Studying abroad gave students an opportunity to travel extensively within the country in which they were studying. "Waking up to a view of the English countryside, feeling the pages of an original Shakespearian manuscript, and standing in a place where Princess Diana once stood, are experiences that will leave me forever changed," Jana K. Nordstrand said.

students were encouraged to improve education

Exceeding expectations

The Doctoral Program in Educational Leadership was Appalachian's only doctoral program. Housed in the Reich College of Education, the program admitted its first students in 1992. The Doctoral Program was a scholarly community of practice supporting students in personal transformation and in identifying and addressing critical educational issues. The program encouraged students to apply theory to practice in conducting research, constructing knowledge, and in improving educational systems.

The Ed.D. Program has two areas of concentration: general educational leadership, primarily for community college administrators, and public school superintendent's licensure. Both concentrations consisted of a minimum of 60 credit hours beyond the master's degree, including 27 hours of core courses, 21 elective hours, an internship, a qualifying examination, and a dissertation.

Three faculty members are primarily responsible for the doctoral program: Dr. Alice Naylor, Director, Dr. George Olson, and Dr. Kelly Clark-Keefe. Alice Naylor became the director of the program in 1999, succeeding four other directors: Drs. William Bailey, Linda Blanton, Michael Dale, and Duncan Waite. During the past five years Dr. Naylor has recruited a diverse group of students and formalized many aspects of the program. "Working with doctoral students is a joy!" she said. "They are independent learners, flexible, fun, and creative educators who are producing important dissertations for the profession."

George Olson joined the program a dozen years ago during its inaugural year. Prior to that he worked as a research director in large city school districts. He taught several of the research and statistics courses in the program. "I've seen the program gain maturity over the past several years," Olson said. "I am continually being impressed by the high level of professional responsibility our students assume when they leave our program."

Kelly Clark-Keefe joined the doctoral faculty this year, coming to Boone from the University of Vermont. Her primary responsibilities with the program involve courses in qualitative research and leadership. The students' commitment to learning about and inquiring into educational systems has exceeded her expectations. With a smile she says "I look forward to making Appalachian State my professional home."

Cohort 11 • Just like undergraduate degrees, students of the Doctoral Program must also complete a list of core classes. Cordia Wilson, Wanda Hutchinson, Jim Brooks, Vickie Hugger, and Stephen Martin attentively take notes during Multi-Disciplinary Seminar II.

Upward Bound, part of the College Awareness Programs, was founded by the U.S. Department of Education as a way to encourage and help financially disadvantaged or first generation high school students to complete high school, enroll in college, and successfully obtain a four-year college degree.

Appalachian has served Ashe, Avery, Watauga, and West Wilkes County high schools since 1972. Approximately 80 students a year from these areas began extensive training for a college education while in high school. After high school, many chose to come to Appalachian to receive their college education. Students who enrolled in the program received free membership, and had all activity fees paid for by Upward Bound. This included transportation costs, meals, and a six-week stay at Appalachian each summer to simulate the college experience.

Chuck Bowling, Assistant Director of the program, said, "I really enjoy the program because we see students who come from really difficult situations and they make it. They don't just make their way to college, they make it and are successful."

Interested students at Appalachian had the opportunity to volunteer their time working with Upward Bound and tutoring the area's Upward Bound high school students. Bowling said, "I have been amazed at the perseverance and drive of Upward Bound students. They face many challenges as they work toward getting into college, and the hard work that they do really pays off. I have also been extremely impressed with the commitment of the college students who work as tutors and summer leaders. Appalachian students seem to have an unending desire to make things better for the young people of this region, and the ones who work with Upward Bound are truly committed to these high school students."

program gives freshmen students an exciting beginning

In 2001 Appalachian State University was awarded College of the Year by Time Magazine. The primary reason Appalachian State received this tremendous award was for the University's excellent Freshmen Orientation programs. One program offered to students at Appalachian, to help them become as prepared as possible for their freshman year, was Summer Preview.

Summer Preview was summer school exclusively for freshman entering Appalachian State in the following fall. There were many advantages in taking Summer Preview, the primary one being students get a head start on academics. Athletes that were worried about balancing a practice schedule are encouraged to attend summer preview in order to prepare themselves for their new routine. Summer Preview was also highly recommended to out-of-state students, in order to ease the transition and become better oriented with the Boone area. Summer Preview was also a great way to get a "head start" in college life and the transition into a completely different life!

The entering freshmen participating in Summer Preview took a Freshman Seminar and one other class for a total of six credit hours. Some more advantages of Summer Preview were smaller class sizes and a less chaotic campus to become acquainted with. Students taking Summer Preview had many chances to study outside the classroom, including engaging in cultural events and outdoor activities. Summer Preview also coincided with the second summer session of classes, giving upper-classmen a chance to be a peer leader in the Freshmen Seminar class.

Over the past few years, students have displayed more academic success their freshman year. In fact the GPA for the two Summer Preview courses is over 3.3. Summer preview was a great program for students to be involved in, ensuring a smoother transition into all aspects of college life.

Working for an art

The Department of Art, which is fully accredited by the National Association of Schools of Art and Design, offered five different programs in which students could receive their degree including: graphic design, studio, art education, art management, and art. Laura Ives, Chairperson for the Department of Art said, "As visual art and design play an ever-increasing role in our rapidly changing technological environment, our art department offers the very best professional and liberal arts education and training."

The department strove to provide students with the necessary instruction which would prepare them for jobs in visual arts and art related fields such as teaching, graphic design, arts management, or gallery work. Instructors were also dedicated to ensure that students were informed and understood the value of art and design in both contemporary and historical cultures and perspectives.

In order to receive degrees from the Department of Art, students submitted portfolios the semester before their freshman year and again when they began their particular degree tracks. Senior art majors were required to exhibit their work in the Spring in order to fulfill graduation requirements.

"The Department of Art is a stimulating and creative environment where students and faculty challenge each other and grow together. The art program here at Appalachian State University serves as a vehicle for students to realize their highest artistic potential," Laura said.

Gettin' Messy • Junior interior design major, Amber Cagle, works putting plaster around a rubber ball. Studio time was essential for art students because it was when they could get help with the actual work they were doing from their professors.

Any Questions? • Professor Janet Taylor asks her students, Kim Wall and Brianne Henderson, if they understand the assignment given. The correct procedure for an art assignment is very important.

Freshmen had the opportunity to enroll into a Freshman Seminar course to help them make a smooth transition into college life. Freshman Seminar offered first semester freshmen students information about University resources, support, and opportunities for improving learning skills and broadening personal and cultural horizons. Freshman Graphic Arts major, Megan Burriess said, "Freshman Seminar helped me to do things that I wouldn't have done otherwise as far as attending cultural events."

Appalachian was named College of the Year by Time Magazine in 2001 for its freshman programs such as Freshman Seminar. About 70% of colleges and universities offer such a program. The course familiarized students with on campus facilities such as the Writing Center, Library, Peer Career Office, Wellness and Counseling Centers, Learning Assistance Programs, and University Advising Services. Students who took this class received designators for writing, computing, as well as cross-disciplinary.

gender roles Studying

female students become educated about gender issues

With over fifty faculty members in the Women's Studies Department, many courses were taught to educate students about the history of women and their roles throughout different areas of study.

Women's Studies originated in the 1970s, when professors and students began to realize the history of women was either left out or altered in modern curriculums. Becca Floyd, a junior Women's Studies major said, "Through Women's Studies I have been able to look at my own experiences as a woman on an academic level in the same way that humanities and social sciences have allowed men to do for centuries."

The Women's Studies program was founded in 1976 and is the second oldest program of its kind in North Carolina. One of the main goals of the program was to educate and eventually bring equality for women in society, past and present. Becca said, "Through the study of gender, I have learned how both feminine and masculine roles shape each person's life in positive and negative ways. I see everyday why feminism is still necessary and how it can work to benefit every person no matter what gender they are."

According to the Women's Studies website, www.ws.appstate.edu, "The Women's Studies Program provides academic leadership to the Appalachian State University community for the study of women, women's and gender issues, and gender/feminist theories." The program offered students either a major or a minor.

Historical appalachian

The Appalachian Cultural Museum (ACM) was located off campus in the University Hall building. Open since 1989, the museum was a place where students and the public could go to learn about the history and culture of the Appalachian region.

"Time and Change: Centuries of Living in the Blue Ridge Mountains" was one of the permanent exhibits in the museum. This exhibit featured artifacts and historically significant pieces that tell about the people who called the Appalachian mountains home.

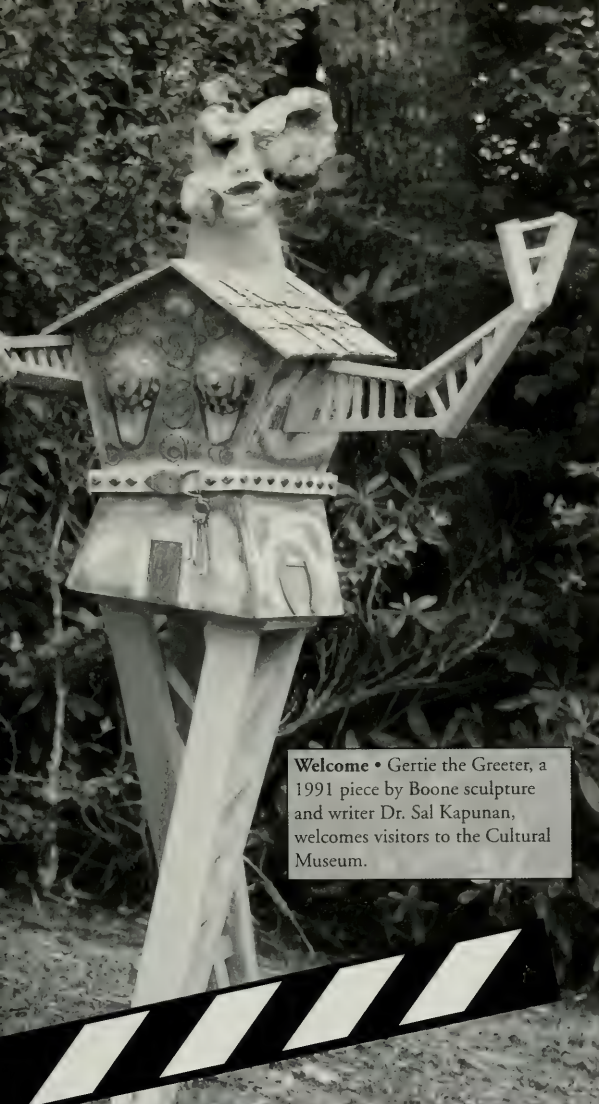

Other exhibits of the ACM included the formation of the Appalachian mountains, a Native American exhibit that displayed arrowheads, and other artifacts from the first settlers of the region. There were more exhibits featuring the pioneers of the region, the famous Daniel Boone drawings by James Daugherty, African-Americans in the region, the Civil War, moonshine, mountain quilts, furniture, music, and a brief history of the Blue Ridge Parkway.

More modern galleries included two Winston Cup NASCAR racecars driven by Wilkesboro's own Junior Johnson, the lost, but not forgotten theme park on Beech Mountain, The Land of Oz, and a biography of skiing in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

The museum also featured pieces from local students and artists in and around the high country, such as the Watauga High School senior art exhibit.

Director Dr. Charles A. Watkins wants all students to tour the museum during their college career.

"The museum was very interesting," Junior Austin Adams said. "It's a great thing to do on a rainy day, and it's free."

department lets

The Department of Economics takes great pride in preparing undergraduate students to be successful, productive members of our society. While an economics major has no guarantee to become rich and famous, they will receive the best possible preparation for a large number of careers in business or government or for further education in graduate school.

According to statistical data, people who majored in economics had the highest lifetime earnings of any major except engineering and agriculture/forestry, and did better in MBA programs. Economics graduates were also known to score better on the LSAT for law school than any other discipline.

In the department, there was a large and growing number of young, energetic faculty members who wanted to share their interest in, and love of, economics with students who enjoyed learning and were seeking to develop their intellectual capabilities. These faculty members were actively engaged in research that ranged from experimental economics to environmental issues to energy economics to the economics of professional sporting endeavors to the use of economics in the legal arena, and much more.

There was a great deal of flexibility in the economics major curriculum, with only three specified courses beyond the two introductory principles courses and the two statistics courses. The remaining courses was chosen by the student. The flexibility of this program let the student pursue their own areas of interest and made it easy to double major in economics and another field.

Brashear Prize Contest •

Exchange Center • Part of the WTA Club poses for a picture at the Mercantile Exchange at Chicago in November. Certain events like this were important for students to attend to gain experience.

The Family and Consumer Sciences Department offered degrees at both the Bachelor's and Master's degree level. The programs offered by the department covered a wide range of topics. Programs included Child Development including Birth/Kindergarten licensure, Apparel and Textiles, Food and Nutrition, and Family and Consumer Sciences Secondary Education. The department had a mission to provide quality instructional programs, which produced graduates with marketable competencies and a cognitive base for consumer problem solving and professional practice. This academic program was accredited by the American Association of Family and Consumer Sciences. The Department was located in L.S. Dougherty Hall.

The department also hosted several student organizations to enrich students lives. Those organizations included the Student Dietetics Association, Highland Association for Child Development and Advocacy, Appalachian Fashion Group, Student Association of Family and Consumer Sciences, and Kappa Omicron Nu. Each of these served a different area within the department and held a variety of activities throughout the year.

As well as participating in clubs and classroom work, students also had several opportunities to travel on field study trips to enhance their education. Trips went to Washington, D.C., Atlanta, and New York. Many students also took internships across the country.

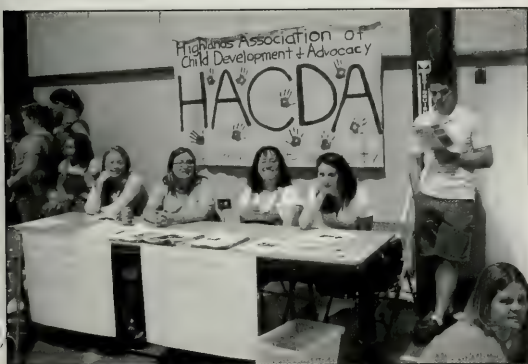

The department of Family and Consumer Sciences broadened students education through the use of clubs, field trips and campus activities, as well as classroom education.

Out of Class • Apparel and textile majors focus on apparel design and merchandising as they learn behind the scenes information through touring the New York City Fashion District. Students expanded their fashion and merchandising horizons, explored trend forecasting, explored internship and career possibilities, and gathered ideas for display assignments and apparel design.

Work Experience • On his internship, at Greenbrier Resort Sean Considine plates food for a guest. Sean interned as a Food Systems Manager with the resort.

Showcase • At the end of the year showcase, Emily Harpe features her own original design. Also featured that evening was catering skills of food and nutrition students, as well as scholarship awards for the department.

students learn languages and new cultures

Bonjour, hola, guten tag

The department of Foreign Languages & Literatures offered a variety of courses that enhanced students' understanding of other cultures and languages and let them appreciate something outside their own comfort zone. While taking these courses students came to understand that languages and culture are inseparable. Languages and cultures studied were Chinese, French, German, Japanese, Latin, Russian, and Spanish. Teaching English as a Second Language was also an area studied by the Foreign Language and Literature students. Students could receive a Master of Arts Degree of the Romance languages, French or Spanish. A Bachelor of Arts could be granted in Chinese, French, or Spanish. Students who studied French and Spanish could also receive a Bachelor of Science. Students could also minor in Chinese, French, German, Spanish, or TESL. Classes were offered in Japanese, Latin, and Russian.

There were student clubs for almost every language that was offered in the department. The appropriate department advised these student clubs, which provided a fun experience to go along with the study of cultures, languages, and relationships.

The department also supported summer, semester, and yearlong study abroad programs. Students traveling in the program could go to China, France, Germany, Japan, Russia, and Spain. Study abroad gave students the opportunity to actually see what they had learned firsthand, such as the cultures of different countries, while studying in them.

Once the department requirements were completed for any undergraduate or graduate program, a student was fully prepared for the multicultural world in which they would be living their life, while also grasping more knowledge along the way.

Visiting • Dr. Alexandra Hellenbrand, Chair of the Department and Darlene Ruppert, Department Secretary, stand in the hallway outside of their offices. This was Dr. Hellenbrand's first year as Chair of the Department.

Lab Time • Working on the computer was an important part of some Foreign Languages and Literatures classes. The Department's lab was staffed by Ms. Karen Clark, Computer Lab Coordinator, who assisted students and faculty with all of their technical needs.

The Department of Technology was one of the largest and fastest growing departments on campus. The department had an enrollment of over 700 undergraduate majors and offered course work in Appropriate Technology, Construction Technology, Electronics, Furniture Studies, Graphic Arts and Imaging Technology (GAIT), Interior Design, Industrial Drafting and Design, Technical Photography, Technology Education, and Trade and Industry. The department also offered a Master of the Arts in Technology Education and Industrial Technology.

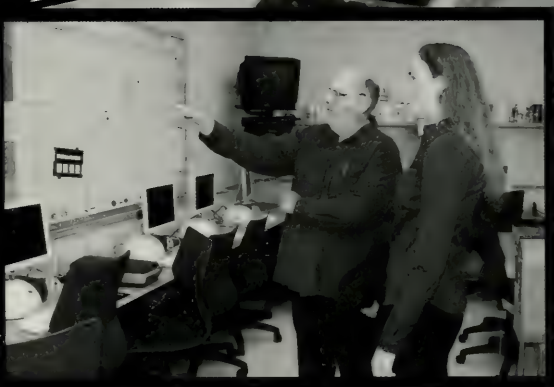

Tracy Turpen, Industrial Technology Major, said, "As most people choose their own majors, photography chose me. I love the medium of photography, for with its distinctive realism it gives me the power to go further than conventional ways of seeing."

The department offered opportunities for students to study in the field, including the following locations: laboratories, field trips, summer programs, and study programs in New York, Cape Hatteras, and Cuba.

The Technology department offered students numerous chances to foster the concept of learning by doing. GAIT students ran, Mountaineer Printing, an in-house print shop fully equipped with presses, folders and cutters. At the end of each semester, students set up their work for sale in the Kerr Scott lobby. Items for sale ranged from jewelry and pottery. The Furniture Studies students presented their work in a contest. The winner Ethan Dale Rhinehart won one thousand dollars for his rocking chair design.

The Dr. Wiley F. Smith Department of Psychology, named after the first department chair, offered both an undergraduate and a graduate program. Undergraduates could earn either a Bachelor of Arts degree or a Bachelor of Science degree. The Bachelor of Science degree offered concentrations in Business, Health Studies, Human Services, Natural Sciences, Social Sciences, as well as an option for students to create their own concentration with the help of their advisor. The graduate program offered as Master's degree in five different programs. Students earning a Master's in School Psychology also received their CAS, Certificate of Advanced Study. Combined there were approximately 450 undergraduate junior and senior students and 112 graduate students in the Psychology major.

Twenty-eight full time faculty, six part time professors, and 12-15 teaching assistants comprised the department. Each of the professors had their own area study including experimental, clinical, school, health, and I-O/HRM. In addition, each of the faculty had their own area of research which they pursued, often with students help.

Psi Chi, the national psychology honor society for undergraduate students, had a chapter here on-campus. In the spring semester the club held their annual cookout. The cook-out was open to all psychology majors, faculty and staff in the department. The club also sponsored several fund raising events throughout the year. The Psychology Graduate Student Association served graduate level students through fund raisers and other events.

The department also offered three scholarship opportunities for students. The James and Elizabeth Whitener Long Scholarship was offered to Watauga High School Graduates with financial need who planned to major in psychology or education. The Dr. Frank R. Terrant Jr. Memorial Scholarship was for students with a 3.2 or higher GPA and junior, senior, or graduate level status in the department. The last scholarship opportunity came from the Wiley F. Smith family. The WiSE Research and Travel Awards were offered three times a year. Each award had several recipients to help fund the cost of research or attending conferences to present research information. The scholarship offered up to $300 to fund research and up to $200 for travel expenses including registration, travel, and lodging.

Smith Wright Hall housed the department that studied the mind through class, research, conferences, and events.

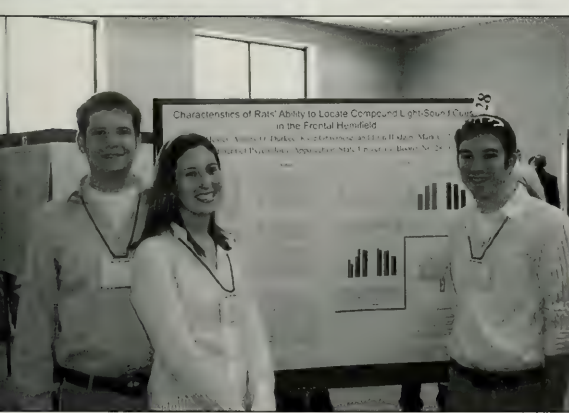

Advertising • Psi Chi members paint a banner in Mary Johnston's kitchen to announce the clubs picnic. The picnic was an annual Psi Chi event for all Psychology majors, faculty and staff who wanted to attend.

Peak Time • President, David Cline and Vice President, Mary Johnston of Psi Chi, the Psychology Senior Society, take a break from studying. "Psi Chi is a great addition to my experiences as a psychology major," said Ashley.

Studying • Before class begins, Ashley Johnston talks with her fellow students. "I've met some of my very best friends within the department and now we take classes together just to see each other," said Ashley.

Studying Complete • Undergraduate students stand in front of their research poster at a convention. These students researched rats' ability to locate sound and light cues.

Students majoring in Geology searched for resources, applied geologic principles to solutions of programs affecting people, and taught others about the Earth. The Geology Department had high standards for their students so graduates would have the best opportunities available to them in their careers as geologists. Geology was a major that included both indoor and outdoor course work. The solid foundations in fundamentals of Geology are key to success in any other higher-level course. The department carries no graduate program; therefore, focuses all efforts towards undergraduate instruction.

Students could obtain the following degrees from the Geology Department: Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Science and Arts with a concentration in Sustainable Development, Bachelor of Science with a concentration in Environmental Science, or Bachelor of Science with teacher certification. Students could also minor in Geology.

The department of Geology gave several scholarships and awards to students with excellent academic standing. A few of the scholarship grants were: the Departmental Working Scholarships, the Lloyd L. Hobbes Memorial Scholarship for the Physical Sciences, and the Fred Webb, Jr. and Barbara Haynes Webb Endowed Scholarship for Summer Field Course, Outstanding Geology Major and Geology Academic Achievement Awards to Seniors, Outstanding Field Student Award to Juniors, the Sophomore Mineralogy Awards, and the Promising Freshman Awards.

Faculty in this department had very diverse interests, experiences, and geographic origins and educational backgrounds. The Geology Department had faculty mentors who were assigned to students when they began their study of geology. These professors maintained close contact with their students and guided them through their academic experiences.

Writing writing always a work in progress

for students

Students majoring in the new BA program in English with a Concentration in Professional Writing had no trouble answering people who skeptically asked them, "What can you possibly 'do' with an English degree?" In this new program, started in the spring of 2003, students studied and practiced a wide variety of specialized writing genres to prepare themselves to be effective communication specialists: business and technical writing, writing for the information technology industry, legal writing, and editing, just to name a few. Graduates in Professional Writing expected to have a wide variety of career and graduate or professional school paths open to them.

To develop and sharpen their advanced communication skills, gained through their course work, students also completed a required semester or summer long applied internship in writing and editing. In this setting, students gained hands-on experience working as communication specialists at publishing companies, newspapers, magazines, public relations firms, museums, theaters, software engineering and web design companies, government agencies, and non-profit organizations, both in the local area and around the United States.

Students in this concentration spent considerable time studying advanced forms of writing and minoring in associated fields such as communication, information technology/computer science, the social sciences, public relations, business, or science and technology. However, these same students also remained engaged in the study of literature and the English language, which comprised a significant portion of their English BA experience.

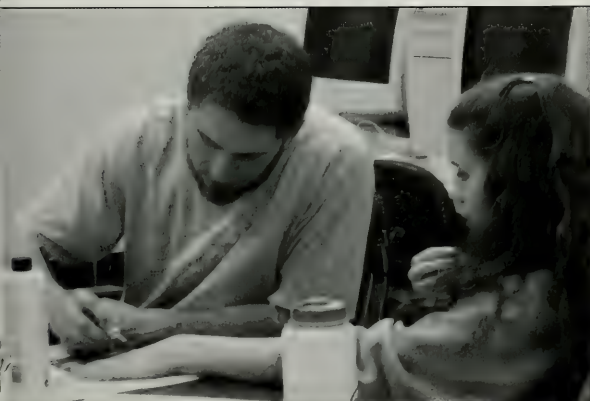

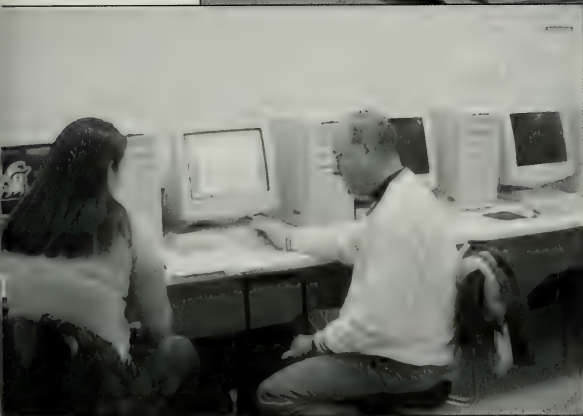

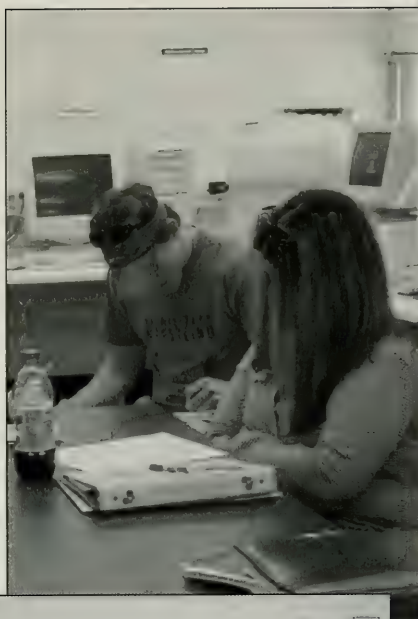

For students wishing to channel their love of writing into challenging careers in publishing, business and industry, the law, or technical fields, pursuing a BA in English with a Concentration in Professional Writing provided them with the training they needed to be strong competitors on the job market and successful professionals in the working world.

department offers variety of classes to broaden horizons

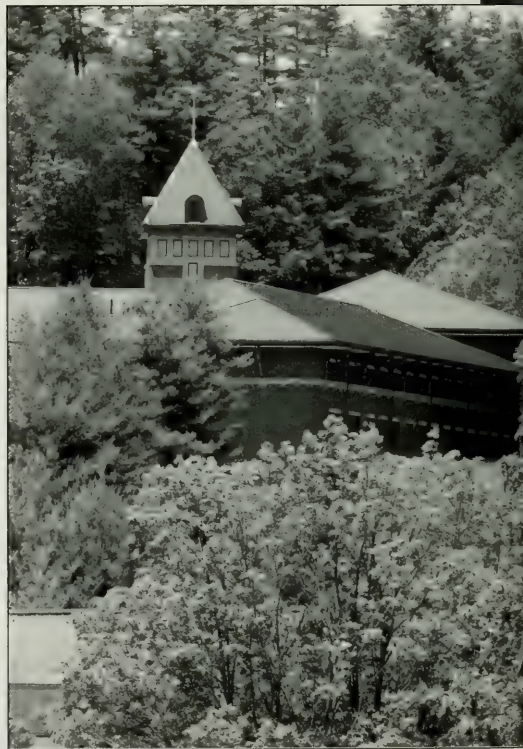

The Interdisciplinary Studies Department (IDS) strived to demonstrate and encourage dialogue among the disciplines. The courses offered were designed to enable students to travel between different specialized disciplines, and to join the knowledge of these perspectives and methods within their concentration.

The Department was located in the new Living and Learning Center. The building offered both an academic wing as well as a residential wing. There was also the Great Hall that served as a cafeteria for students in the department. The building housed the offices of Women's Studies, Sustainable Development, and Watauga College, each a part of IDS. Offered through these programs was a Bachelors of Arts degree with sixteen different interdisciplinary major concentrations and seven interdisciplinary minors.

The Watauga College Program provided first and second year students with alternative, interdisciplinary course to gain their general education courses. In addition, many classes were offered to meet cross disciplinary designator requirements. The program was also structured to be a living-learning community. The students resided in the Living and Learning Center as well as attending a majority of their classes there. The Watauga College professors' offices were also located in the building. This was a very supportive environment that offered innovative courses.

The Geography and Planning Department offered a Bachelor of Arts degree in Geography, a Bachelor of Science degree in Community and Regional Planning, a Bachelor of Science degree in Geography with concentrations in teaching, geographic information systems, or a general concentration, and also a Masters of Arts degree in Geography.

The planning program attempted to provide students with both practical and hands-on opportunities to learn about planning theory and applications. Over 150 students have graduated to date with a planning degree since the program began. This program offered students the choice to develop up to three specialized areas of study. These areas range from social planning to interpersonal communication.

The department also hosted an Annual Golf Tournament to benefit the Stephen Vancendak Fellowship Fund. The Fund was given to graduate students in the Geography department to help relieve the strains of paying for school.

students take part in study programs across the country

Anthropology was first taught in 1970 and became its own department in 1978. The department offered programs with concentrations in Archaeology, Applied Anthropology, and Sustainable Development; as well as, offering a degree for teaching certification.

According to the department's web site, "The program in anthropology offers the opportunity for understanding world affairs and problems within the total context of the human experience and for constructing solutions to world problems."

There were numerous opportunities for students to experience the field first-hand by participating in laboratories, internships, field schools, international programs, and various field trips.

Junior Archaeology major, Robert Merritt said, "The department is really fun and has great professors. Anthropology is important because any understanding of other cultures can benefit any peoples who seek to deal with the outside world as opposed to not having any contact with any other nations or any other peoples. It gives greater understanding of the human species."

According to Chairperson Dr. Gregory Reck, anthropology has become more accepted and needed in our society today. He said, "We struggle to maintain the holism which has characterized American anthropology. Yet, the heart of anthropology remains the same: the critically humanistic and scientific search for the meaning of our humanity and the solutions to philosophical and practical problems which continue to plague us down to this day. Indeed, this is an exciting time to be an anthropologist."

program provides innovative environment for learning

Edwin Duncan Hall housed the Department of Language, Reading, and Exceptionalities. This department served students wanting to work in the education field with exceptional children, as well as in a remedial capacity. Students could earn a Bachelor of Science degree in Communication Disorders, Habilitative Science, or Special Education. There was also a graduate level program offering Master's degrees in Communication Disorders, Reading Education, Adult Literacy, and Special Education. The department operated with 41 full time faculty, 20 adjuncts, and 11 graduate assistants teaching approximately 360 students.

The Language, Reading, and Exceptionalities Department offered various scholarships in Communication Disorders. There were also several trips taken throughout the year. Students traveled to conferences in New Orleans, Chicago, and Sanibel Island. They also presented with faculty in Atlanta, Albuquerque, San Diego, and Las Vegas.

Each year the department held a Communication Disorders Honors Banquet for students, faculty and staff. The banquet was held in the Grandfather Mountain Ballroom and catered by Manhattan's.

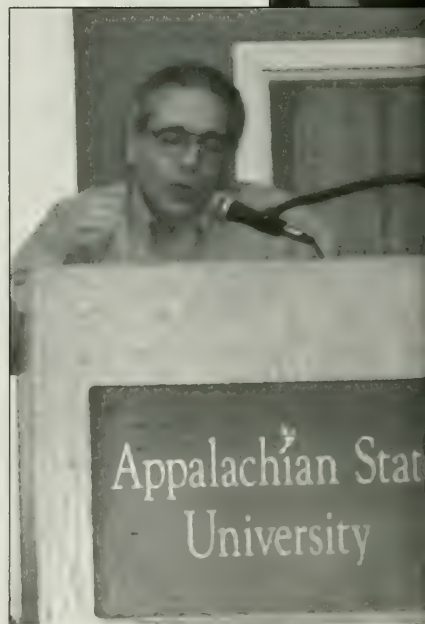

The department hosted two clubs, the National Speech-Language-Hearing Association and the Student Council for Exceptional Children. In addition it operated both a Speech Clinic and a Reading Clinic that provided thousands of hours of remedial service to children and adults in the region.

Service, along with class time, educated students in the Language, Reading, and Exceptionalities Department.

Guessing Game • At the honors banquet, Helen Wolter participated in the matching game. Baby pictures of faculty and staff were displayed and a prize was given for the most correct matches.

The Department of Sociology offered 189 majors. The department offered both the Bachelor of Science degree, as well as, the Bachelor of Arts degree. Majors that selected the Bachelor of Science degree could choose one of seven concentrations which included: Applied Research, Criminology & Social Control, Family Development, Gerontology, Habilitation Services, Legal Studies, a Self-Designed degree, Social Science Teaching (K-12), or Labor Studies. Those students seeking Bachelor of Arts degrees had to declare minors and meet a foreign language requirement.

The sociology faculty members were a diverse group, many of whom had either practiced in their fields of specialization or had published extensively in their areas of expertise. Cinthia Pratt, M.A., was recently inducted into the Academy of Outstanding Teachers, awarded a Teaching Enrichment Grant through the Hubbard Center, and was listed in "Who's Who Among America's Teachers." Dr. Janice Rienrth was recently awarded the "Women of Influence Award" at the 2004 Women's Leadership Conference. Dr. Trina Seitz was named an Archie K. Davis Research Fellow and was nominated in 2002-2003 for the William C. Strickland Outstanding Young Faculty Award. Also, Dr. Beth Davison was named the College of Arts & Sciences Student Advisor of the Year.

There were currently 160 Social Work majors seeking the Bachelor of Social Work degree. Upon successful completion of the degree requirements, students were then eligible for state certification as child welfare workers or state licensure for school social workers. The Social Work program offered off-campus programs in Catawba, McDowell, Yadkin, and Rutherford Counties. There were eight full-time Social Work faculty members; all with considerable social work practical experience.

The Social Work program was actively involved in the North Carolina Child Welfare Education Collaborative, NC-CWEC. Since joining NC-CWEC in 2000, the Department of Sociology and Social Work graduated 24 child welfare scholars at the Bachelor's Degree level.

The Department of Biology was composed of 24 full-time faculty, several adjunct faculty, approximately 500 undergraduate majors, and 31 graduate students. The department maintained an off-campus greenhouse, a herbarium, and oversaw several natural land tracts located on or near campus. A unique strength of the Biology Department was its commitment to providing extensive field and laboratory experiences for its majors.

The department offered programs leading to the Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Masters of Science and Masters of Arts in education degrees. Most courses offered included extensive laboratory components where students gained hands-on experience with state-of-the-art technology in areas ranging from plant and animal physiology to molecular biology.

Many of the department's graduate students attended professional schools and also successfully pursued a wide variety of positions including: biomedical and ecology research associates, college and university professors, environmental specialists, and park naturalists.

The Biology faculty members possessed a variety of research interests, and they advised and served as mentors to graduate students in areas ranging from molecular genetics to immunology. These members were committed to innovative and rigorous teaching at all levels and firmly believed that the scientific method, as practiced by biologists, was central to a well-rounded education in liberal arts. The department's mission statement focused on the roles of teaching and research, while providing students with the education they needed to succeed in the field. Their goal was to prepare students for a wide variety of careers in ecology and environmental biology.

Classification • Graduate Student, Allen Moore, and Assistant Professor Dr. Shea Tuberly, work in the biology lab. They were attempting to identify novelty scorpion hormones.

division provides non-academic experiences for students

The division of Student Development covered the majority of "out of class" experiences on campus. Some of the programs covered by this aspect of the University included Housing, Health Services, the Counseling Center, Judicial Affairs, Career Planning and Placement, Electronic Student Services, University Recreation, and Financial Aid.

This division attempted to work on student learning both in and out of the classroom. The key players in attempting to reach this goal were the various program directors and their staffs. There were many annual events that Student Development helped with this year, including the Walk for Awareness, Family Day activities, Summer Send-offs, Academic Awards Day, and the Student Development Awards Day. The division also worked with the Parents Association and Parent Orientation.

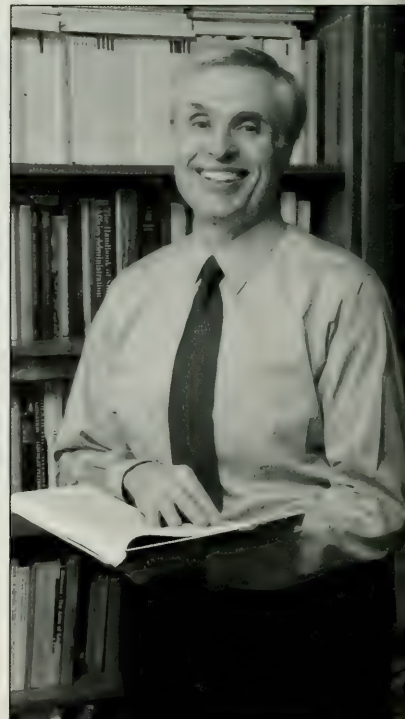

Vice-Chancellor Dr. Greg Blimling headed up this division. He came to ASU in 1990. He served as Vice-Chancellor for 14 years before announcing his departure on June 22nd. Dr. Blimling accepted a position at Rutgers University in New Jersey as the Vice-President of Student Affairs. Associate Vice-Chancellor for Student Development and Dean of Students was Susie Greene; she has been with the University for 29 years and has been serving in this position for the past two years. Her role in this division was often to be an "ear" to students.

The division was also a place where students could turn to find options for issues that they wanted addressed as well as getting information out to faculty and the campus community about life situations that may be affecting their college experience.

Vice- Chancellor,
Business Affairs
10 Years of Service

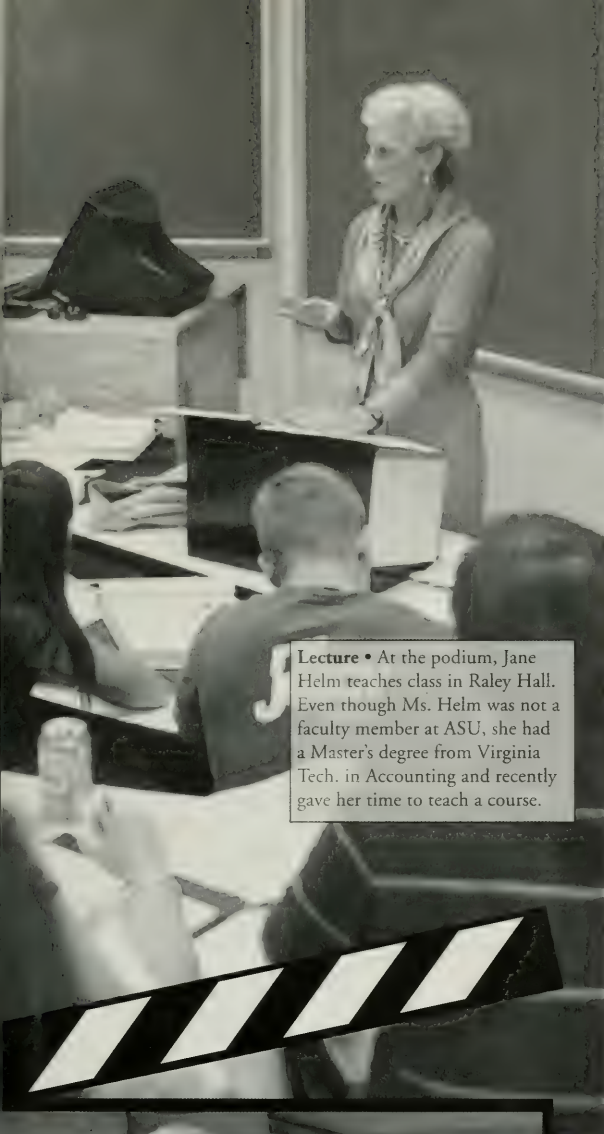

Getting to business

The Department of Business Affairs is the primary financial coordinator for the University, as well as maintaining the physical aspects of the University. The departments within the office included many that students would probably never use, but they played a primary role in the functioning of the University such as the Budget Office, Controller's Office, Materials Management and Purchasing, New River Light and Power, The Broyhill Inn, Physical Plant, Safety and Workers Compensation Office, Switchboard/Centex, Systems and Special Projects. However, Business Affairs also ran some campus departments that students used and interacted with on a daily basis. Food Services, Design and Construction, the Holmes Center, Parking and Traffic, Student Accounts, University Police, the University Bookstore, and the Post office were among these.

The office of Business Affairs was headed by Ms. Jane Helm, Vice-Chancellor of Business Affairs. Ms. Helm came to ASU in 1994, and served as Vice-Chancellor since that time. Other important leaders in the office were Associate Vice-Chancellor Greg Lovins, along with the directors of each of the departments.

An important annual event within the office was the donation of money to students in the form of scholarships. New River Light and Power Company donates nearly $750,000 to scholarships for ASU students annually. The bookstore also made a donation to scholarships yearly of more than $100,000. Jeff Cloninger, Public Relations for the Office of Business Affairs, said, "These two donations were a very important and meaningful contribution to the well-being of our students."

As stated on the office's web site, the mission of the office was to "provide effective fiscal and physical support for ASU and to work diligently to provide staff, faculty, and students with the best products and services while maintaining cost effectiveness." Through each of the departments, the service of Ms. Helm, and the donations to students, the Office of Business Affairs aided students and the University alike.

Lecture • At the podium, Jane Helm teaches class in Raley Hall. Even though Ms. Helm was not a faculty member at ASU, she had a Master's degree from Virginia Tech. in Accounting and recently gave her time to teach a course.

The area of Academic Affairs was responsible for all classes, labs, and studios. They also oversaw the library and were responsible for academic testing and placement testing. They monitored all of the Learning Assistance programs on campus. The department controlled all of the “formal learning experience” at the University.

The Provost, along with the Associate Vice-Chancellors, were key players in running the academic aspects of the University. The Deans of the Colleges and Schools were also critical to the success of academics on campus. This year Interim Provost Kenneth Peacock presided over the Academic Affairs Department. Dr. Peacock served as Dean of the College of Business for 11 years before stepping up to the provost position after Dr. Durham’s retirement. A search was held for the provost position in the spring of 2003. However, the committee did not feel that any of the applicants were suited for the job. Another search is scheduled to begin next year. After Dr. Peacock’s appointment to be Chancellor beginning in July of 2004, Stan Aeschleman took over the Interim position.

In addition to the work done with classes, Academic Affairs also hosted the Honors Reception, planned Convocation and organized all of the graduation ceremonies.

Even with “temporary leadership” the Department of Academic Affairs continued to lead the University in the direction of excellence.

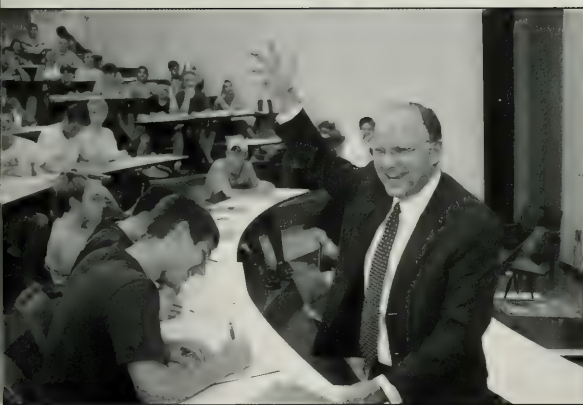

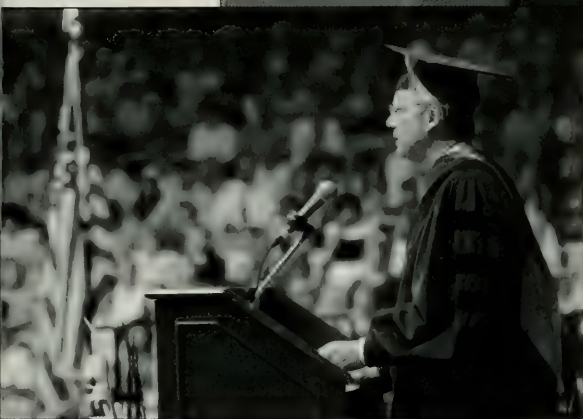

Greeting • At the Friday night Homecoming Reception, Dr. Peacock meets and greets with members of the Appalachian Family. There were events held Friday night as well as before and after the game Saturday for administration, alumni, and friends of the University.

provost stays on for one more year as interim leader

After announcing his retirement as Provost, Dr. Durham was asked by Molly Broad, President of the UNC system, to postpone that retirement for a year and serve as Interim Chancellor; a job which he and his wife accepted, continuing his 38 years of service to the University.

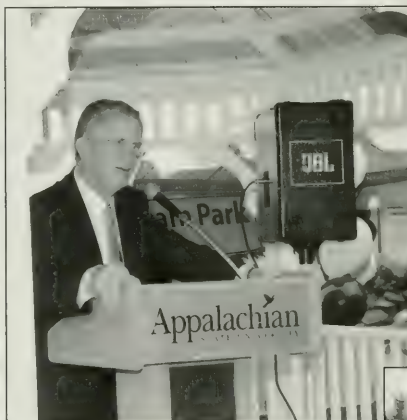

The Chancellor's office oversees every aspect of the University. The office is staffed with many individuals who helped manage Dr. Durham's busy schedule both on an off-campus, as well as preparing and managing the quarterly Board of Trustees meetings held at the Broyhill Inn. Dr. Durham also attended the monthly Board of Governors meeting in Chapel Hill and tracked legislative issues that might have affected the University.

The Chancellor's office staff assisted Mrs. Durham in her duties as a Chancellor's wife. Mrs. Durham was often responsible for entertaining donors and University supports. In addition, the Chancellor's House on Bodenheimer Drive was often a sight for events, where the appropriate preparations had to be made.

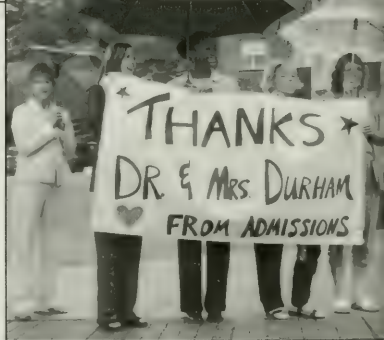

At the end of June, Dr. Durham finally took his retirement. He and his wife plan to remain in the High Country and "keep an eye on the University" as quoted in the University News.

Remarks were made by Dr. Durham Interim Chancellor as well as Chancellor Emeritus Dr. Thomas. About 200 people attended even with the rainy weather.

Christmas Wishes • Dr. and Susan Durham hang stockings for each of their children and grandchildren along the fire place. A photo of the couple was used on the Chancellor's Christmas card which read, "Warmest wishes for the Holidays and through out the new year."

to the pressures of college life.

Clubs and Organizations enriched over 50% of students' lives. Our campus had a total of 238 clubs and organizations. There were 7,475 members that were involved in clubs or organizations. ASU had more females reporting involvement with 4,996 versus males that reported involvement of 2,820. Club involvement proved that students enjoyed side shows to their everyday routine.

Sleek Design • Many students learn through hands-on experience. The lobby of the Kerr Scott Building was renovated by senior interior design students, many of whom participate in the Appalachian Student Interior Design Society. The redesign of the Kerr Scott lobby is the best investment we have ever made at ASIDS," Jennifer Ellis said.

Appalachian Student Interior Design Society

Purpose: To provide an opportunity to meet others in the field of interior design to gain knowledge of the industry.

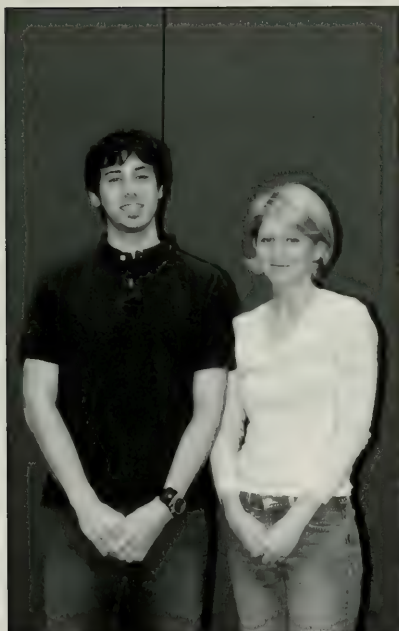

The Appalachian Student Interior Design Society was a club that fostered and promoted fellowship, cooperation, and a spirit of unity between students and professionals throughout the community. ASIDS also emphasized the professional and social aspects of student activities on and off campus. One way that the ASIDS developed community spirit was through participating in the Annual Silent Auction held over homecoming weekend, which has been an event for the previous five years. The club also worked to expand and develop the club members' professional qualifications through advanced education courses, seminars, and lectures. "The club is more oriented to getting students involved and informed on the many aspects of interior design and not just what they see on TV," Seth Johnson said.

Hold On • Marie Murphy and Melissa Mogensen reach for the other raft that hold their fellow club members. As part of an extracurricular activity, some members of the ASU Math Club went rafting on the French Broad. "The rafting trip's main purpose was to help our club members to feel more like a team and to help us form friendships," Marie said.

The Math Club was an organization that was focused on promoting the mathematical sciences. They promoted math through building friendships and lifelong connections with fellow students with similar math interests. "We promote math by being well acquainted with our math professors, and promote it in general through community interaction and volunteer activities," said Math Club president Marie Murphy.

The Math Club participated in an array of activities to enhance their closeness with each other and with the community. Some of these activities included: hosting a tailgate/cookout in front of Walker Hall for the Homecoming game, supporting Samaritan's Purse through a shoebox drive, sponsoring approximately 60 homeless people and cooking a meal for them at the Hospitality House, and selling T-shirts to raise funds for the Humane Society.

As a whole, the club also helped their members remain involved by encouraging them to participate in activities such as the annual Math Modeling contest, and having movie nights where they watched a math-related movie followed by a fun discussion.

Campus Crusade for Christ

Purpose: To be a resource for students desiring spiritual growth, fellowship, and training in student ministry and evangelism.

B-Ball • Participants gather for a group photo after the first annual 3-on-3 basketball tournament. Campus Crusades for Christ planned to host this event again in the future. "Campus Crusade has been a great way to get involved with others around campus. The summer projects and spring break trips are phenomenal experiences," Rebecca Gangi said.

Go Appstate! • ASU Crusade ladies cheer on and encourage the ASU Crusade men during a nightly meeting at Christmas Conference. "CRU is such an awesome way to get plugged in to all the ministries and activities happening with fellow Christians," Leah Baker said.

Campus Crusade for Christ was an organization committed to taking the Gospel of Jesus Christ to all nations. The group cooperated with churches and other Christian organizations to help students grow in their faith and share the Gospel's message. One way Campus Crusade for Christ got their members involved was by attending the Christmas Conference, a five-day event featuring speakers, seminars, and a day of outreach. The regional conference was held in Greensboro, NC, and students from Kentucky to South Carolina were in attendance. "Students were challenged by the conference to live out their beliefs as Christians, and to learn from the Bible," said member Peter Larkins.

The day of outreach was an opportunity for students to give back to the community through the giving of care-packages in needy neighborhoods, and helping families with yard work and other chores. Jason Gregory, a five-year participant of Christmas Conference said, "It is an incredible experience to learn about the Lord and His character." Jason also said the Christmas Conference allowed him to see how the Lord wanted Christians to live and impact ASU with the Gospel of Christ.

International Friendship Association

Purpose: To serve and provide support for international students.

International Friendship Association was a club that developed a harmonious environment and friendship between students of different nationalities and promoted cultural awareness among fellow students. The club aimed to distribute more diversity through our community. Thus, students were able to learn about each others' countries and cultures. The club was open to all students; therefore, the members were from all over the world.

The IFA participated in a variety of programs; such as, the annual International Cafe that was created to promote culture awareness. The International Cafe was a display of different traditional dances, songs, stories, and food from around the world. The Japanese students demonstrated Origami, the Japanese art of paper folding while Chinese students wrote peoples' names in Chinese. Additionally, the IFA showcased different dances from Europe, Latin America and Asia. Students wore traditional dresses from their native countries and shared their traditional cultures and ideas.

The IFA participated in the annual Diversity's Day Celebration, which took place in the spring semester, along with several other events. "We hope to see more and more people get involved with cultural awareness and to create a welcome environment to all the international students and share love and happiness with us," said Nicole Cheng, president of the club.

The Student Government Association was a university-funded organization that was open to all undergraduate students. The group consisted of a president and vice-president and an appointed 11-person cabinet including a chief of staff, a secretary, a treasurer, and chairs of each committee. Each committee was comprised of senators representing either on or off campus students; there were a total of 77 senate seats. Guest speakers ranged from various administrators to the head of the Mountaineer Maniacs at the weekly meetings. Heather Robertson, chief of staff, said, "I love SGA because we can form good relationships with the administration to accomplish things that will benefit the student body."

SGA accomplished many things this year including extending the hours of the Lighter Side, 24-hour computer lab, the mini-market in Cascades, researching the Mountaineer Escort, protesting statewide tuition increases, and sponsored Dribble Day, as well as many pieces of legislation. "The members of the SGA Senate work their hardest to represent student needs and work towards goals that affect real students here at ASU," Student Body President Rachel Johnson said.

The Black and Gold Elite Dancers

Purpose: To promote school spirit, pride, and loyalty.

Jonn Bethane

The Black and Gold Elite Dancers performed competitively in several events, including the Chick-Fil-A Cheer and Dance National Competition in Daytona, Florida. Team members practiced five nights a week and strived for excellence in all their endeavors. Not only did they represent ASU nationally, but they were a strong positive presence within the community. The team volunteered with a local group called Shelter Rock and participated in Campus Cleanup by sponsoring Raley Hall. The team also performed and participated in the Dance-4-A-Chance marathon in the fall. Additionally, they placed third overall in the club division for Homecoming events, and were ranked 13th in Division I AA dance teams.

The dancers were not only talented performers, but they prided themselves in the friendship that was built among the dancers. "I enjoy being on such a close team where we all share the same passion. We hold our standards high, not just on the dance floor but it extends out into the community and to the classroom as well. I think that is unique. I am proud to be an Elite Dancer," Loren Shriner said.

*"I'm in a sorority but the Black and Gold Elite Dancers are like my sorority, too. We eat, breathe, sleep, and dance for nationals, which are held once a year. I have nine other sisters to experience this with."

Lyric: Spoken Word Poetry and Freestyle Rap

Pupose: To let students express themselves through the lyrics of freestyle rap and spoken word.

Nolan/Medley

Vice President: Heidi Bergmann

President: Monica Sanders

Secretary: Lisa Kwong

Founded in August of 2003 by Sabrina Miller, Lyric was a fresh new organization in 2004 trying to make a difference on Appalachian's campus.

"Our mission is to have a place on campus for poets and rappers to express their art," Secretary Lisa Kwong said.

Lyric was open to anyone interested. Club meetings usually lasted an hour. During the meetings, participants had the choice to share their compositions with each other or to simply take it all in and listen to the others perform. Lyric strived to give each contributor an equal opportunity to share his or her talent with the organization and fellow students. Lyric joined with the Men's Service Club to sponsor a Poetry Slam and talent show featured on campus.

Not only did the club bring fellow poets and rappers together within the university, it also reached out into the community with its services. Lyric's president, Monica Sanders, performed at the 2004 MLK Challenge commemoration ceremony. Lyric also teamed up with the Black Student Association and the NAACP to help celebrate Black Awareness Month. The organization was invited to perform at multiple events including a benefit for the Women's March on Washington and the Sears Diversity Celebration. For the future, the members of Lyric hoped to spread the word about the club and increase student involvement. They also planned to put on and participate in more projects and performances, including another poetry slam and rap battle.

Prospective Teachers of Mathematics Association

Purpose: To promote awareness for the mathematics teaching profession.

The club was devoted to preparing tomorrow's teachers for their futures in education while focusing on math. The club meetings featured guest speakers currently involved in the educational field that presented a variety of topics. Elementary, middle, and secondary teachers and school administrators from the surrounding region provided members with information on hands-on math activities, math integration into the curriculum, classroom management, national board certification, and interviewing skills.

Members gained ideas and materials they could use in their future classrooms pertaining to teaching strategies, skills for working with students who have special needs, and teaching students to speak English as a second language. The club also invited student teachers to share their experiences and knowledge. Members were given the opportunity to attend the North Carolina Council of Teachers of Mathematics state and regional math conferences. The PTMA strived to increase the knowledge of its members about education and instruction and to provide an opportunity to network with their fellow students.

Representing • The members of the Black Student Association proudly hold their sign in the Homecoming parade. Various clubs and organizations walked down King Street, showing their school spirit. "We had to get up really early; we walked and chanted for the university. We were able to spread diversity, educate the university and get our name out on campus," Steven Rubin said.

The Black Student Association served as a haven for the celebration of African American culture. BSA was committed to promoting a positive image on campus and the African American community at large. The objective was to promote cultural awareness, be a voice behind African American students, bring unity to the other African American organizations on campus, and preserve the essence of the African American heritage.

"The Black Student Association had set new standards this last year, and we were proving that we could surpass them," said Shalonda Goodwin, President of BSA. "We've grown over the years from an Advisory Board and 3 members to a well working unit averaging 20 members and 4 dedicated officers."

The BSA participated in multiple projects including their annual sponsorship of the Red Cross Blood Drive and Bone Marrow Drive while continuing to celebrate Black History all spring with projects and activities. "The Black Student Association, with the help of our advisors, Mrs. Tracey Wright and Mr. Anwar Cruter, is proudly striving to fulfill the mission and is looking forward to the years to come," Shalonda said.

Appalachian Student Ambassadors

Purpose: To promote goodwill to alumni and prospective students.

Located in the John E. Thomas Building, the Student Ambassadors have been serving the University since 1977. The main goal of the ambassadors was to create a positive connection between students and alumni. "Ambassadors is far and away the most professional, on point organization that I have had the chance to be a part of at ASU, and has helped me develop my speaking skills, organizational abilities and leadership skills," Dave English, fourth year Ambassador, said.

Members represented their organization by attending almost all university sponsored events, activities, and programs. The group greeted guests upon arrival at home football games and served as student representatives at university board and committee meetings. Each ambassador also volunteered his or her time to visit hometown high schools and gave guided university tours to prospective students. Rain or shine, snow or ice, these students were committed to offering their services and upholding the "Tradition of Excellence."

The group has also won many awards. Most recently, this organization was the proud recipient of the ASAP District III Award for "Outstanding Program: Chancellor for a Day."

Western Wear • Ambassadors perform a skit to inform students about their group activities. The information session was held in Whitewater in Plemmons Student Union. "I want ASU to be the same amazing place in 20 years that it is today; Ambassadors has given me a way to do my part in helping out with this," Dave said.

Making Contacts • During their membership drive in the spring semester, Kristal Mills and Michael Trivette work a contact table in the Student Union. "One of our most effective strategies for publicity is working contact tables. It gives us an opportunity to meet many applicants," Kristal said.

Graphic Arts Student Association

Purpose: To facilitate and manage the Professional Development Activities (PDA) recommended by the GAIT Industry Board of Directors.

John Beaton

The Graphic Arts Student Association was an organization that was based in the Graphic Arts and Imaging Technology major. The goals of this organization were to increase industry contacts in the field and to maximize awareness of the everyday technology changes in the industry.

Some of the annual events that GASA sponsored and participated in were: a T-shirt design contest that was sponsored by various businesses in the area, a cookout for members of the club, and Career Connections Day. Career Connections Day was an annual event that brought in interviewers from companies in North and South Carolina to recruit students for internships and permanent job positions who were currently juniors and seniors.

A major benefit of membership in GASA was to gain leadership skills, to prepare students for the job market, and to experience the world of printing.

Graphics Expo • In the showroom, GASA students wander through the company displays. This expo in Chicago was one of the biggest in the United States and is an annual event. "GASA has given me leadership experience that wasn't available elsewhere," Suzanne Peterson said.

Lunch and Listen • The guys of Higher Ground sing in Cascades on the lower level of Plemmons Student Union. The group has a tradition of performing all over campus. "The most exciting part about being in Higher Ground is when you are performing in front of hundreds of students representing ASU," said Matt Ausman.

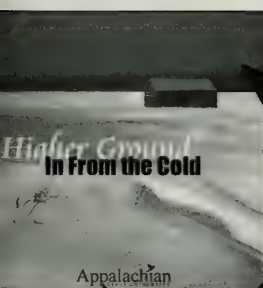

Higher Ground was started in the fall of 2000 by fifteen men. They wanted to sing in a contemporary a cappella group that would compete and perform across other college campuses around North Carolina and the nation. Since then, the group has recorded two CD's and been ranked in the top 100 groups in the nation twice while competing in the International Championship of Collegiate A Cappella (ICCA). The group has fluctuated each year with the number of members participating, but the music and the camaraderie has remained strong.

Higher Ground A Capella

Purpose: To give ASU students a reprieve from hectic college life by singing and performing music we love.

Sharing the Spotlight • The spring concert for Higher Ground was with the UNC-G Baritones. "I really enjoyed this concert because it was one of my most compelling moments," John Pendley said.

Lutheran Students of ASU

Purpose: To provide a Christian community in which members can grow in their faith and discipleship.

LSA stood for Lutheran Students of Appalachian. "This name may be misleading because of the number of different students' backgrounds of faith," said President Kevin Patterson.

Bible studies, retreats, afternoon hikes, and camp outings, were a few of the fun activities in which this club participated. Grace Lutheran Church provided their support by offering sponsorship and housing to the club. In return, club members offered their services to church members; such as, yard work, housecleaning, child care, and tutoring. Along with holding annual blood drives, LSA participated in the following campus activities: clean-up projects, the Martin Luther King, Jr. Challenge Day, and Club Expo in the fall. "This gathering of students is unique and special and filled with high energy and lots of fun!" said Becca Pivetta, campus pastor for LSA.

The purpose of this club was to help students grow closer in faith and friendship, to serve others, and to partner with other clubs in bettering the campus community.

Homecoming Banner • During October, members of Peer Career display their Homecoming banner in their office before submitting it for judging. "Peer Career has taught me how to be patient and how to lead underclassmen to meeting their goals," Jessica Faison said.

Peer Career was an organization that was co-sponsored by the Counseling Center and the Career Development Center. Peer Career's mission was to provide free professional and paraprofessional counseling to students. Student volunteers primarily operated the office and became involved with student life while enhancing their communication, organization, helping, and teamwork skills. "Peer Careerians" provided class assignment facilitation and programmed outreach for faculty, staff, and student organizations.

The office operated on a 4-step decision-making program. These steps included: Self assessment, Career Information, Decision Making, and Career Planning. Students who utilized Peer Career the best, came early during their freshmen year and continued visiting throughout their years in school.

Since the majority of people in the workforce spend, on average, 86,000 hours working from graduation to retirement, focus was the theme of Career Peer's slogan; "Does your career need a little direction? We'll give you a kick in the compass!"

Society of Professional Journalists

Purpose: To assist the members in acquiring the noblest principles of journalism.

The Society of Professional Journalists had one goal in mind: to help students further their experience and knowledge in the field of journalism. The organization had three alumni panels that were created to assist members. Three graduate students spoke to the club about issues in the industry, how to find jobs, and what to expect in 'the real world;' the Watauga County chief of police spoke about accessing public records. The organization also helped students with a resume clinic and also helped out the community by participating in various service projects. The group collected canned food for the Chancellor-for-a-Day project and for a Ukrainian family. The organization raised money for journalism conventions. Eight members attended the Region 12 Convention in Nashville. "I would like to see more service projects and fundraisers to be able to send more members to national conventions," stated President Tyler Finnerty.

Pi Sigma Epsilon is a part of a national co-ed business fraternity that has been a part of ASU for the past twenty-some years. The fraternity's purpose is to "seek to promote good business practices through community involvement and extra curricular activities," stated President Colin Miller. The fraternity made great accomplishments during the school year. One of the main goals for the organization was recruitment in order to "rebuild the organization." PSE grew from just over a dozen members at the beginning of the school year to forty-five members. A big hit was the Annual Golf Tournament held to raise money for the Watauga Youth Network. Karaoke Night at Geno's was another one of the fraternity's marketing projects. The club also participated in many smaller, but equally important, service projects including Adopt-a-Street and assisting the Blazing Saddles.

Hispanic Student Association

Purpose: To establish a context for shared experiences among Hispanic students and to increase awareness of the Hispanic presence on campus.

For being such a new organization, The Hispanic Student Association made multiple accomplishments within the past few years. Founded in 1998, the Hispanic Student Association brought together students of Spanish decent to share their culture with the surrounding community. The organization held monthly pot lucks to celebrate their culture and bond with fellow members. In order to spread the word about HSA around campus, the club stayed active in campus and community involvement. Once a semester, the members of the Hispanic Student Association held free dance clinics for all to attend. In the fall of 2003 HSA performed and taught volunteers how to salsa and meringue at the Dance-4-a-Chance Dance Marathon. The club hosted a chocolate festival in the Plemmons Student Union and held an art exhibit at the Turchin Art Center for the Day of the Dead, or "dia de los muertos." In regards to the future of the club, 2004 President, Laura Limon said, "I would like to see the club grow and become more of a home for Latino students. I want to see the Latino population at Appalachian State University increase."

The Collegiate Middle Level Association was a professional educational organization created for future middle school educators. CMLA's main purpose was to prepare students by enhancing members' concepts and practices of middle level education. The organization also kept members informed about middle level job opportunities.

The club encouraged interaction between future educators and local middle school students, helped to enhance professional growth, and knowledge of school concepts and philosophies. "CMLA is a place where people who are interested in teaching adolescents can come for insightful knowledge and great ideas," said club historian Aaron Bridges.

The members attended conferences to learn more on subject areas and strategies for the classroom. CMLA took pride in the strength and talent of its leaders who helped the club remain one of the leading undergraduate chapters in the nation.

The Junior Panhellenic consisted of a few new members from each sorority. Here is where the girls get to sit in on the Panhellenic Council and also hold meetings of their own on issues of new recruitment. This club also gave new members the chance to meet other girls in the sorority community. This helped to make the bonds of Greeks stronger. Ann Holladay said, "I was able to meet so many other people through Junior Panhellenic. I am definitely interested in continuing to be involved and in working with the other sororities. I look forward to being on the National Panhellenic Council next year."

The Panhellenic Council is a governing body who works with and oversees all the national sororities affiliated with Appalachian. Panhellenic helps to unify the individual chapters and make the Greek system stronger. The National Panhellenic Council is recognized as a major campus organization, which provides services and programming for the sororities, the University, and the community. Each sorority has three delegates representing each of the seven sororities on ASU's campus.

PHC provides an opportunity for women to become a part of the sorority system during formal RUSH in the fall. This organization continues to develop leaders, offer a sense of belonging and community for members, provide service to others, and promote scholarship.

Treble Choir

Purpose: To provide an outlet to individual music talent and to further the musical education of its members.

"A Break from the Ordinary"

The Treble Choir was a class and club that consisted of 40-60 girls. The members could be from any background or major. Choir members sang at various churches from all around such as Charlotte and Rutherfordton. They also sang at a concert held at ASU every fall and spring semester.

Apart from the Treble Choir, there was a special club/class called Triple Trio. Any female student could join Triple Trio, but they had to audition first. Students had to register for the class to receive one hour of credit. Triple Trio was a Barbershop A Capella group composed of nine girls. The group competed in the North Carolina Barbershop Competition and also sang for special occasions such as weddings and formals. Treble Choir and Triple Trio had a semiformal held in the spring semester that was open to all students, as well as alumni.

Their motto was "A Break from the Ordinary," which member Crystal Thomas believed "represents what we are because we all come from different backgrounds and you really enjoy everyone for the same reason because it is fun and we all love music!"

Gamma Epsilon Tau

Purpose: To honor students excelling in the Graphic Arts and Imaging Technology major and to provide networking for those students.

Gamma Epsilon Tau was a national co-ed printing fraternity that allowed students to interact in professional and social atmospheres. GET, translated in Greek, was "The science of knowledge of the art and craft of letters," and was made up of undergraduate graphic arts students. Members of GET were committed to excellence in graphic arts and were sincere in their purpose and involvement. The Gamma Epsilon Tau chapter at Appalachian State has grown tremendously since its beginning. Aside from forming a tight-knit group of students sharing similar interests, GET was active within the university and out into the community. GET planned activities for the summer Drupa Graphic Arts Expo in Germany and organized print workshops and seminars. The club printed and produced its own memorabilia, including member tee shirts. GET held various fundraisers such as the computer Smash 'n Bash in 2004. As club president, Lauren Graham stated, "We want GET to continue to grow and to let students know that it is a student run organization and their participation makes a difference. That is our main goal."

Appalachian & the Community Together

Purpose: To provide diverse opportunities for individuals and student groups to get involved in human services and environmental advocacy, as well as assist faculty members with integrating community service projects into their academic courses.

Appalachian and the Community Together was ASU's clearing-house for community service and serving-learning opportunities. This was a place where student groups got involved in human services and assisted faculty members with community service projects. The purpose of this club was to challenge students to develop personally, morally, and culturally as they engaged in service projects. With over 80 nonprofit organizations in the High Country area there were hundreds of ways to get involved.

The impACT Team members were undergraduate student leaders who served as outreach specialists to inform ASU students about service learning opportunities. They also helped groups and classes make meaningful connections to the non-profit community. Team members facilitated group discussions, promoted upcoming ACT projects, and aided social awareness activities.

Circle K was an organization that wanted to promote service to the local community. It was a collegiate level extension of the Kiwanis International Organization. Circle K's goals were to exceed the previous years service hours, increase their membership, increase campus awareness about the organization, and to service the Boone community.

Some of the annual events Circle K was involved in included ushering for home football games, a monthly literacy promotion for public libraries in the community, and attending district and international conventions to strengthen the organization's ties at Appalachian.

Kappa Kappa Psi

Kappa Kappa Psi was a national co-ed honorary band fraternity. The main function of the organization was to support the band program at Appalachian. Kappa Kappa Psi participated in several events, some of which they had started this year. Events that the organization continued to participate in annually were Band Field Day, Band Olympics, and a dinner banquet for the band. Twice annually they participated in audition proctoring. They had daily ensemble set-ups, and provided themselves as ushers for concerts. This year Kappa Kappa Psi began to participate in Litter Sweep, which was part of the Adopt-A-Highway program. Another event new to the group this year was supporting a national officer of Kappa Kappa Psi who was diagnosed with breast cancer. The group made a larger cluster for a quilt that was then sent to a national level to be added to a larger quilt.

ASU Sweethearts

Purpose: To support and enhance the Appalachian and Boone communities.

The ASU Sweethearts formed on ASU's campus in 1992, as a service club, called the Alpha Sweethearts. The Alpha Sweethearts was a little sister auxiliary with the brothers of Alpha Phi Alpha. When the leaders of the Greek community banned little sister organizations, the Alpha Sweethearts had to reorganize and became what they are today, the ASU Sweethearts. Also known as the Ladies of Black and Gold, the organization was quite large, residing not only in North Carolina but also in surrounding states across the U.S. President Alexandria Elliot said, "Our job now, more than ever, is to provide for the betterment of service, leadership, sisterhood, and our communities (both in Boone and our hometowns)."

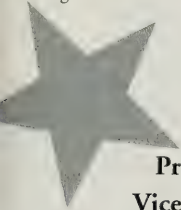

Each year the Sweethearts participated in the Women's Leadership Conference and the Diversity Celebration, both on campus, and the local Unity Festival held at Boone United Methodist Church with coordinator Cindy Paciles. They also made an appearance at the Kwanzaa Festival, Miss Black and Gold Pageant, and the Black Faculty and Staff Banquet.

This year the club brought in 11 new girls who, Alexandria said, were really motivated about the service projects the Sweethearts partook in. "We are very proud of these girls and we look forward to the legacy that they will carry on here at Appalachian," Alexandria said.

The Appalachian

John Remmon

From humorous columns to hard news stories, the campus newspaper, The Appalachian, strived to report campus news. This student run organization published and distributed the newspaper twice a week to let students know what was happening on campus. The Appalachian was an award-winning publication, earning 4 stars from the Associate Collegiate Press.

The student publication office was a friendly and welcoming environment, which helped to increase newspaper productivity and success. "I think that it is great to work with friends. Everyone has a job, but to get to work with fifteen good friends every day is a real blessing," said Justin Boulmay.

Keeping with the tradition of striving for excellence, the newspaper staff hoped to earn a fifth star from the ACP and continue to build on the foundation that had been set. "We hope to one day be the top campus newspaper in the nation," stated Editor-in-Chief, James Nix.

Along with receiving awards, The Appalachian conquered the major accomplishment of bringing the newspaper staff and yearbook staff together. After 10 years of the newspaper having their own space in the student publications office, staff members found themselves inconvenienced by having to share space with the newly revived yearbook. The only other option was to share space, and the staffs in the Student Publications Office found themselves inconvenienced by this arrangement. With time, they found middle ground and adjusted to each others' schedules and space.

Staff Meeting • Every Sunday night, the staff editors meet to discuss and critique the issues published during the previous week. The paper covered topics that ranged from campus news to movie reviews. "The newspaper staff was well trained and committed, and was able to successfully publish over 50 issues of the newspaper while sharing space with the revived student yearbook. This is a senior dominated staff, so we will lose a lot of talent and experience through graduation," said David Freeman, Director of Student Publications.

Making Contacts • The Marching Mountaineer's pose in the Block "A" logo as part of their pre-game show. Some of the other formations included a "S" and "U." The marching band was the largest club on campus.

The Marching Mountaineers, known throughout the southeast as "North Carolina's Band of Distinction," performed twice during each home football game during the season. The group performed at pregame and halftime, with shows including a classical show and a 70's rock show. In addition, the band played tunes during time outs and breaks in the game from the stands.

As part of the Hayes School of Music, the marching band was the not only the largest ensemble on campus, but the largest club on campus, including over 200 students. Highlights from the 2003 season included a road trip to Furman University for the ASU-Furman football game, an exhibition performance at East Burke High School in Connelly Springs, North Carolina, and the purchase of new mellophones and baritones for the band's use.

The Wesley Foundation

Purpose: To provide opportunities for Christian fellowship, nature, service, and worship for students.

The Wesley Foundation's main purpose was to foster fellowship with other believers and encourage spiritual growth. The Wesley Foundation was a club that for many of the members served as a home away from home. It was a place where all the members could come together and join in fellowship with other believers. Within this foundation, members felt having a close-knit community was important.

"This foundation is different from others because we actually have a building where students can come at any time of the day and hang out, play games, watch television; it's great!" said President Megan Robinson.

Special events in which the The Wesley Foundation participated included maintaining their relationship with a covenant in Monterrey, Mexico. Megan said, "Our connection is with a seminary in Mexico, and one year we will go down to visit them and the next they will come and visit us in Boone." The members were able to share with others the same beliefs, while also being able to travel and learn.

The Wesley Foundation was involved in other campus activities; such as, weekly Wednesday night programs and Bible study. The foundation also had a choir that traveled around the state and country bringing worship songs to the community.

Burke County Cohort

Purpose: An off-campus night program for non-traditional special education majors.

The Burke County Special Education Cohort started out in 2001 as the first special education cohort associated with ASU. The cohort was started because of the great demand for an off-campus night program for adults that had very active lives. "All of us are non-traditional students that work full-time jobs, have families, and go to school full time," student, Mark Patrick, said. To accommodate the students, the class met from 5:30 until 9:30 twice a week.

In the semester of 2003, the original 60 members had dwindled down to only 12 due to the challenging demeanor of the class. The students in the program had to take classes that were geared toward students with special needs, which were not offered in regular education classes. Some of these classes included Introduction to Emotional Disabilities, Introduction to Mental Retardation and Assessment in Special Education. "We are all so very passionate about helping to change the situation that our special education students go through in schools; we are all eager to get this degree and get started in helping mold the minds of the future," student, Torie Barker, said.

The Burke County Cohort all completed an internship together at Rutherford College Elementary School in the fall of 2003 where they tutored students that had reading difficulties. Many of the tutors felt that made a difference because the elementary school won an award for having the most students reading on or above grade level.

Many of the students decided to major in special education for the pure joy of helping others. "I worked as a nurse for many years and decided that I wanted to be more than a pill pusher. So, I changed my major and went into education. However, education wasn't enough. I requested to work with special needs children and I knew the first day that I was where I wanted to be and I wanted to make a difference," Mark said.

Student Health Advisory Committee

The Student Health Advisory Committee made a difference. The purpose of the organization was to act as a liaison between students and the Health Services staff at the university. Students with experiences and interests in health-related fields dedicated their time to this organization.

The goals of the club were to inform students about health issues, create awareness of health services offered, and represent the students to the administration on health related topics that are of concern. The Student Health Advisory Committee's membership included representatives from the Student Government Association, the director of Health Services, the director of the Wellness Center, and staff members from Health Services.

"We helped with projects such as administering the flu vaccination, health fairs, and improving the atmosphere and quality of the health services."

The ASU Dance Team performed at all men's home basketball games on the sidelines and at halftime. At the Southern Conference Tournament, the team supported and performed for both the men and women's games.

The girls also taught a dance routine to the Mountaineer Maniacs and performed with them during halftime. In addition, the team contributed their time and talent to the community when they participated in the Dance-4-A-Chance Dance Marathon held in the fall at Legends to raise money for children's charities.

"Being an active member of the dance team during my college career left me with memories that I will hold close to my heart forever. Sharing the laughter, fun times, and joy of dancing with such an awesome group of girls is something that I deeply cherish. The ASU Dance Team truly expressed what it means when the dancer and the dance become one," Senior Kitch Shytle said.

The Women's Center was formed after two decades of discussion in the fall of 1998. The organization, completely ran by volunteers and graduate assistants, strived to be part of the community by offering support and information for everyone, men and women alike. The center prided themselves on not only being a support club, but also a resource center and referral service. Issues that they helped the community understand included information on eating disorders, self-esteem, stress management, contraceptives, relationship issues, sexual assault and rape. They also offered a book and magazine library and special program for resident halls.

Some of the past events that the Women's Center sponsored or co-sponsored included the Walk for Awareness, Abigail Adams Birthday Dinner, Vagina Monologues, Women's Leadership Conference and Breast Cancer Awareness.

Renewable Energy Initiative

Purpose: To provide the campus with renewable technologies in buildings and on university property.

What is REI? It is a Renewable Energy Initiative that set up a fund for renewable energy on campus. Through REI, the campus had the opportunity to be forerunners in the rapidly growing industry of renewable energy as the nation recognized the importance of fossil fuels. "ASU uses about 2 million gallons of fuel oil per year," as stated in a REI handout.

This spring semester REI gave the students the chance to vote on the support of the REI fund, which passed with an 81 percent vote in the initial election. Solar Energy Society President Ernie V. Hodgson said if enough students vote to approve the plan, REI would set up a fund for the installation of renewable energy technologies on campus. "Solar panels could be installed in street lights, the parking deck and emergency phones on campus, and Applectart could use biofuel," Ernie said.

"Students will be charged a $5 fee, which will go into the fund for renewable energy systems," Ernie said. "A committee of students, faculty and administration will be set up to research and decide what projects to undertake." The construction of renewable energy technologies would include solar electric, solar thermal, wind and biofuel.

Solar Power • Here members of REI are working with a PhotoVoltaic Solar System. "We had to check out the PV Solar System to make sure it worked properly and was charged. Then we installed it in a house," said Ernie Hodgson who helped with the installation.

Sigma Nu

Sigma Nu's favorite brotherhood came at the end of every school year. "The Oyster Roast is an annual event that we do with another fraternity," said Josh Davis. This fun event helped the fraternity to "de-stress" before exam time. This was a great way for Sigma Nu to use their involvement in Greek life for campus involvement and getting to know people who are in other organizations.

This active chapter also has a unique and fun philanthropies, that takes place during football season. The brothers of Sigma Nu get together to help raise money for the American Cancer Society. The boys picked a Saturday game day and took turns jogging from Boone to Charlotte. "This is a fun way to raise money for the community and is also a great time to strengthen our brotherhood," said DJ McCabe.

The Sigma Nu fraternity enjoyed social functions, retreats, athletics, mixers, and informal get-togethers. They were known to have "common diversity." Ralph Jodice said, "We have several different types of guys with the same core values." This is what made their brotherhood so strong.

"The thing I like most is the closeness of all the guys in Sigma Nu. I think a lot of people can see this by how well we all get along," said Treayor Smith.

Kappa Delta

Pi Kappa Alpha

Pi Kappa Alpha was an active and involved fraternity, ranking in with over 80 members. The guys who made up this organization were scholars, gentlemen, athletes, and leaders. "We are a group of well-rounded men, and we all take a lot of pride in our fraternity," said Adam Taylor.

Pi Kappa Alpha were the Greek Week Winners and worked hard as a brotherhood to achieve this goal. They liked to hang out and enjoy their annual Blue Hawaiian Mixer, which they have done annually for 6 years. "This is a great event because we try to get everyone out to our house dressed in beach theme. We also always get a great band to play. This year we got Oz," says Ryan Cottrell.

The sisters of Delta Zeta worked to raise money for charities associated with the hearing impaired, including the Better Hearing Institute. Delta Zeta also participated in local events, such as the polar plunge and various community service activities.

"Our group of girls gives generously of their efforts to better the community in every way possible," said active member Katie Farmer.

The sisters take a lot of pride in Greek Life at ASU, which helped them win Lip Sync in 2003, and the title of Greek Week Champions in 2004.

Alpha Phi

Founded in 1991, Alpha Phi was a sorority dedicated to its philanthropies. The Theta Nu chapter continually raised money for the national Alpha Phi Foundation, improving cardiac care for victims coping with the number one killer in women.

In the spring, Alpha Phi held the "Move Your Phi't" campus run, for which all of the money went to the Alpha Phi Foundation.

Every fall, the sorority held a fire truck wash with the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity in honor of those who risk their lives for others. Alpha Phi also held week long "Teddy Attacks", striving to achieve community kindness all week long. The sorority held "Putt for a Buck" getting both the community and students involved. As if that wasn't enough, the ladies of Alpha Phi walked dogs at the Humane Society, baked "Cookies for Cops", and cleaned up their adopted street. Many of the sisters not only participated in the sorority, but also held leadership positions in other organizations. Some of these included CRSA, SGA, College Republicans, Peer Leaders, Appol Corps, and Panhellenic Council. "To me Alpha Phi means sisterhood. In Alpha Phi, I have made friends that will last a lifetime and it is home away from home," said President Sarah Marie Daughtry.

Delta Chi

Every fraternity was different and unique, but on campus, the Delta Chi Fraternity took pride in their diversity. Being involved in several different clubs helped this organization get their name out across campus. "I really like how we have so many different types of people in our fraternity. There are always new people to learn things from and to do stuff with," said Shayan Bazooband.

Delta Chi participated in several activities on campus and also in the community. For the past three years, Delta Chi has held the Byron Cherry Date Auction at Klondike. The money that was raised went to the Autism Foundation. The fund-raiser was named after a fraternity member who was killed a few years ago in a car accident. "This fund-raiser is our most successful and it really means a lot to all our brothers," said President Jordan Childs.

Chi Omega

Chi Omega was built through a strong sisterhood. The girls of Chi Omega grew closer to each other through their many activities such as social events, community service, participation in their philanthropy, and overnight sisterhoods.

Chi Omega established a program with their philanthropy, Make-A-Wish Foundation. It is the spirit of community service that brought the sisters of Chi Omega into the Make-A-Wish family. Chi O received the Most Outstanding Fundraiser Event Award for their annual softball tournament. Aleah Haene said, "We all worked very hard to make this event as successful as possible. We have all day and get to raise money for Make-A-Wish too." All sisters are very involved and committed to planning the softball tournament. The day is full of fun for all organizations and the community of Boone. "The softball tournament is so much fun even if you don't play softball. We make hotdogs for the players and get to cheer for all the different teams," said Senior Sandy Watt.

In the community, TKE sponsors the TKE Toy Drive, which helps underprivileged families provide their children with Christmas presents. They continue to participate in the clean-up of Deerfield Road, which is their adopt-a-street, as well their adopt-a-campus location near the post office.

Sigma Kappa

Sigma Kappa was not only a sorority, but it was a family as well. "Sigma Kappa is really like my family away from home. These girls are the sweetest, most dedicated, most caring people. I am really lucky to be part of such a wonderful group," said President Sarah Bolton. Sigma Kappa took pride in their diversity and strong bond among sisters. Sigma Kappa was always lending a helping hand to anyone in need. The sorority was one of the leading donors in the nation for the Alzheimer's Association. Each year, Sigma Kappa held a memory walk to raise money for this special cause. Come rain, snow, sleet, or hail, these women braved all conditions to help with Alzheimer's research. Not only did Sigma Kappa donate money, they also donated time with local geriatric patients at the assisted living center. The ladies of Sigma Kappa helped to brighten the days of their "adopted grandparents" when they delivered gifts, played bingo, or just stopped by to chat. Sigma Kappa strived to be as involved in the community as possible, participating in Adopt-a-Street, OASIS, the Humane Society, Special Olympics, and more. These activities brought the sorority closer to the community and closer to each other.

Theta Chi

The Theta Chi fraternity was committed to serving others in and out of the community. Just as the motto states, the men of Theta Chi go out of their way to "extend a helping hand." Regardless of whether the favor was returned, Theta Chi stressed the importance of good deeds. The fraternity acknowledged the demand for equality and strived to see eye to eye with everyone. These traits were demonstrated best through Theta Chi's annual Lids 4 Kids fund-raiser. Originated by Appalachian State alumni, Jonathan Fulcher, Lids 4 Kids raised money to buy hats for children undergoing chemotherapy treatment. Fulcher, who recently passed away, began Lids 4 Kids as a small local fund-raiser and by 2004 Lids 4 Kids was spreading nationwide. As a tribute, the Theta Chi Annual Golf Tournament was held in "Jon Jon" Fulcher's memory.

Not only was Theta Chi extremely active in the community with Lids 4 Kids, Laps for Apps and street cleanups, but this fraternity also continued to build strength and community within the university chapter. President Patrick McBride said, "Everyone brings something different to the table." Regarding the future, Theta Chi hoped to see growth in the entire Greek community, more cooperation and less competition between the various sororities and fraternities. Theta Chi also hoped to continue to build the chapter in strength and numbers.

The Alpha Delta Pi sorority is one of seven sororities at Appalachian State University. Like the others, ADPi took pride in their philanthropic and community involvement. "Our chapter has a great community service record and we would like to become increasingly more involved with the community in the future," stated public relations chair Kara Foster. As a chapter, the ladies of Alpha Delta Pi continually made donations to their philanthropy, The Ronald McDonald House. In April 2004, the sorority held a Big Mac Eat-a-

Thon relay race to raise money for the house. "The Ronald McDonald House is close to the heart of every sister in Alpha Delta Pi," said Caitlin Lally. With the sales of the "Men of Appalachian" calendars, ADPi raised $8500 that was donated to two sisters from the Appalachian State chapter who were battling cancer personally or with their families. On February 25, 2004 the sorority held their bi-annual Bone Marrow Drive and raised $3510 for the organization. The women of Alpha Delta Pi continually showed their compassion for the community and for each other through their involvement on and off campus. As New Member Coordinator, Kate Miller states, "Alpha Delta Pi has taught me the importance and the value of friendship."

Kappa Alpha Order

Kappa Alpha Order, founded on campus in 1976, was not just any fraternity but a "group of gentlemen". The fraternity brought men together on campus for the common purpose of creating lifelong friendships and involvement with community service. The men of Kappa Alpha Order prided themselves in their community involvement, ranging from minor services to major fundraising events. The fraternity participated in Adopt-A-Highway street cleanup, volunteered at the Watauga Humane Society, and donated canned foods to the Canned Food Drive. Kappa Alpha Order also participated in the 2004 Homecoming festivities, their float placing second in the Homecoming parade. One of the major events put on by the fraternity in 2004 was the Blood Drive. Held multiple times a year, the Blood Drive brought in 120 donors in one day and earned the Kappa Alpha Order fraternity award recognition from their national office. The fraternity's main philanthropic, the Muscular Dystrophy Association, held an important part within the organization. In 2004, KA held a golf tournament raising money for the Muscular Dystrophy Association. All proceeds were donated to assist MDA. "In the future, I hope to make this fundraiser bigger and better, branching out to more participants and volunteers in order to raise more money for MDA," stated the 2004 President, Karl Schellhammer.

Alpha Sigma Phi

Alpha Sigma Phi was a new fraternity that joined the IFC (Interfraternity Council) this January. "The setting up of this brotherhood took a lot of time and was difficult, but I think we have a strong foundation and I am excited to see the growth of it in the next few years," said founder Nick Gust.

Service projects are a big deal to the Alpha Sigma Phi members. They are active all over Boone, but especially with the Humane Society. The group also has a unique way of being more active in the community. "We like to do a community service project with an organization, before we have a social function with them," said Nick.

In the fall, Alpha Sigma Phi and the Student Association of Social Work sponsored a canned food drive as part of a Halloween Festival for the Hunger Coalition families. This allows them not only to be an active group, but gives them the opportunity to get their name out with the other organizations.

Sororities like Phi Mu participated in charities and service projects, called philanthropies, throughout the year. Phi Mu's philanthropy was the Carolina Children's Ward. To raise money, the group sponsored a change drive and a closet cleanout.

The members of Phi Mu were also involved in the community when they chaperoned a Watauga Youth Network dance for middle schoolers. "This dance was fun and exciting for not only us, but for the kids too! Not only is our outreach to the campus, but it is to the community as well," Katie Clickner said.

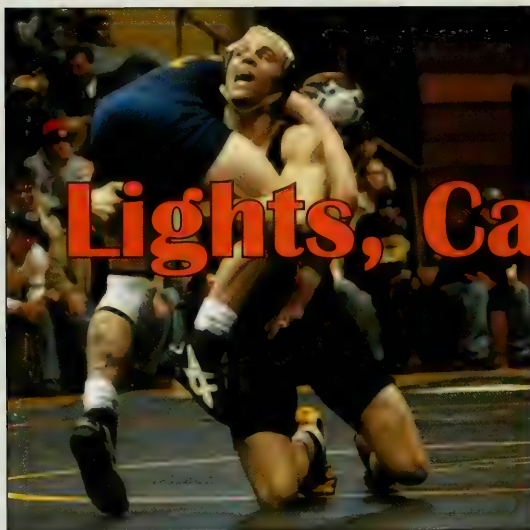

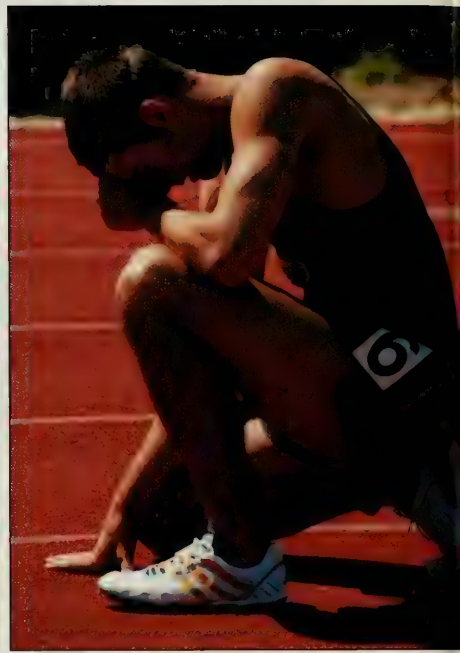

The biggest fundraiser came when all the sisters came together to usher, clean, and lay down the floor for events at the George M. Holmes Convocation Center.

Phi Mu raises approximately $7,000 a year and all of the funds go to the group's philanthropy. New member Anna Stocker said their philanthropy is one of the reasons she chose to rush Phi Mu. "Personally, I think this is one of the best philanthropies to have."

THE MASK

This feature of Yosef was added in 1983. An essential piece to the overall outfit, the mask of Yosef portrayed the official look of the typical mountain man. This original mask was changed in 2000, but continues to have the same features, such as his beard and hat.

THE GUN

Yosef's gun was a very important part of ASU Athletics. Yosef fired the gun before the start of football games, and when ASU scored a touchdown during the game.

THE OUTFIT

Originally, students would dress up in overalls and a flannel shirt to be the mascot, Yosef. This traditional dress has continued and still was present today. Many years Yosef changed his outfit for different occasions; some examples included the hippie style, a lifeguard shirt, and biker wear. These outfits added color and style to the one looked at for pride and cheer.

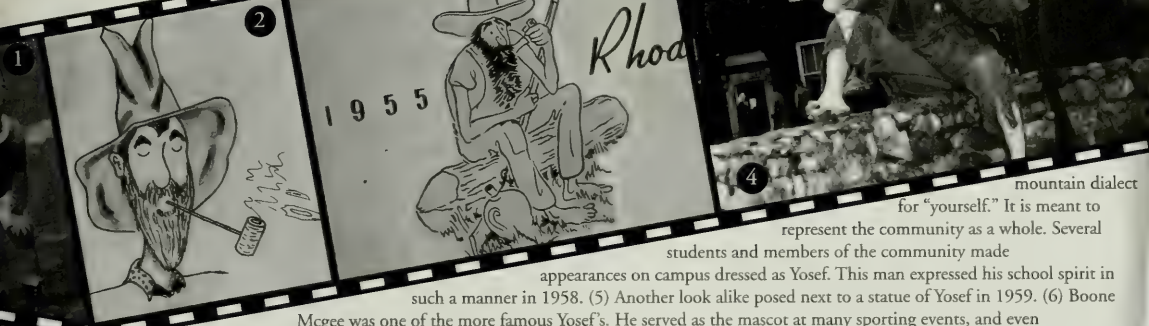

THE BOOTS

Yosef's boots were not always a part of the mascot attire. When students would dress up to be Yosef in the early years, they would go barefoot. Over the years, however, the boots have been integrated into the mascot uniform.

long before the existence of Yosef, Appalachian had a pint-sized mascot named Jimmie Johnston. Jimmie was the son of Appalachian men's sports coach Johnnie Johnston. Jimmie is pictured here in 1932 in his football gear. (2) The idea of Yosef started in 1942 when the cover of The Rhododendron filled an empty picture space at the end of the freshman section of the book with a drawing of whom he named "Daniel Boone Yosef". He described the character as a typical mountain man who he felt represented the community. (3) Yosef's popularity grew as each year passed. He even graced the cover of the 1955 Rhododendron as pictured here.

for "yourself." It is meant to represent the community as a whole. Several students and members of the community made appearances on campus dressed as Yosef. This man expressed his school spirit in such a manner in 1958. (5) Another look alike posed next to a statue of Yosef in 1959. (6) Boone

McGee was one of the more famous Yosef's. He served as the mascot at many sporting events, and even

career. Here Yosef dressed in a lifeguard shirt as he monitored the wave from the crowd. (8) His fun-loving nature is shown with the hippie outfit

He also dressed in his biker attire in 1988.

The design of the mask was transformed and renovated a bit to accommodate the new logo design. This has been the current costume for Yosef in 2000, and will continue to exist in order to enhance the spirit of ASU. (11) This year, the athletic department added a new feature to the football stadium for game days. An enormous Yosef balloon now stands at the field house for the players to run under when entering the stadium at the start of

Georgia Southern Eagle his way back to the opposing team. (13) Yosef proudly held the old mountain jug in his

Appalachian's victory over

Western Carolina in the rivalry that has been coined, "The Battle of the Jug."

Hang Time • Punter, Nate McKinney averaged 44.5 yards per kick this season for the Mountaineers. In many fourth down instances, Nate took some of the pressure off of the defense with a long punt, which gave the opposing team bad field position.

Being an athlete isn't just about going to practice, playing in a game, or even winning. There is so much more to being an athlete. During practice, students not only learned to better themselves physically, but also mentally. They became strong people inside and out. Mental concentration was needed to get the job done and done correctly as it was not just about winning and losing; friendships, courage, strength, and pride go along with the game.

Head Coach Jerry Moore tried to get his football players to not only focus on their athletic ability, but more importantly to improve themselves as a whole human being; encompassing everything: family, education, friends, and then football. Coach Moore felt that, "nothing is more important than these kids." He also said that every team has done something differently such as records, national championships, etc. In their own way every team is special.

This team definitely showed the uniqueness and specialty that Moore spoke of this season. They also showed one thing that may not have stood out as much to the fans: heart. They didn't earn much respect by starting off losing three out of the first four games this season but it took a lot of heart and love for the game to work harder and get better. The work ethic sure gave them what they needed; six wins, out of the last seven games of the season, and respect.

The Mountaineers finished the season 7-4 and 6-2 in the Southern Conference; that record was good enough to earn sole possession of second place, however, it left them just shy of the postseason.

X's and O's

young team overcomes early season

Another One Bites The Turf • A sack is a big momentum changer for any defense. A simple rush can cause a quick turnover and a much needed spark for the team. Rush plays, or blitzes, often result in a quarterback getting hit by a 265 lb. Appalachian linemen. Sophomore Daniel Bettis showed that he could supply that pressure on the quarterback with this rush against East Tennessee State.

Among the many highlights of the season, there were a few that stand out. The two wins over Furman and Georgia Southern were a huge part of the Mountaineers success for the season, as both of those teams were ranked at the time. Another rare statistic that occurred this season was the special teams effort. Senior Jon Chasteen blocked two punts in consecutive games. Jon described his team experience over the past four years as “tough and challenging. My senior year has been so rewarding. I encourage players to give it their all, all the time, and even when they don’t think they can because good things happen when you play hard.” The blocked punts against ETSU and Furman were good for Jon and the Mountaineers. “I always try and go hard on every play, these plays were no different, just good things happened.” Coach Moore said that he had never had a player to block punts consecutively like Jon did this season.

Jerry Moore had set some pretty astounding records as head coach at Appalachian State University, such as 13 winning seasons, winningest coach in Appalachian History, and 115 victories, which was the most for any coach in the Southern Conference history. He stated that he “hopes that these records haven’t changed him as a person, and that these accomplishments aren’t a driving force to him.”

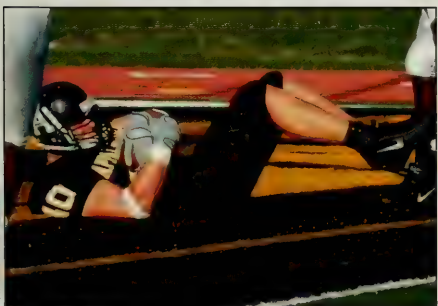

The 2003 Mountaineers may not have set any major records this season, but they did open the eyes of fans and spectators with some impressive statistics. By the end of the season, sophomore quarterback Richie Williams had the highest rating in the SoCon. The Mountaineers finished fourth in scoring with an average of 22.9 points per game.

Moore pointed out that statistics and winning aren’t everything; all he wanted was, “to do as good as everybody else and never let winning become more important than the players.” The most important things to Coach Moore were his faith, family, and the team. The advice that Coach Moore would pass along to anyone is to have a great work ethic and never give up on yourself.

Cutting Back • For Senior running back Sean Jackson, there is only one thing that separated him from the end zone: two Morehead State defenders. Here, Sean tried to cut back and split the defense to gain positive yards.

GOING THE DISTANCE

It was all about finding the end zone for the Mountaineers in the game against Georgia Southern. Sophomore, Stewart Adams helped the team do just that with this touchdown. Adams' 23 yard reception was his only of the season, but it happened at a crucial time as Appalachian went on to defeat the Eagles 28-21 and take second place in the Southern Conference.

Pressing On • The Mountaineer's offense is poised to roll against the Morehead State Eagles. With a good offensive showing, Appalachian was able to pull off the victory 24-21 by a field goal with 18 ticks left on the clock.

We have liftoff • Dawn-Marie Alfred launches a ball in an attempt to keep it out of Mountaineer territory against the UNC Asheville Bulldogs. The Lady Mountaineer's defense, along with two offensive goals, helped cap off a 2-1 victory.

Anticipation • Several of Appalachian's lady soccer team members look on as their fellow teammates run the field. This years recruiting class yielded several freshman who will continue to lift the team in their future seasons.

A winning season was not the only feat ASU women's soccer accomplished in its 2003 campaign—these gals brought home history as they finished the season 12-5-3, the best record the program had ever produced. The female “Booters from Boone” out shot opponents 320-182, and more than doubled their foes in goals scored, racking up a total count of 39. Success was gained this season in what Head Coach Benjamin Popoola calls “keeping priorities right along with a winning mentality, mixed with some fun.”

Women's soccer owed much of its outstanding show to hard work in practice, and utilizing its already established assets. Coach Popoola credited much of the team's success to an experienced defense: “We were able to work more on attacking since we already had a solid defense. We brought more offense throughout the season.” That offense became a major ingredient in carrying the team to its first appearance in the Southern Conference semi-finals since 1996. The big win over College of Charleston, that launched Appalachian into the semifinals, was recalled by Coach Popoola as “sweet revenge, a game we were up for from the start.” An earlier mid-season loss to the cougars sparked the intensity for that particular game.

The highly skilled players allowed ASU to win important games, and take care of business on the field. The mountaineers yielded two all-conference players, senior defender Dawn-Marie Alfred and junior goalkeeper Breland Meany. Coach Popoola described Alfred as “a player that is in a class by herself, with her speed and overall experience in soccer.” He also credited Meany as “irreplaceable; when Breland is on, the team is on.”

There were other players who made key contributions for ASU. Sophomore mid-fielder Whitney Southard became a strong supplement for the mountaineers as she led the team in scoring, netting seven goals on the season. Women's soccer also showcased a strong core of freshman that Coach Popoola reported as “benefiting the team as a whole because they were able to come off the bench and play solid.” With a passion for winning, and an experienced coaching staff, ASU women's soccer had the makings of something special.

Changes in the coaching staff can be hard for an athlete, due to the adjustment of different coaching techniques year after year. The men's soccer team faced just that as senior players saw their third new coaching face within a four-year period. Head Coach Paul Stahlshmidt commented on the situation, "It was hard for this year's senior players to have another new coach in there, but they did a good job of staying focused and playing soccer." The frequent changes in the coaching staff may have had an effect on the unity of the team, but it didn't prevent them from setting their goals high for the season.

The 2003 season brought about many close games for the Appalachian Men's Soccer team, as six of their eleven losses were of a one-goal difference. The team also faced some injuries to key players that hurt them in crucial games. Some of the high points of the season were the incredible plays of the men's soccer team at Kidd Brewer Stadium. The team liked playing on the new turf in front of the home crowd, losing only one game in Boone. Another inspiring part of the 2003-2004 team was the performance of players Mark Thornton and Keon McPherson, both made first team all conference due to their outstanding plays. Keon ended the season with two goals and two assists, which helped the team finish up with an overall record of 7-11-1.

The upcoming seasons looked prosperous for the Mountaineer Men's Soccer as the coaching staff worked hard to bring in ten new recruits, including a qualified goalkeeper. A permanent coaching staff and returning experienced players allowed the team to feel good about the upcoming seasons.

Although the men's soccer team may have fallen short of the ultimate goal in 2003-2004, their efforts earned them a respectable name in collegiate soccer. The unified team of talented players brought about a learning experience and gave opportunity to regroup in the off-season in order to improve their playing and become better as a team.

Keeping Balance • Collegiate sports can be considered on a different level; a person has to be truly athletic in order to play at that kind of intensity, like sophomore forward Na'em Frederick. Using your Head • An exciting, yet challenging part of the game of soccer, is limiting the use of an athlete's hands. That didn't stop sophomore Rapheal Jones as he found other ways to keep the ball in play. Here he tries to head the ball toward another teammate by using the most important aspect of his body, his head.

Mark Thorton runs down the field in his team uniform. The uniform often served as a unique way of representing the team. The men's soccer uniform was sponsored by Adidas and was marked with the ASU 'A' and a number so that everyone could tell who each player was.

Mountaineer Defense • Soccer is all about two things: scoring and keeping your opponent from scoring. Senior defense-man Geoff Christman attempted to get in front of the opposing Furman player. The men's soccer defense was respected this year as they had ninety-three saves on attempted goals by opponents this season.

Scoping the Field • Team play is important in collegiate sports. Looking up-field, senior Brian Fowler tried to find an open teammate in which to pass the ball. Players found out that a quicker method of getting the ball in scoring position was by kicking it rather than dribbling it the length of the field.

Recovery • Sometimes recovering the "trash" on the field is the most important aspect of the game; these quite often are the little hustle stats that many spectators overlook. Captured here is senior forward Fredrick Henriksen in action recovering a loose ball. With this recovery, the Mountaineers regained possession of the ball.

Celebrate Good Times • There's no better feeling than that of being victorious in a close game. After a win, players were often caught in a celebratory mode. As seen here, two of the men's team players were celebrating after a big win in the 2003 season.

With only two returning seniors and just four returning starters, the bar was set high for Appalachian State Field Hockey to rebound from a tough previous season. These athletes had a lot to be proud of looking back on this season's journey. A season of change, with big victories and outstanding player accomplishments, brought the Mountaineers to a winning season in 2003. The girls came together for what was a contender's effort, facing off against teams from around the United States.

As a team, the ASU Field Hockey squad displayed an array of skills that helped capture important wins. Head Coach Mandy Latz encouraged a variety of strategies on and off the field to build a strong group of players. Rising sophomore and co-captain Andrea Lee shared what coach Latz stressed the most through the season, "stick to the basics and keep it simple – the rest will come."

Andrea said, "Skill wise, we switched from a three forward to a four forward system. We were more offensive minded so it relieved pressure from our defense that was already awesome." Andrea explained how "it is important to stay dedicated to field hockey but at the same time do the things that will lead to individual success after college."

This school year introduced ASU to a brand new playing surface in Kidd-Brewer Stadium. Adjusting to the grass style of turf was an essential part of winning field hockey games. "We did not make excuses about the new turf. We adjusted, and it turned out to be a huge advantage over visiting teams that are used to the faster Astroturf," explained Andrea. The new field contributed to much of what was a Kidd-Brewer advantage, as the Mountaineers protected the house at 7-2.

Challenging opponents made the NorPac Conference tough to play in. For post-season play, teams must have won the conference tournament, and additionally won a regional bout to advance. ASU held its own with a three game sweep over St. Louis during the season and a huge win over Strong Form • Senior forward Nara Brookes spots up for shot in a late-August game. Nara added many accolades to her name, including NorPac All-Tournament Honors and NorPac Player of the Year. Nara was also the only player on the Appalachian squad to post three hat tricks on the season. "We were all so ready. We were really prepared were really prepared and anxious for the season," said Nara.

Davidson and Radford as well. It was players such as Nara Brookes and Bridgette Burkhardt that motivated the team to perform well. Andrea Lee described their unique value to the team: "Nara and Bridgette did an amazing job as team leaders. They led by example and kept a good balance of hard work and fun." Senior leadership was indeed a bonus for ASU. Brookes earned all-conference, all-tournament, and all-star honors, not to mention completing three hat tricks on the season. Other key players included goalkeeper Kate Ryno, who earned all-conference awards and propelled the team to a winning record of 12-8-0. The ASU field hockey program of 2003 consisted of many solid athletes, focusing on the common goal of making a name for the Mountaineers in arenas far and wide.

Teamwork • Great resilience for the game and team skills enables ASU to out play many opponents during the season. Mountaineer back Bridgette Buckhardt fielded the ball to forward Caroline Smith in the opening game against VCU. A strong defense and an enhanced offensive attack allowed Appalachian to come out on top in games such as this. The Mountaineers prevailed 2-0. "The new offense definitely helped us offensively and defensively. A high forward creates lots of pressure on the opposing defense," Caroline said.

The Stick, which it is officially named, is the most vital tool for every field hockey player. It consists of a straight shaft with one curved end. Any non-metallic material may be added to it, if it is appropriate for play.

Boone Intensity • Forward and mid-fielder Erica Muschamp closes in strong on a Rams' competitor. The scrappy Erica recorded five goals and two assists as a freshman. Solid contributors, such as Erica, helped Appalachian become fully unified.

Tight Squeeze • Bridgette Buckhardt battles her way through two defenders during an ASU home game. Bridgette was a tremendous all-around player for the team in 2003 as she recorded two goals and 12 assists. The Mountaineers' package of basic skills, along with a brand new four forward system, brought them to a winning record in 2003. Success started with hard work during practice and mental toughness. "The passing game plus our teamwork brought success," said Bridgette.

Follow Through • Nara Brookes takes a shot on goal in the Mountaineers' season opener. Nara became a force to reckon with across the NorPac Conference. With tons of experience under her belt, the senior led ASU in goals scored as well as point total. She was the key factor in a number of wins, which included game-winning goals against Albany and Georgetown, respectively. These games were played in the same week, making the pair of victories all the more sweet. "Nara is one of the most intense, competitive, players I've ever played with. You can see it on her face. She led with skill, intensity, and competitive spirit," Bridgette said.

Into the Curve • Making every step count, freshman Kasey Smith keeps good form while leaning into a curve just before the final stretch. It takes great endurance to finish a cross country race in a competitive time. Every advantage a runner can gain, through maintaining good form and being consistent with speed, will help the runner finish with a fast time.

The Lady Mountaineer Cross Country team had their work cut out for the 2003 season in defending the conference title achieved during the previous season. The team participated in eight events, including the NCAA Southeast District Championship in Greenville, NC, where they concluded their season with a 14th place finish. This is a significant achievement noting that three of the top five runners were sidelined due to mono and tonsillectomies.

In the Clemson Invitational, the lady cross country team finished in second place, beating host Clemson and only four points behind the leader, Georgia Tech. Junior Katie Sujkowski earned the SoCon runner of the year award. She was the individual conference champion, beating the nearest opponent by 21 seconds, and led the Lady Mountaineers to a close third place finish, only five points shy of the conference title. Sujkowski also competed well at the NCAA Southeast Regional meet, earning NCAA all region honors and finishing just seven seconds shy of a spot at the NCAA championship. Fate was not on the Lady Mountaineers' side at the conference championship, as they later found that their number two runner Noel Smith was hindered with mono during the competition.

One goal that Coach Mike Curcio and the team set at the beginning of the season was to excel in competition and in the classroom. The team achieved an average GPA of 3.37. This is quite outstanding considering that the women put in between forty and sixty miles a week along with several hours of swimming. However, the season didn't end after all of the meets were over; the Lady Mountaineers were already setting goals for the next year. All of the cross-country athletes also competed in track. Coach Curcio feels that the cross-country runners "have been an integral part of one of the last true track and field teams in the south."

The Long Run

men's cross country goes the distance

As the 2003 season opened for the Men's Cross Country team, a feeling of pressure came upon all of the members of the prestigious team. With three consecutive conference championships in their past, the Mountaineers set their sights on a new season in hopes that they would have a comparable season this year. However, with four members of last year's championship team graduating, the season was a challenge to uphold the competitive edge that came so easily to the Mountaineer team in years past. The same team who had been the best of the conference for years was weakened by a loss of experienced athletes and by a knee injury for two-time all conference athlete Ryan Toler. His injury deterred him from competing in the rest of the season. Although these crippling events significantly weakened the team, the athletes stepped up to the challenge of overcoming the weaknesses and made a great attempt for the fourth consecutive title.

At the SoCon Championship held in Davidson, NC, Appalachian's Brendon Helms was named the SoCon men's freshman of the year, finishing 14th and edging out Appalachian freshman Mark Maddox for the honor. The men earned runner-up honors, finishing seven points behind champion Chattanooga. Appalachian's top finisher was Carson Blackwelder, who finished eighth individually. At the Blue Ridge Open in Boone, NC, the Men's Cross Country team won first place overall.

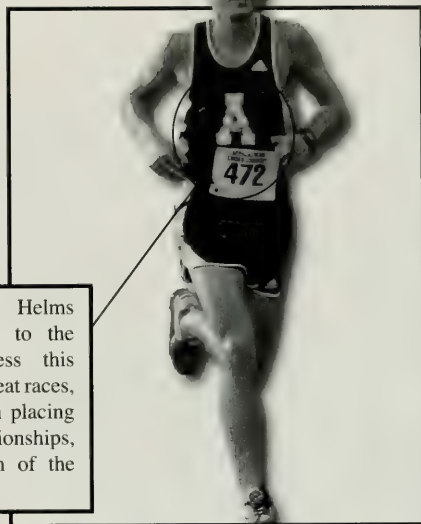

The goals were high this year, and Coach Mike Curcio was proud of the effort put forth by the team. "We fell short of our ultimate goal to retain the SoCon title, but sometimes it's more about the journey than the destination."

Cream of the Crop • Mountaineers Carson Blackwelder, Mark Maddux, Ryan Toler run at the front of the race at the Covered Bridge Open. Mark, a freshman, went on to win the race, while Carson finished 4th overall, and Ryan finished 10th.

Sticking Together • Some of the teams top runners find themselves packed at the front of the Covered Bridge Open. The men placed seven runners in the top ten to win with a dominating performance.

Freshman Brandon Helms proved to be vital to the Mountaineers success this year. With several great races, and a freshman high placing in the Socon Championships, he earned Freshman of the Year Honors.

Ready, Set, Go! • With the sound of the gun, the Mountaineers start off the Blue Ridge Open at State Farm fields. The Mountaineers turned out another win over fierce competition like Virginia Tech and several independent runners. "Stronger teams are coming to Boone to race us this will really help the development of our team," Coach Mike Curcio said lady mountaineers earn north division title

The collegiate volleyball court was the scene of serious competition this year. As the ladies of the Appalachian State Volleyball team came together and worked strong as a team, they proved their abilities and won the North Division Championship title. The Lady Mountaineers finished the season with 13 conference wins and only five losses. Although there were some obstacles to overcome, the effective coaching techniques of Head Coach Chad Callihan and Assistant Coach Crystal Poskey guided the girls to success.

At the beginning of the season, Coach Callihan mentioned that some of his key players were injured and there seemed to be a drought of "passion for competition." The coaching staff worked hard to re-teach the players on how to go out, have fun, and find their love for the game once again. The Lady Mountaineers were more than ready to prove that they had the drive to compete and enjoy themselves at the same time. Callihan noted that "the girls came a long way and made a lot of improvements in hitting and defense." The statistics back Callihan's statements, and there was no question the team was determined to improve not only as a group, but also at an individual level. Katherine Dean's .305 hitting percentage ranked her fifth in the Southern Conference and sixth-best in school history; she also ranked sixth in blocks averaging 1.05 per game. Amber Mangrum, a junior at ASU, took second in the conference with an average of 11.68 assists per game. Mangrum still has a season left at Appalachian and with her 2,753 career assists she might break some school records; as of now she is ranked fourth over the school's history.

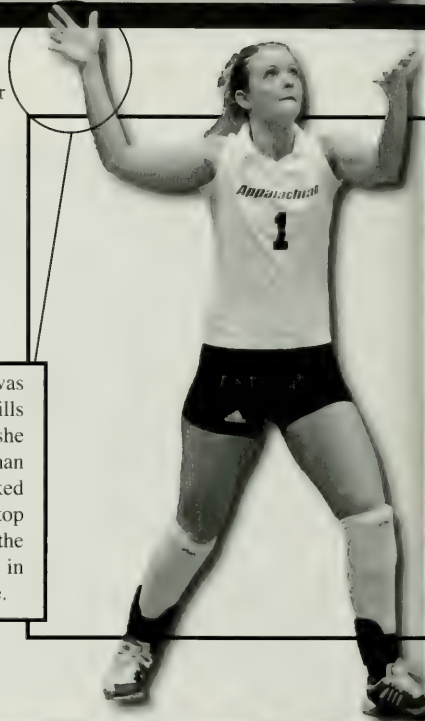

Coach Callihan also mentioned that there were some areas of the game that he and Poskey did not have to work on much. Callihan stated, "The girls have great communication on the court and always stick together from start to finish." This was a characteristic of volleyball that is probably the hardest to teach, so it showed advanced sportsmanship and teamwork on the Lady Mountaineers' behalf. With only three seniors leaving next year, the team has nine returners and four affirmed commitments; Callihan is confident with his team next year.

Play it Steady • Freshman Rachel Gates digs out a ball as teammate Kali Rumberger stands by. The only true freshman on the squad, Gates was a versatile player for Appalachian. Holding her own as a young player, she contributed five kills to the season.

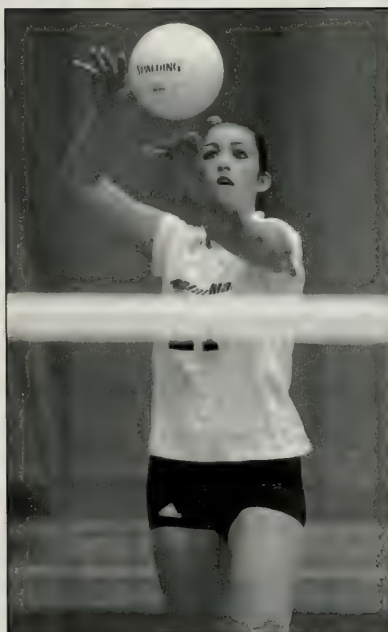

The team finished 13-5 in the Southern Conference, and also added an impressive win over Davidson in the first round of the SoCon tournament.

Rebecca Sorensen was a specialist in the kills department. As she did in her freshman year, Rebecca ranked among the team's top in kills to help the Lady Mountaineers in their quest for a title.

One Heartbeat • The Mountaineer Volleyball squad huddles together, raising their arms in unison before a match. Good team chemistry enabled the Mountaineers to make a steady run in conference play. Head Coach Chad Callihan offered advanced insight into the game and positive motivation to boost the girls to their highest potential.

Rising to the Occasion • Sophomore Stefanie Panzer prepares to unleash one of her many kills on a Davidson opponent. Stefanie averaged 2.46 kills per game as well as 1.12 blocks per game. Playing a middle position, Stefanie developed as a court leader in 2003.

Serving up Game • Junior Mountaineer Amber Mangrum prepares to deliver service in an Appalachian home game. As a co-captain for the 2003 campaign, Amber put up 37 service points while playing the setter position. The team utilized multi-faceted players such as Amber throughout the season.

When asked what Coach Callihan felt to be the most significant aspect of playing sports, he said to just have fun and work hard. Callihan ended by saying that he hoped all of the athletes he coached can look back at their time at Appalachian as a positive experience and to have honestly enjoyed themselves when they were here.

Coming into Her Own • Junior Samantha Guidici began an impressive run at the end of the 2002-2003 season which carried through this season. She ranked fourth on the team in kills with 263 in 101 games this year.

Coach Callihan's the Boss • The season was the first in black and gold for head coach Coach Callihan. In fact, this was the freshman year for all of the volleyball coaching staff. The season was definitely not a disappointment for Coach Callihan, as the Lady Mountaineers finished with a 13-5 record in conference play.

On The Mats

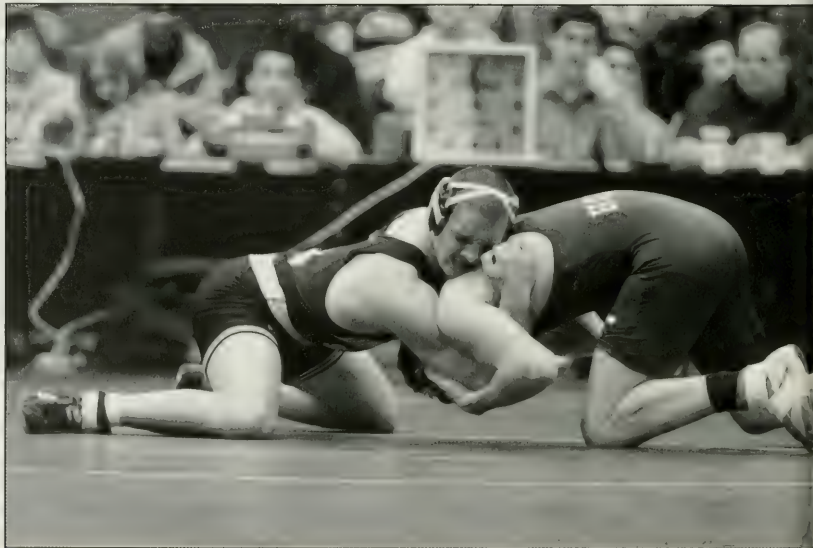

team tries to pin conference championship

With a youthful crew of athletes, ASU Wrestling fought its way to a satisfactory finish for the season. The Mountaineers, registering no seniors, produced a 26-24-5 record among individuals for Southern Conference bouts. Adding to the success, Paul Mance reached a milestone as he captured his 300th win as head coach of ASU. The win came against Virginia Tech on February 22, 2004. Freshman wrestlers Blake Taylor and Terreyl Williams described this moment as "Very exciting... everybody was happy for Coach, we know he's going to win more." Coach Mance encouraged his wrestlers to perform at their highest. "Coach tells us to 'be relentless,' never stop wrestling, and stay in their face. How you practice is how you wrestle," Terreyl related. It was tough competitors that got the job done. ASU leaned on a few key grapplers throughout the season. The 149lb. Jason Jones, 165lb. Lee Roper, and 197lb. Josh Carroll, all pitched in important wins for the Mountaineers. Dave Hazel also contributed a great deal as he represented the heavyweight slot. Facing highly challenging opponents such as UT-Chattanooga, The Citadel, and VMI, ASU wrestling did a lot of growing. Having no individual NCAA qualifiers, ASU credited the fact that it had more team success throughout the season. As all wrestlers will return for the 2004-2005 season, ASU seeks to build a dynamic team.

Lock Down • Sophomore Corey Pendergrass gets into a tangle with Virginia Tech's Steve Borja. The two were responsible for the longest bout of the day, going into double overtime after being tied 1-1 in the first period. The two remained even in the first overtime period, but Corey pulled away in the final 30 seconds of double overtime to walk away with the 7-3 victory.

2003-2004 Men's Wrestling • Aaron Barnette, Will Beurell, Dominic Buckman, Eric Burns, Jared Campbell, Josh Carroll, Rusty Colley, Marcus Cox, Roubon Daniels, Alex Davis, Carl Elliott, Sctoo Ervin, Alay Foreman, Brandon Gates, Guy Gibson, Tim Goodwin, David Hazell, Jared Herzog, T.Y. Holley, Ron Jackson, Jason Jones, Kenny Kepley, Andy Madison, Sean McIntosh, Tim Paul, Corey Pendergrass, James Penn, Shaun Pinkston, Rocky Richey, Alfred Rios, Lee Roper, Blake Taylor, Chris Toukonen, Terreyl Williams, Kevin Worsowicz, Head Coach Paul Mance

Young Gun • Freshman Guy Gibson is able to handle Ryan Broughman of Virginia Tech 5-2. The freshman competed as one of the teams top in the 125 lb. class. In high school, Guy obtained all-county honors all of his four year career and was named team MVP two times.

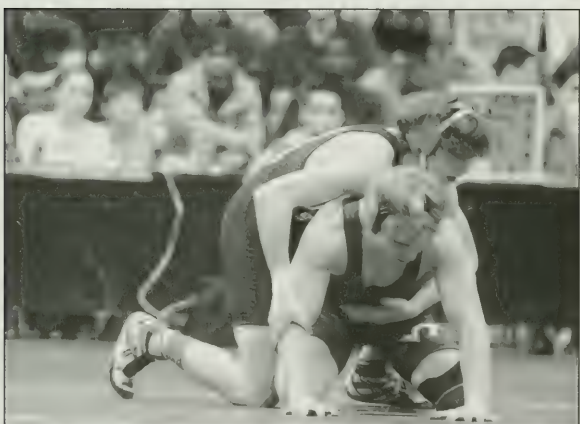

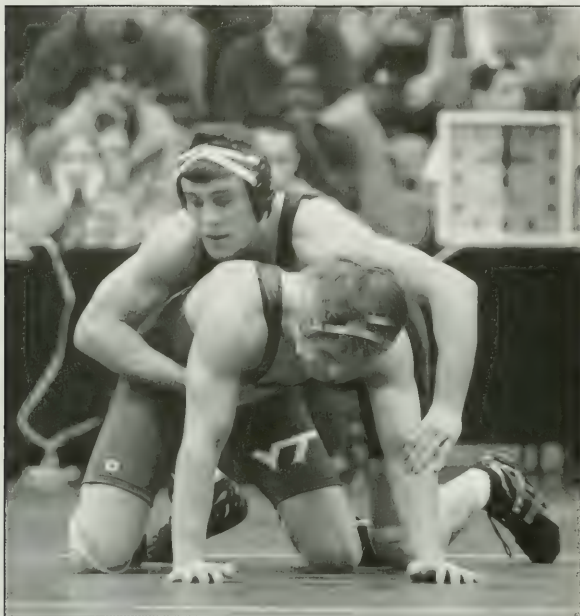

Bear Hug • Mountaineer David Haznell tries to wear his opponent, Kris Weidgreen of Virginia Tech, down. David entered the season as the top Mountaineer heavy weight. David left high school as an All-American ranked 10th in the nation. With his great ability as a heavyweight David defeated Weidgreen 6-2 lifting the Mountaineers to a 30-6 victory.

Breakdown • Appalachian's Jason Jones tries to get Virginia Tech wrestler Tyde Prater out of defensive position and into one where he can score a point. Jason attempts proved successful as he defeated Tyde 4-0 in regulation. This junior ended his high school year as the New York state champion.

Don't Let the Smooth Face Fool You • Scott Ervin knows how it's done. This freshman had no problem defeating Hokie Aaron Brown 4-0. Scott was named the 2003 Oklahoma high school wrestler of the year, a title that shares shelf space with his state championship.

First Strike • Appalachian's Aaron Barnette and Virginia Tech's Jerome Villanueva face off. The first move can often determine the outcome of the match. Unfortunately for Aaron and the Mountaineers, Jerome was able to get an edge and the victory. However, one loss can hardly blemish this freshman's resume, which included a 3rd place finish at the high school prep nationals in 2003.

Always a Good Sign • It's not difficult to see that Josh Carroll came out victorious against Virginia Tech's Shaun Guttridge 5-3. This sophomore also had a conference title under his belt, as he won the SoCon championship last year in the 197 lb class.

The most important equipment that a wrestler possesses is his head gear, as Scott Ervin exhibits. The head gear protects the ears from the various movements that are performed around the head, and from the damage that these movements may cause.

Anna Stocker prepares to drive the ball. The drive is one of the most important shots in golf. The drive almost always determines the outcome of a hole. A bad drive forces the player to scramble, which can be very discouraging and lead to a disappointing score.

Birdie Hunting

Anxious was a word that Women's Golf Coach William Dicus used to describe the team's desire to compete at the conference championship in Greensboro. Anxious was also a good word to express the team's attitude, while equable was a word fitting for the performance of its members. Four of the six members of the team led the team in scoring at an event, while five of the six ladies finished second or better for the team. Both Junior Jennifer Monako and Sophomore Kaitlyn Johnston led the team three times this season. According to Coach Dicus, "Each of our players has had some very good stretches [this season]." Sophomore Anna Stocker finished second six times for the Lady Mountaineers. After the winter break the team came out strong with a win at the Carter Intercollegiate at Catawba Springs Country Club in Hickory, NC. This was exceptional because of the increased difficulty that winter weather posed to the teams practice schedule since local courses had to shut down for the season. Coach Dicus commented on the effects of winter weather stating, "Cold weather certainly has an effect on early spring golf. We begin our spring practices usually about two weeks later than our other conference schools. We do, however, usually play in more tournaments in the fall than some other schools." Some of the competitions that the team participated in also required much travel time. The sport required not only physical stamina, but also mental strength on the course and on the road. Several events the team competed in were in South Carolina, while one event was in Florida. The events were very time consuming because they consisted of multiple rounds which had to be played on separate days and could last anywhere from two to four days. Travel combined with practice five days a week for four or more hours provided a very time consuming occupation for these Lady Mountaineers. Although the sport was demanding, Coach Dicus feels that, "[They] had successes winning a tournament in Hickory in February and we played very well in a couple of other fall tournaments."

Young Gun • Freshman Meredith Morrison provided a solid base for the team this year. During her career at Statesville High School, Meredith earned 2002 conference player of the year accolades along with three team MVP titles. She started the season with an impressive team leading performance at the Bay Tree Invitational.

On the Leaderboard • Junior Jennifer Monko established herself as one of the team leaders this year, finishing first for the team five times this season, including a three event run at the end of the season. Jennifer also led the team in scoring average recording a personal season low round of 75 at the Great Smokies Intercollegiate.

Old School • As a veteran of the team, Junior Erin McAfee knows consistency. Her low tournament was the Bay Tree Invitational in September. Erin was not able to compete in some of the events, but she averaged an 89 on the season.

A marathon of a season tests the poise of ASU golf every season. For the 2003-2004 endeavor, a challenging schedule required a heavy work ethic from each individual player. The Mountaineers, led by two wise seniors, decided to shoot for a highly respectable goal—winning the conference championship.

When the Mountaineers set out at the beginning of the season, they agreed to lay down some goals. Dan Gossin explained the team's primary concern: "One team goal for this season is to win the Southern Conference Championship, which would give us a birth to play in the NCAA Regionals." An admirable ambition such as this braved the not so sweet adversities along the way. Poor weather conditions and disappointing performances tried the patience of Mountaineer golfers. With a last place finish at the Furman Intercollegiate, Senior David Thomas mentioned what goes into the recovery process: "The older guys see what's going wrong and encourage the younger players. It is important to instill confidence and keep everyone focused." The Mountaineers encountered many challenging courses such as Savanna's Hunter Golf Club and Bradford Creek Golf Club in Greenville, NC. In order to achieve the ultimate finish in the conference tournament, players had to come with "a competitive spirit, leaving nothing at home," according to David. Players rallied behind one another, bringing them closer to success.

The greatest of sports teams often display a unique bond. Working together to support each other in an individual sport comes to the aid of several successful teams. David Thomas explained that ASU Golf is no stranger to this characteristic. "We have good team unity. We joke around, and we're good friends on and off the course. There is never a serious moment off the course."

This season the golf team depended intensely on the skills of David and his fellow senior teammate Matthew Riddick. David carried the Mountaineers to place in the upper ranks at several tournaments, including a seventh of nineteen finish at the Winthrop Waterford Invitational, and a fifth of twenty showing at the Sea Trail Invitational in late September. Matthew Riddick also contributed immensely to the team. His second place performance in a field of 69 players propelled ASU to a sixth place finish at the CSU Spring Kickoff. David described Matthew as "a fierce competitor, he's very confident and never backs down. He has a good short game for a big man." With these two veterans leading the way, younger talent such as Chris Jarman, Rob Quick, and Guido Dicicco learned the value of mental strength and hard work. ASU golf looked forward to much success in seasons to come.

Well Struck • Sophomore golfer Chris Jarman hits one down the fairway. Chris put together a consistent collection of performances to aid the team's overall success. He shot a round two 75 at the Mission Inn Classic, and played several other supporting roles over the season including his effort at the Southern Conference Tournament.

Swinging Strong • Rob Quick drives a ball towards the hole on a sunny afternoon at Boone Golf Club. As a consistent top six player on the team, Rob unveiled a number of skilled showings throughout the year. Some of his feats included a three-over par finish at the Sapphire Valley Intercollegiate as well as a one-over par first round at the SoCon Tournament in Jonesborough, TN that boosted the team's running.

Long and Soft • Much like Maxfli's motto for the "noodle" ball, Senior David Thomas hits one "long and soft." David registered a 74.7 scoring average in over 23 rounds of golf. David also produced a score of 69, leading the team, in the first round of the CSU Spring Kickoff. He led the Mountaineers to several strong finishes including the SoCon Championships.

Down the Middle • As he stood in the tee box, Sophomore Dan Grossin hit a tremendous shot down the middle of the fairway. Dan was a valuable asset to the men's golf team in 2003 as he had a 81 stroke average in over six rounds of play. Dan's lowest round of the season came during the Sea Trail Invitational where he carded a 77 in the first round.

Club selection is one of the most crucial aspects of the game of golf. Too little club can leave the ball short, eliminating a chance for birdie, while too much club can be devastating when hazards and rough come into play. Picking the right club can be advantageous and the key to lowering scores.

Lady Mountaineers serve up a new season

With tough competition and an even better conference, the Lady Mountaineer Tennis Team had to work to their full potential to keep up with the top teams. The team started the season out with key wins on the road at UNC-Wilmington, Gardner-Webb, Mercer and Tampa; which provided a foundation and momentum for other games throughout the season. Valuable players for the team included Becky Gordon, Anja Gugger and Victoria Moody, with strong doubles combinations like Gordon with Gugger and Tammy Beaulieu with Lyndsey Free. Coach Colin Crothers commented that those two pairs, "would be tough teams to beat." Their doubles performances, however, are only half of the game. It took many strong players to bring their singles games to another level in order to win matches. With many young members on the team, however, it required much more effort. Anja Gugger, a freshman from Cary, North Carolina, proved to bring her singles game to the collegiate level, and played as the number two singles player of the Lady Mountaineers. Coach Crothers commented that Gugger "has really come along as a top singles player, and she is getting better and better." According to Crothers, "A lot of the young players are not used to this tough competition...It takes a year, I think, to see what the level is like." The team had two senior members this season, Elena Berger and Tammy Beaulieu, that helped to bring the team together and motivate the players to be prepared mentally for the match. Senior leadership was very important in a sport such as tennis, because the members of the team gave the " pep talks" and kept the morale of the players high while performing on the court. Having young members on the team was difficult in the beginning of the season, but improved the team's ability to develop and strengthen for the upcoming seasons. "It's tough for [the younger players] to be able to play together," said Crothers. "I'm hoping that they can jell...it's a learning experience." Through many tough games and some close victories, the women's tennis team proved that they can still compete with the conference.

Reach for the Sky • Setting up for the serve, sophomore Victoria Moody stretches back to gain enough power for the hit. It takes much practice to perfect one's serve, because the racquet must meet the ball in the center and follow through to the service box on the opposite court. Moody shows perfect form in this as she reaches up to make a power shot.

Serving a ball to the opponent requires many different steps. The grip is firm, but relaxed, with the server's stance parallel to the service line. At the point of the toss, the rhythm must be the same as the backswing: up together and then meeting at the top of the swing. As the ball is tossed up and in front, the racquet should start at the hip and then flow behind the player's back. At the height of the backswing, the racquet is pushed forward to make contact above the head and push the ball over the net and across the court. Victoria Moody is practicing perfect form while tossing up for a serve.

John Bechane

Love, Love • It is important for players to get an early lead on the opponent in a match. Here, Sophomore Lyndsey Free starts out her first serve hoping to gain an edge on her competition in the first few games of singles. Lyndsey played mostly in the 4 and 5 positions on the team, and on the number 2 doubles team with Senior Tammy Beaulieu or Freshman Anja Gugger.

The tennis racquet is a fusion of design and strength. It was first used as a handball racquet by French monks in the 11th or 12th Century. Its design has been developed and improved much over the years, creating a powerful and lightweight tool for use in the game of tennis. Made out of mostly graphite and other small amounts of fiberglass and/or titanium, the average tennis racquet weighs 7 to 10 ounces, depending on the company and what materials are used in the racquet. Here, Junior Jason Nius uses the forehand grip.

The 2003- 2004 Men's tennis season turned out to be a big success for ASU. The team brought a lot of talent to the game from all over, even from other countries. Two members of the team had to come a long way to be a part of the Appalachian Tennis Team. Dimitar Dimitrov, a Bulgarian native, moved to Boone to play for Appalachian State University's team after winning a title of 2002 Bulgarian National Singles Champion. Another international team member, Andrew Waters, came from Durban, South Africa as a successful tennis player at his native school to Troy State University in Alabama. He then transferred to Appalachian and was offered a position on the ASU Tennis Team. He was involved with tennis at an early age, practicing with college-level South African tennis players at the age of ten.

With both local and international members contributing to this season, the Mountaineers developed a tough team had many competitive games. With the first thirteen games being away, however, it became difficult for the team to develop a momentum while traveling. "It's kind of tough to jump out of the van after a four hour ride and play a tennis match," commented Stephen Mantzouris, a junior member of the team from Fayetteville, NC. He thought that being on the road with the team helped develop team unity. "[Being on the road] helped us become a team as a whole...it helped out a lot." The team relied heavily on performing as a whole, being led by Senior Captains Jacob Stapleton and Ben Shuster. These two members helped keep the team together and perform to their full potential. The team had two new members added to the roster, Seth Mabe and Alex Probst, which helped the team grow and prepare for the upcoming seasons. The Mountaineers finished with many close games at home and some outstanding victories to place them fifth in the conference with a conference record of four wins and five losses, and an overall record of ten wins and twelve losses. The team was expected to work hard and train for hours each day in hopes to finish those close games and perform better next year. Stephen Mantzouris had complete confidence in the coming years, saying, "If we play to our potential, we can beat anybody."

Return to Sender • Senior Mountaineer Jacob Stapleton gives a powerful return from behind the service line. Maintaining a rhythm and hitting great, winning shots is crucial to developing a better tennis game. Stapleton performed well this season, being a part of the number 3 doubles team, and achieving an overall record of 3 wins and 5 losses.

Top Spin • Taking a swing at the collegiate level of intensity, Freshman Alex Probst shows he can perform just as well as the more experienced members of the team. Alex, originally from Fort Lauderdale, Florida, has seen positions 1 through 4 in singles, with 5 wins and 8 losses overall.

Dimitrov, from Sofia, Bulgaria, was discovered by coach Bob Lake at the European Championships, where he was a 2002 Doubles semi-finalist.

D-FENCE • During their January 29th game against UNC-Greensboro, Leslie Atalese plays great defense and goes for the block. The Lady Mountaineers averaged 2.6 blocks per game this season, a statistic that gave them a very notable inside defense among spectators.

Squaring Up • The post move is a critical move in every basketball player's repertoire. With the turn around jumper over a Greensboro defender, Junior Jessica Jank goes hard to the basket for two points. Jessica averaged 6.9 points per game this season for the Mountaineers, with most of those points coming from inside the paint. She also led the team with 33 blocks on the year.

Michelle Conklin suffered a knee injury during January of 2004, where she missed the first two games of her basketball career against Davidson and Furman. Before her sprained knee injury, Michelle started 50 games straight and averaged 5.5 points per game in 27.5 minutes this season.

Commitment and mental toughness were two characteristics that the Appalachian State University 2003-2004 Women's Basketball Team possessed. The team overcame many obstacles this year. The first game of season they played against USC, the odds were against the team. They were so young, they were playing against a team that was an Elite 8 team NCAA participant, and the women had to play without one of the top post players, who was out on a two game suspension. Even though, they did not win the game, their effort, focus, and will to go after a win was evident. The team goal for the year was to build on what they had accomplished during the 2002-2003 season.

During this season, there was never a game where all of the women on the Mountaineer team were all without any injuries. This had a serious effect on the team because they were so young that if anything were not what they were used to, it would throw them off; causing issues with timing and chemistry.

When it came to their coaching techniques, Coach Adrienne Shuler said, "We were always beginning on the defensive end of the floor, our style is very simple but very intense." The women's team added a new coach to the staff this year, Jeff Laboe. Shuler also mentioned how much she loved her staff because she was so intense at times during a game that her coaching staff was prepared to take over. Her staff was a great extension of her style and of the direction that the ASU Women's basketball program was a heading toward.

The women's team may not have had the record scores to show their hard work and team effort, but it was evident that all of the women on the team played an important role on the floor this season. Coach Shuler said, "We were not very successful in terms of win/loss, but the growth we achieved compared to day one keeps me excited about what the future holds for Appalachian State University Women's Basketball Teams."

Smooth As Silk • Great form, following though, and no defenders, are all three good parts of the equation for Freshman Kiki Conyers to drop her three pointers. Kiki led the team in three point percentage with .529 on the season and started all but one game of the season.

Heavy Traffic • Charging into the lane is one thing that Freshman Crystal Barriner does best. Crystal averaged 8.8 points per game, contributed with 117 rebounds and held 2nd in steals for the team with 38 total. She also played in all 28 games of this season being one of only 2 true freshman to do so. Because of her outstanding performances this season, Crystal was named to the SoCon All-Freshman team.

The slam dunk - a maneuver in basketball that can quickly change the momentum in any contest. The "dunk," for short, often helped to get crowds into the game and allowed players to show their athletic ability. Sophomore Derek Thomas was no unfamiliar character in dunking this season.

Baseline Drive • A quality move to get to the hoop quickly is by driving the baseline. Often, teams' defenses weren't as strong when guarding the baseline. Senior Jonathan Mitchell decided to take advantage against Davidson with a drive for an easy two points. Jonathan averaged 6.8 points and 5.1 rebounds per game this season for the Mountaineers.

A great start for the 2003-04 Men's Basketball Team turned into a fight for consistent play and wins in tough, close games throughout the season. "We had new players this season stepping into new roles in which they hadn't seen before," commented Head Coach Houston Fancher. That new look of important roles played by inexperienced players was an aspect of this year's team that yielded some tough losses in close games down the stretch for the Mountaineers.

Coach Fancher reflected on the season: "We started off great [3-1] with big wins over SMU, La Salle and George Washington, but with the start of conference play, we felt like we were coming close but we just couldn't get over the hump between winning and losing those close games." The "hump" the Mountaineers had to overcome was as massive one, considering their tough schedule.

An overall finish of 9-21 and 4-12 in the conference gave the men's team a last place finish in the North Division of the Southern Conference. The Mountaineers were a bit short of reaching the win column in eight close games this season, losing those games by 5 points or less. However, looking past their record, the team accomplished much more. "If one or two shots had gone a different way for us, we could have very easily won 18 or 19 games this season. I thought we played really hard all year and competed well and worked at it, even though we weren't winning the games we wanted to, we never stopped playing and we never quit," said Coach Fancher.

The team also had some much-needed improvements on the previous season: "One thing we've done better this year than in years past is on the defensive end. We moved up the third [in the conference] defense; we also lead the league in steals and were in the top two in blocked shots." Defense helps teams win games and the Mountaineers improved their defensive efforts this season to give them a better chance of coming out with a win in those close games.

“Even though we weren’t winning the games we wanted to, we never stopped playing and we never quit.”

- Houston Fancher, Coach

Take it to the Hoop • The shots taken with the highest percentage of scoring are those that are taken closer to the hoop. Sophomore Power Forward Derek Thomas made sure to increase his chances of scoring with this shot. As he broke out ahead of the opposition, Derek took the ball to the hoop for an easy score.

- Continued from page 333

Some might ask what it takes to play on the collegiate level? Fancher strongly believed the number one thing was discipline. “Aside from being a student, a collegiate player has to go to workouts, practice, study halls, and many other things it takes discipline to get it all done. You also have to have the drive to get better, and that’s what our number one goal is here ASU.”

With the next season in close vision, the Mountaineers plan on having a very experienced team with five returning seniors. The experience was just what Coach Fancher and the ASU fans were looking for as the Mountaineers looked to improve upon this year’s effort and rightfully re-claim the North Division title. “We look to grow in the off season and give our players time to get better and develop. We have the ability with our returning players and the new recruits to be a much improved team that can finish those close games that we missed out on this season,” relayed Fancher.

Pressure Defense • Good defense limits opponents from scoring and gives teams a better chance of winning. Senior Guard Matt Jones performed good full-court defense as he tried to set up a trap against a Wildcat offender. As a whole, the Mountaineers excelled in their defensive efforts this season ranking high in the conference in blocks and steals this season.

The Length of the Court • It takes speed and athleticism to out-run all of your opponents the length of the court. Point Guard Corwin Davis did just that on many occasions this season, as he undertook an important role left to him by graduate Shawn Hall. After an important steal, Corwin used his quickness to beat the others down the floor and gave the Mountaineers the lead with an easy lay-up.

The Appalachian Women's Track team began the season with two new coaches. Coach Damion McLean was the new jumps coach and David Ward was the new pole-vaulting coach. The team coaches used the basic philosophy to accomplish the goal of being as successful as last year, which was winning all three championships for cross country, indoor, and outdoor track.

The track team strived to win conference championships. By doing that, individual accomplishments were made as well. The team practiced everyday, starting in September, for at least two hours per day unless there was a meet. During the winter for indoor track and in the spring, due to inclement weather, the team practiced at the Convocation Center. Otherwise, practices were held at the outside track.

The team was blessed by not having many physical challenges this season. The team had a low amount of significant injuries. Head Coach John Weaver said they have a low amount of injuries because the coaching staff and athletes, "do a good job preventing them through warm ups and cools downs."

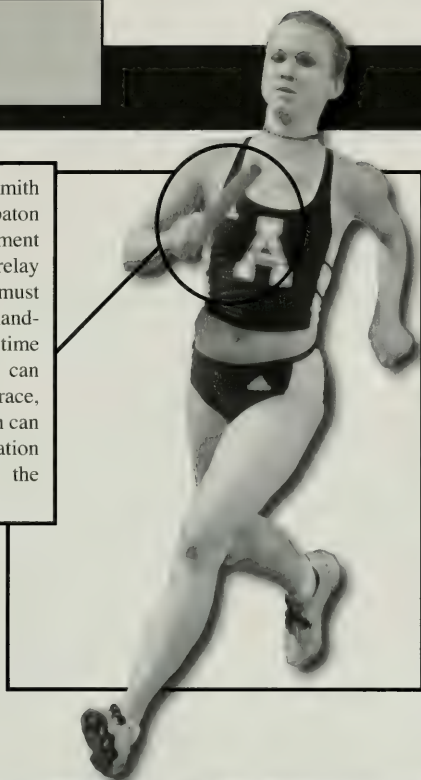

The team concept of track was striving to win conference championships. Athletes were pushed and achieved individual accomplishments. Rhonda White earned a Top Five in nation rank with her triple jump of 44.2. Susan Mackison placed 13th at the individual championship during indoor track.

The team quote is "Expect 100% IN," meaning regardless, the athletes are to be part of the training aspects, social aspects, and academic aspects of being a collegiate athlete. College athletics are not rights, they are a privilege. It takes determination from every aspect. Coach John Weaver was proud to say that "30-35% of the track athletes were on the Dean's List with an average GPA of 3.0."

2003-2004 Women's Track Team • Stephanie Atkins, Charlotte Baker, Kristie Boggan, Carla Bowlin, Matasha Brown, Beverly Burnett, Jennifer Claud, Amanda Corman, Adrianna DiBernardi, Missy Dock, Jessica Elkon, Kristen Felts, Kristina Flynn, Jessica Fowler, Allison Gorsuch, Alexis Hoover, Ehrin Irvin, Chelsea Jacobs, Caroline Jett, Myra Keeter, Jennifer Kelley, Carolyn Kitchens, Lindsay Lancaster, Danielle LaRue, Cailin Lynch, Suzanne Makinson, Shannon Meadows, Crystal Miller, Paula Moore, Heather Needham, Ginny Price, Christina Roberts, Bridget Robertson, Kelly Rosborough, Natalie Sayewich, Janelle Silverman, Nikole Simmons, Kasey Smith, Noel Smith, Emily Stryers, Katie Sujkowski, Jessica Summey, Portia Taylor, Kristen Trexler, Kara Westmoreland, Rhonda White, Tondra White.

Skip, Hop, Jump • Appalachian produces some of the most competitive triple jumpers in the conference. Sophomore Kristie Boggan is no exception. Kristie competed for the Lady Mountaineers at the SoCon Indoor championships.

Double Vision • Pacing, control and the right mind set allows these Appalachian track runners to be successful and complete their race. Kelly Rosborough and Ehrin Irvin are neck and neck at the SoCon Indoor track meet at East Tennessee State.

Double Trouble • Teammates cheering on one another during a track event is certainly a confidence booster, just as competing head to head is a great way of pushing each individual to his or her best. However, having a sibling to race against is the ultimate form of motivation. Senior twins Rhonda and Tondra White demonstrate this during one of the various 55-meter hurdle races they ran this year.

Final Stretch • The last leg of a race is often the most grueling. Competitors put their bodies to the test as they push themselves to the physical limit. Christina Roberts fights off any numbing pain as she rounds the final turn and heads to the finish of the 4 x 400 meter relay race at the SoCon Conference Championship.

Being determined. Staying focused. Training hard. Maintaining form. Displaying the best performance. Outlasting the competition. These things were most definitely the goals of the Appalachian track and field team this season. The 2003-2004 Mountaineer track and field season proved to be very successful, with outstanding individual performers in each event, from pole vault to the 100-meter dash. Key contributors in the success of Appalachian's track and field season included Senior Ernest Wiggins and Freshman Reggie Williams in the 100-meter and 200-meter dash, respectively. Ernest Wiggins won the honor of Athlete of the Week after the Tiger Invitational, after finishing second in the 60-meter dash with a new personal record time of 6.72 seconds. This time beat his old record by 0.05 seconds. Another influential member of the track and field team was Carson Blackwelder, participating in the 5,000- and 10,000-meter events. Supporting ASU's success in the shot put, hammer throw and discus events, Sophomore Bob Smith led the team in his performances throughout the season.

At the Southern Conference outdoor track and field championship, ASU brought home another SoCon Championship title, beating the rival Catamounts from West Carolina by only 17 points. This was the fourth title in a row won by Appalachian. In the shot putting event, ASU claimed the top four spots, which won enough points to gain the edge over WCU that they needed to win. Bob Smith, the leading thrower in the event, was named the Most Outstanding Performer in the field of shot put, discus and hammer throw. Also earning an individual honor was Freshman Bryan Burney. Bryan won the 800-meter dash and qualified for regionals, which earned him the award for Freshman of the Year. Appalachian won other events, such as the 4x100m relay, 200m dash and 5,000m run, which provided enough points to pull ahead and claim the title. For the coach's hard work and training of the team, Coach John Weaver was named Coach of the Year for the 2003-2004 season.

The Southern Conference indoor track and field finals was an extraordinary battle between West Carolina. ASU lost several events to the Catamount track and field team, which allowed Western Carolina to pull ahead of Appalachian and win the title. Senior Bob Smith started the Mountaineers in the right direction with his win in the shot put, along with Junior Dan Queen gaining the title of the heptathlon event. However, along with these victories came other close defeats to the Catamounts of Cullowhee in several events. With a second place finish in the conference, the Men's Track and Field Team have room to improve next year in hopes to regain the title they once held.

Defending the Southern Conference title this season, the Appalachian Track and Field Team needed to have the determination, focus, training and performance to continue their dominance over the conference. With stellar performances in each event by key individuals, the Mountaineers proved to reel out another successful season.

Push It • Upper body strength is an important part of a throwers athletic ability during events such as the shot-put, discus, and hammer throw. Using a combination of chest, shoulder, back, and arm muscles to launch the shot as far as he can, Freshman Alex Moore hopes to throw his way onto the podium.

Lady mountaineers give a double scoop of spirit

While improving their record in the Southern Conference since last season, the Lady Mountaineers worked hard to overcome the competition and achieve a better season. Leadership and strong players both on the field and at the plate were big factors in helping the softball team improve their record. Seniors Jordan Arnold and Amber Handy both were named to the All-Tournament team following Appalachian's run to the consolation finals of the 2004 Southern Conference Softball Championship this season. Jordan has been a strong senior pitcher for the Mountaineers, pitching over 177 innings with 35 appearances, while holding an ERA of 2.56. Also, young hitters such as Freshmen Lindsay Glover and Diana Cook were valuable assets to the team, contributing 20 (Lindsay) and 19 (Diana) runs, and over 40 hits each for the team. These young guns instilled in the team a confidence at the plate, and helped to outperform their opponents in the conference.

Leadership was also important to the Appalachian Softball Team. Senior Christa Hicks provided to fill this part well, appearing at the plate 181 times and having a batting average of .227. She received the honor of team MVP at the Appalachian State All-Sports Banquet this year, which honors over 20 students from intercollegiate sports programs. Christa's leadership had helped the team in their performances this year, and her work paid off by earning this team award.

The Lady Mountaineer Softball Team is a prime example of working to get better. Senior team members have helped to provide motivation and support for the team, and young members have contributed to the success as well, both out in the field and at the plate.

Plate Burner • Junior Jennifer Hurley knows how to put it down the middle. Jennifer led the Lady Mountaineers with 120 of the teams total 221 strike outs.

Unlike the traditional slow pitch ball that may be remembered from the past, the new breed of softball players must contend with high velocity pitches that rival the traditional baseball pitch.

Concentration • Sophomore Mary Lutz found respectable playing time as an underclassman starting in 28 of the Lady Mountaineers outings. Mary looks to have a promising future with the team as she boasted a .964 fielding percentage on the season.

men's baseball turns on as season closes

Although the record does not reflect it, the Mountaineers baseball team put in a lot of hard work and effort this season led by Head Coach Troy Heustess and his staff. The 2003-2004 season was Coach Heustess' fifth season leading the team with an overall record of 82-178. The Mountaineers record in the Southern Conference was 6-24 and 10-43 overall.

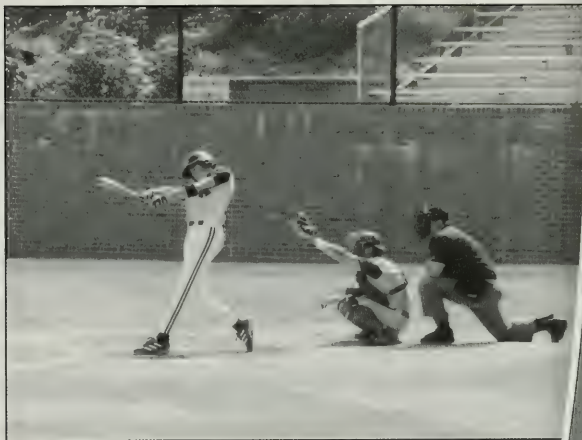

Many elements that lead to a great season include excellent pitching, batting and fielding. The men's team had many of these aspects. A leading pitcher for the Mountaineers was Sophomore Nick Peterson, holding the lowest earned run average (ERA) on the team. The recruit from Odessa, Florida had an ERA of 5.04, and was a big part of the Mountaineer pitching staff. Another key contributor to ASU pitching was the right-handed pitcher Scott Clark. Scott made ten appearances this season and pitched 61 innings with a record of 4-4. He also earned an award for Southern Conference Pitcher of the Week in May, the first pitcher to receive a SoCon award this season. Justin Lee, a senior from Boone, helped the team with a .319 batting average, 6 home runs, and 30 runs batted in for the season.

While battling one of the toughest conferences in the southeast, the baseball team worked hard to gain an advantage over the competition. Through close games and challenging teams, Appalachian gave a substantial effort to build and strengthen the team for next year's season.

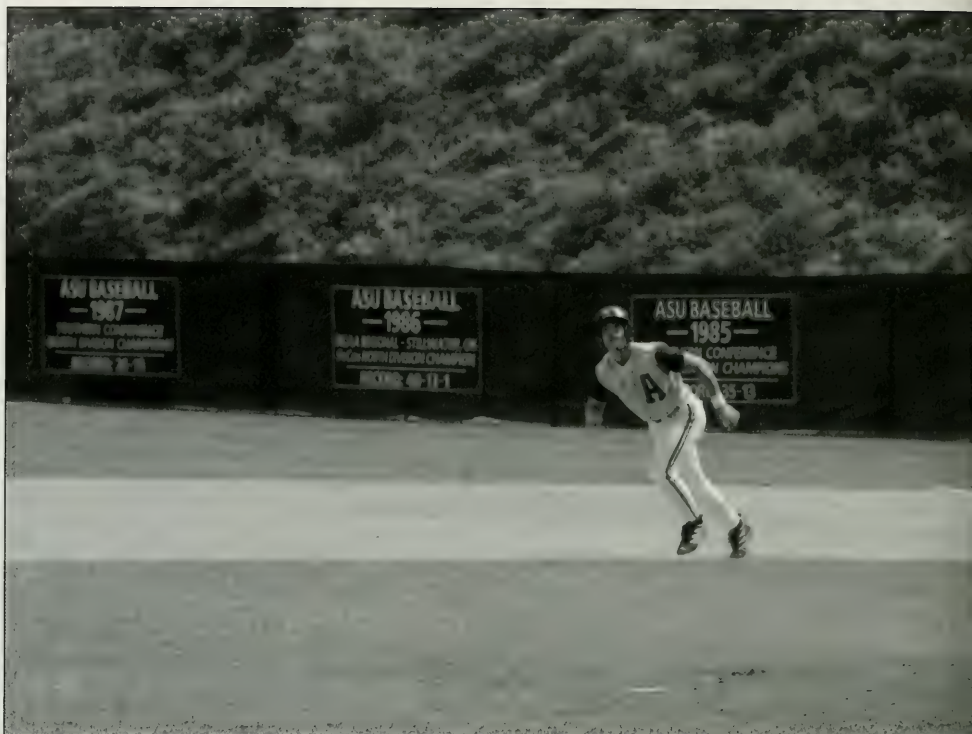

Moving on Up • A term in baseball used to define a style of offense is "small ball," often called bunting, in order to advance runners along the bases. The Mountaineer defense, Brad Peisel, Joe Norton, Jimmy Mathias, and Justin Lee, prepared for this attempt at a bunt by moving into position to make a play on the ball.

Swingin' • Attempting to put the Mountaineers on the scoreboard, Joey Robinson makes an aggressive attempt to put the ball into the outfield.

Safety is a necessary yet often overlooked aspect of sports. In baseball, safety, and the amount required, varies with each position on the field. A catcher, wearing shin and knee guards, chest protection and face mask, must wear much more than that of other fielders. Catcher David Clutter wears proper equipment in order to prevent injury during a game.

Stealing Base • One of the many strategies that baseball teams use is to steal base while the pitcher is not looking. Catcher and Outfielder Kevin Butler attempted to steal second base at this home game.

Batter Up! • The next batter in the lineup stands on the sidelines hoping that their teammate does not score an out for the team. Freshman Chris Baker pauses from warming up his swing to watch his fellow Mountaineer attempt to get on base.

The Tenth Man • Often overlooked, the "tenth man" on the team is known as the bat boy. The ASU baseball team's bat boy, Beckett Bathauti, performed his job by re-supplying the umpire with baseballs and picking up the bats between innings.

Voices of the Crowd

Appalachian Cheerleading was comprised of two different squads. The "Black" squad consisted of men and women who cheered at all of the football games and men's basketball games. After every touchdown, two cheerleaders did push-ups on a board to represent the number of points on the scoreboard. The other team was the "Gold" Squad. This consisted of 13 women who cheered for home football, volleyball, and women's basketball. During the volleyball games, the cheerleaders would provide an extra amount of enthusiasm in the coliseum to support the women's team. Both of the teams threw out three-point t-shirts and first thirty second time-outs to the fans in the crowd that showed the most support for the basketball teams during home basketball games.

In order to prepare for the games, these men and women practiced three times a week and were required to work out in addition to organized practice. Practice was very intense as team members learned new crowd pleasing pyramids and stunts for the next game. Each squad had their own captains; the "Black" squad leaders were: Senior Beth Boggs and Senior Morgan Branch; the "Gold" squad leaders were: Senior Traci Beck and Sophomore Amy Cipar.

Community involvement was another aspect of the cheerleading program. The cheerleaders went to several different schools in the community and spoke with the children about the importance of Physical Fitness. Also, the cheerleaders gave tours of the Appalachian campus to a group of middle school students. During the Drug Awareness week, the cheerleaders wore red ribbons and red bandannas in their hair to represent that they are a drug free team.

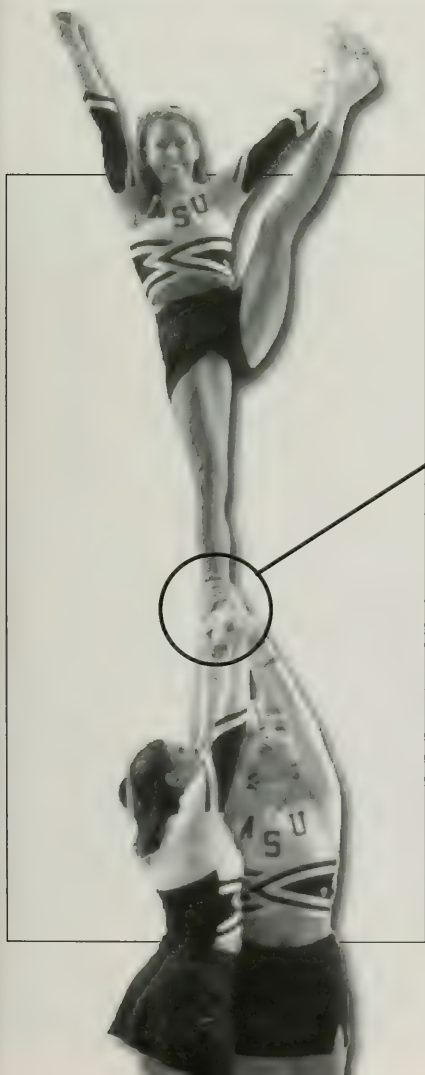

The head coach for both of these teams was Christy Welch. Christy, a counselor at a local elementary school, worked hard this year having to coach both of these teams by herself. Christy was also proud to say that the cheerleading team was ranked with the highest grade point average of all the athletic teams at the university.

Lets Go Appstate • Gold
Squad member, Chrissy Phelps, cheered on the ASU football team at the Mountaineers' stadium. Her beautiful smile showed how much she enjoyed supporting the players throughout the season.

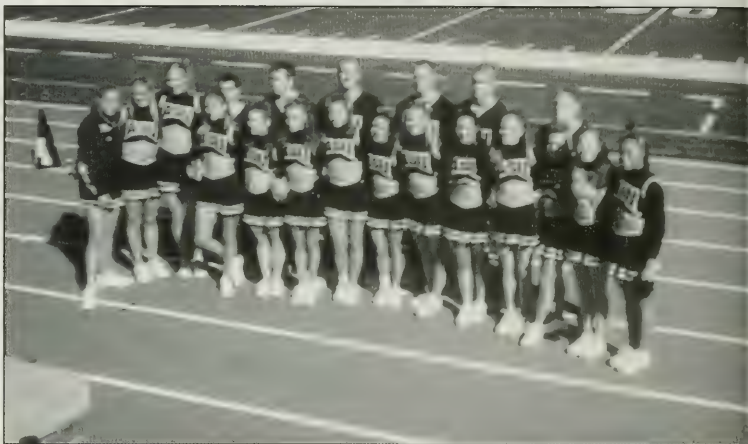

Pepping it up • Cheerleaders pump up the fans before the football players enter the field for the Homecoming game. In order to get ready for this special game, the cheerleaders learned a new dance, made multiple signs for the parade, face painted fans, and tailgated. The cheerleaders want the fans to be as excited as they are for the Homecoming game.

Top Five Common All-Girl Stunts

5. Toss Extension- Three bases throw the flyer into the air while catching their feet with their arms extended.
4. Toss Liberty- Throwing the flyer from the ground into the air with a one leg extension while the other knee is bent close to the thigh.
3. Heel Stretch- Holding one heel with hand behind the flyer's foot.
2. Walk in- The flyer walks into the stunt while rotating to the front over their bases' head hitting a heel stretch or liberty.
1. Tic Toc- The flyer stands in a liberty switching their straight leg while in their bases' hands.

A-P-P-S • During the Homecoming football game, Senior Captains, Beth Boggs, Morgan Branch, and Junior Stacey Burris performed the head re-take pyramid while spelling out A-P-P-S. This pyramid was very crowd appealing and very difficult for the cheerleaders.

Ready 1-2 Down Up • During each time-out of a basketball game, the cheerleaders would go out onto the court and perform a stunt and/or cheer for the crowd. During a time-out at a home women's basketball game, the members of the Gold Squad showed off their "Split Pyramid."

Heart of the Sport

coaches and trainers put heart into their work

Every sport has them: coaches and trainers. Without this leadership and support the athletic programs at ASU would not have been as strong as they were. These coaches and trainers dedicated their heart and time to their individual sport. Often times the commitment was over-looked and taken for granted.

Appalachian State University named Chad Callihan its head volleyball coach on June 16, 2003. Callihan was the seventh head coach in the 34-year history of Appalachian volleyball. "We are pleased to have Coach Callihan on board to direct our volleyball program," Athletics Director Roachel Laney said. "He brings championship experience as well as a great deal of enthusiasm to the position." Coach Callihan was honored to take the position. "I am excited about the opportunity that Appalachian has afforded me and look forward to getting to know the team better," Callihan said. "The previous staff has left the program heading in the right direction and we will strive to take it to the next level."

Paul Mance is entering his 32nd season as a head coach and his 28th season as head wrestling coach at Appalachian State University. During his tenure with the Mountaineers, Mance was only six dual match victories away from 300 at his alma mater, with a record of 294-165-8. His winning percentage of .638, placed him atop the list as the winningest wrestling coach in Appalachian State University history.

In addition, Mance's squads have produced at least one league individual champion in 26 of his 27 seasons in Boone. Named Southern Conference Coach-of-the-Year in three different decades and a total of six times (1989, 1993, 1994, 1996, 2001 and 2003), Mance's 1978-79 squad set a school mark for dual match victories in a season with 19, posting a 19-4-1 overall record. His 1983-84 team finished 18-2 on the season and recorded a 12-match winning streak, second best in Appalachian history. Eighteen times his clubs have claimed 10 or more victories in a campaign. Three times his squads have finished with winning streaks of 10 or more. Only five times in his 27 seasons had Mance led teams finished with a sub-.500 record, and just three suffered 10 or more losses in a single season.

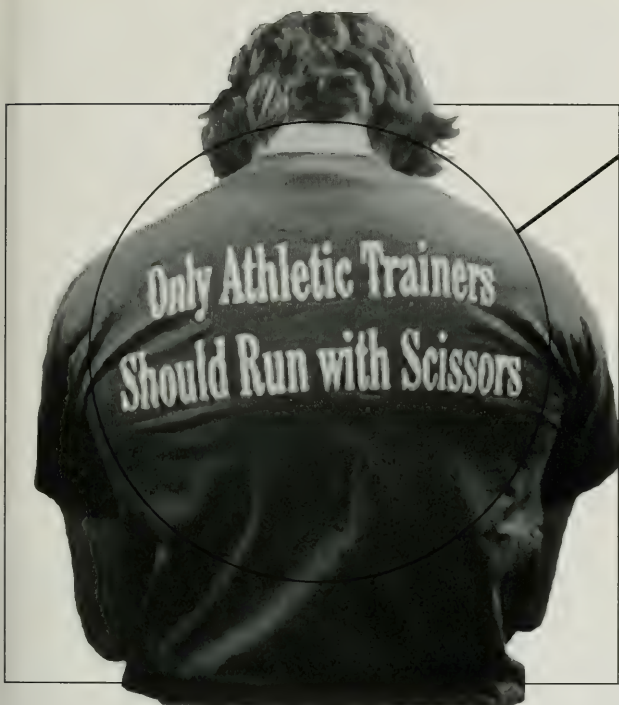

With more than 400 career victories to her credit, Wilma "Willie" Rucker entered her fourth season leading the Appalachian State University Softball Program. A proven winner and the guiding influence of the team, Rucker boasts over 20 years of softball experience and 18 years as a collegiate coach. Building a program from scratch, Rucker directed Appalachian to a 13-36 record in its inaugural season. She followed with an 11-45 campaign in 2002 and boosted the program to 15-36 last spring.

The University was blessed to have such an enthusiastic group of men and women in the Athletic Training Program. These students put many hours of their time a day into helping ASU's student athletes. They were required to have a certain amount of hours with hands on experience with taping, rehabilitating, and applying their book knowledge to their job. Each trainer was assigned to a different sport each semester, where they were responsible for the members of that team.

A Winning Team • Head Softball Coach "Willie"

Rucker was a proven winner and guiding influence over the ASU Softball Program. This 2003-2004 season Coach Rucker earned her 400th career win.

The 2003-2004 Athletic Training Motto was "Only Athletic Trainers Should Run with Scissors." This motto was placed on the backs of the department's T-shirts. The shirts were a charcoal gray with white lettering. It was easy to pick out an athletic trainer on campus because these students were constantly wearing their shirts. The shirts showed heart and dedication for the program. Athletic trainers are required to be in the training rooms throughout campus, as well as their assigned sporting teams' events that they followed in order to keep Appalachian's Student Athletes healthy.

Any Pain? • In Owen's Field House, Athletic Trainer, Elysa Appel helps ASU's basketball player Derrick Thomas with his left knee. Elysa was checking to see if anything was torn in his knee.

Team Training • In Owen's Fieldhouse, Athletic Trainers Carrie Earles and Shiho Kadota work together to rehabilitate a soccer players knee. Many athletes would have to go in the training room during their spare time to keep themselves healthy and in playing condition.

Spike Bump Set...Let's Go • Head Coach Chad Callihan was enthusiastic about his first year as head coach here at ASU. He showed great leadership to the players while on the court.

Discussing Techniques • Assistant Coach John Grasingner discusses with moves performed by the wrestlers during a home meet. This season was Coach Grasingner's fifth year at ASU as assistant coach. He has also taught finance and general business at Appalachian.

Feeling any Better? • In the Broome Kirk Gym Training Room, Athletic Trainer Alisha Russell performs an ultrasound on an ASU athlete. This is a common way for the trainers to keep the athletes healthy and in playing condition.

asu fans show their support

Team Spirit •

Junior Chris McFarland waves the Mountaineer flag and yells to pep up the crowd at a home basketball game. Games were held in the Holmes Convocation Center, which was opened in 2000 to hold more fans.

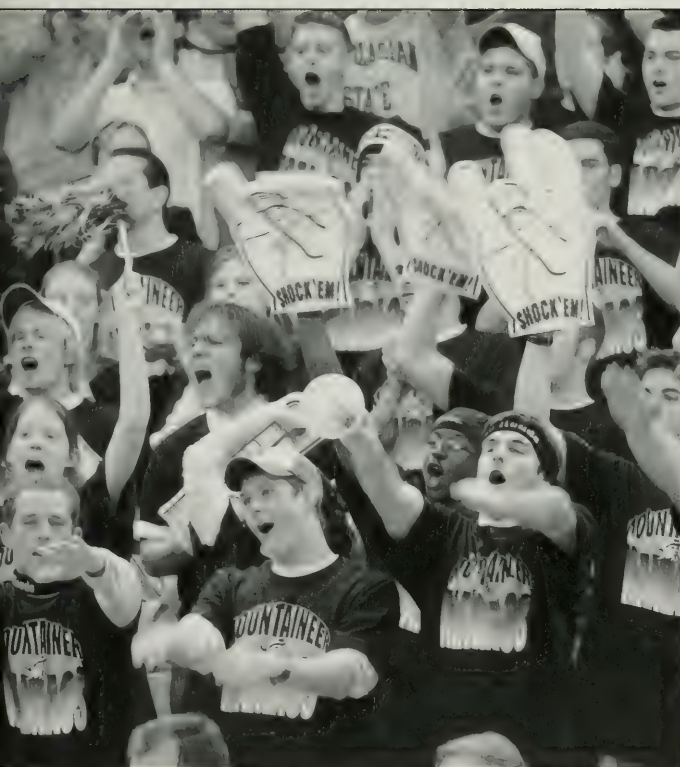

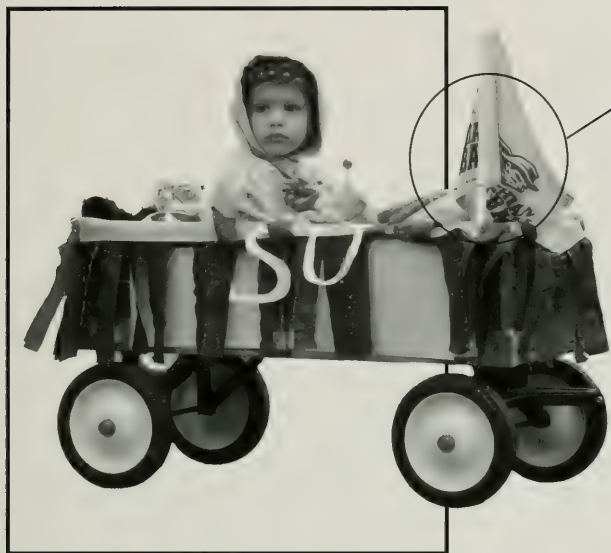

Fan Participation • After the pre-game show, by the Marching Mountaineers, ASU fans prepare for kick-off. Inspired by the cheerleaders, it was a tradition for fans to wave their index finger in hopes of lengthening the kick.

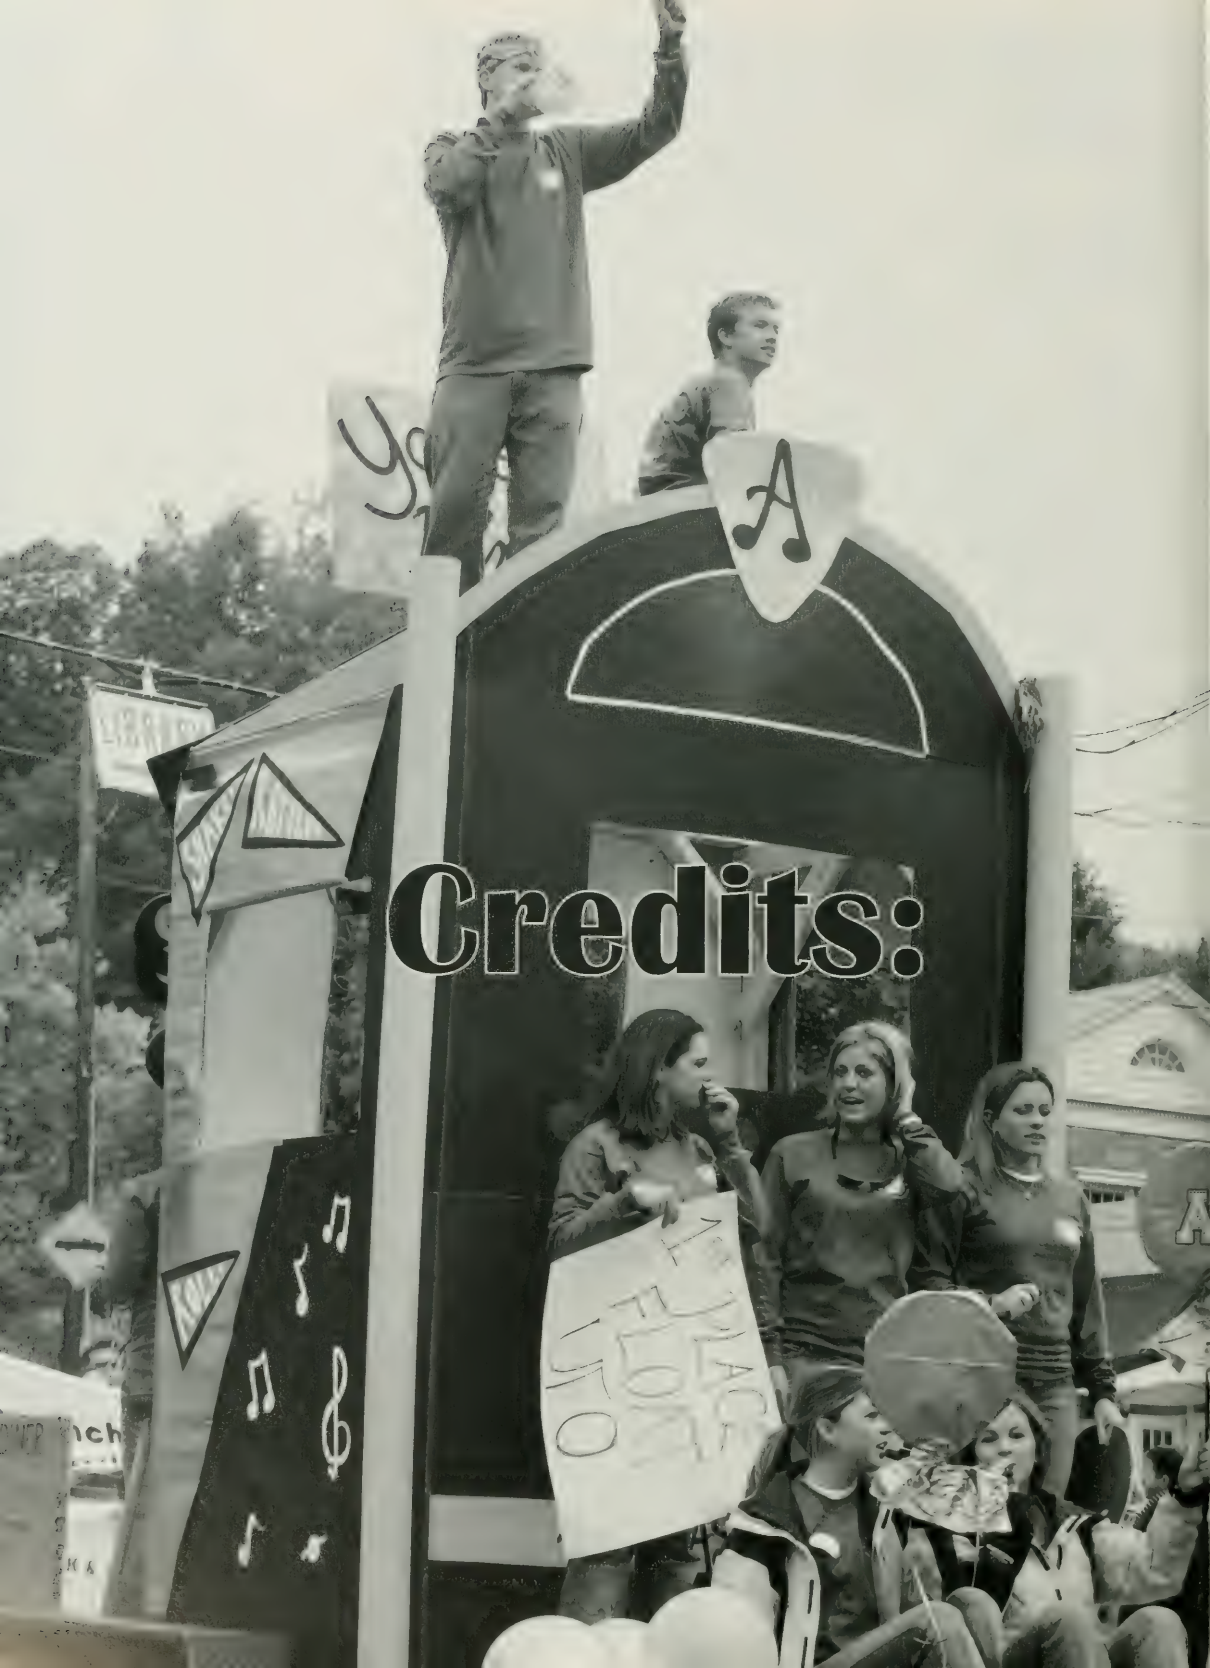

As one walks into a sporting event they hear the roaring support of the fans. What would the concept of a sporting event be if there were no fans? Here at ASU, the fans always came out to show their upmost pride in their team. Fans supporting Appalachian athletics consisted of all kinds of people ranging from the smallest child to the eldest alum. They came to cheer on a victory and many times made our place tough to play at for other teams. Fans gave an extra incentive to the players as they were on the field playing, hearing the crowds cheering them on. One of the new attempts, which started this year, in boosting fan support was "Midnight Madness." This event was held for ASU basketball as a way to start off the season and to give something back to supporters. Fans gathered in Holmes Convocation Center at 11 p.m. on October, 17 2003 to open the basketball season with entertainment from the players. Players participated in 3-on-3 games, dunk contests, and 3-point shootouts to bring in the new season with a bang. Men's basketball Head Coach Houston Fancher commented on the event: "I think it was a great way to start off the season and it was great to see the turnout of fans. My guys (team) was excited to get out there and show them what they could do and it made them excited about the season." Fan support was a crucial aspect in helping the Mountaineers get victories this season and it encouraged athletes to play to their highest potential.

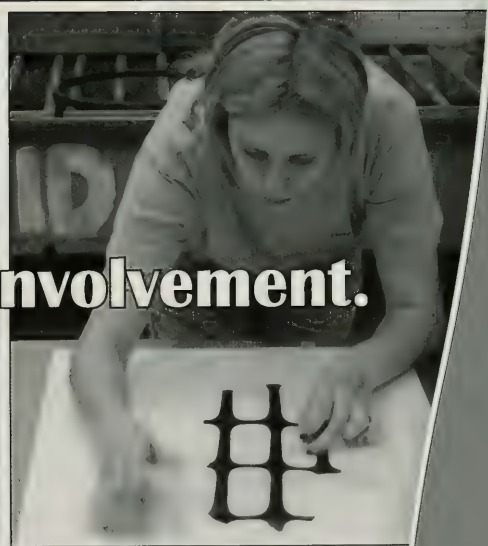

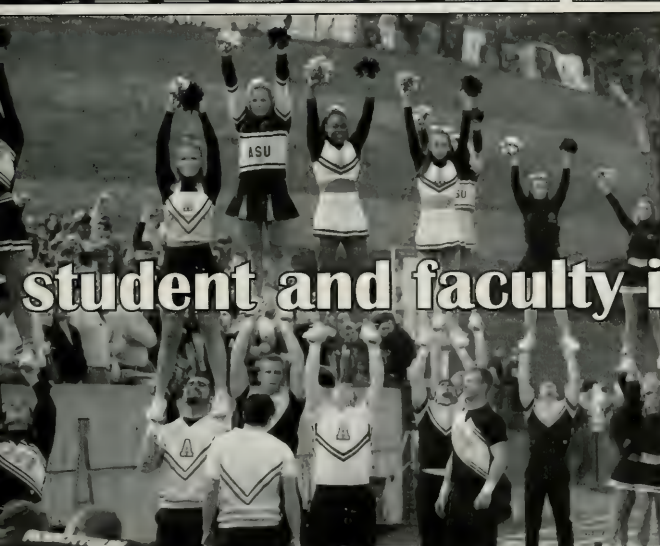

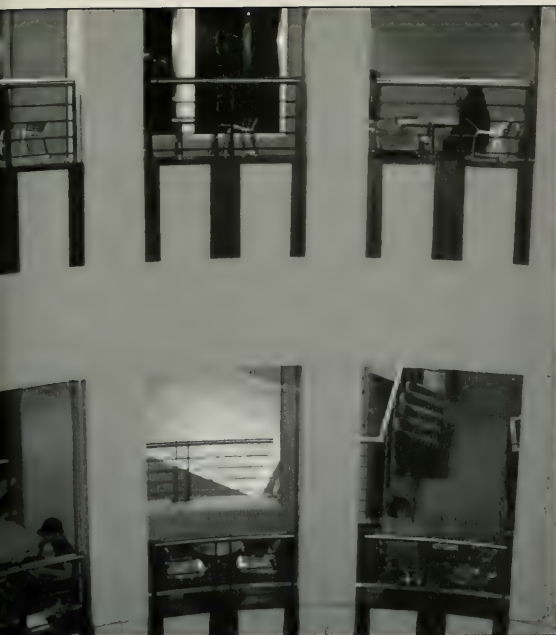

Mountaineer spirit starts at an early age for the local children in Boone. This youngster joins the fans in the homecoming parade to show support and cheer on the ASU football team.

Mountaineer Maniacs • The Maniacs yell and wave foam hands at a home basketball game. The Mountaineer Maniacs was a club created to increase student participation at games. With the use of the club dues, students received a T-shirt, special seating at games and contest prizes.

Welcomes back

The Rhododendron

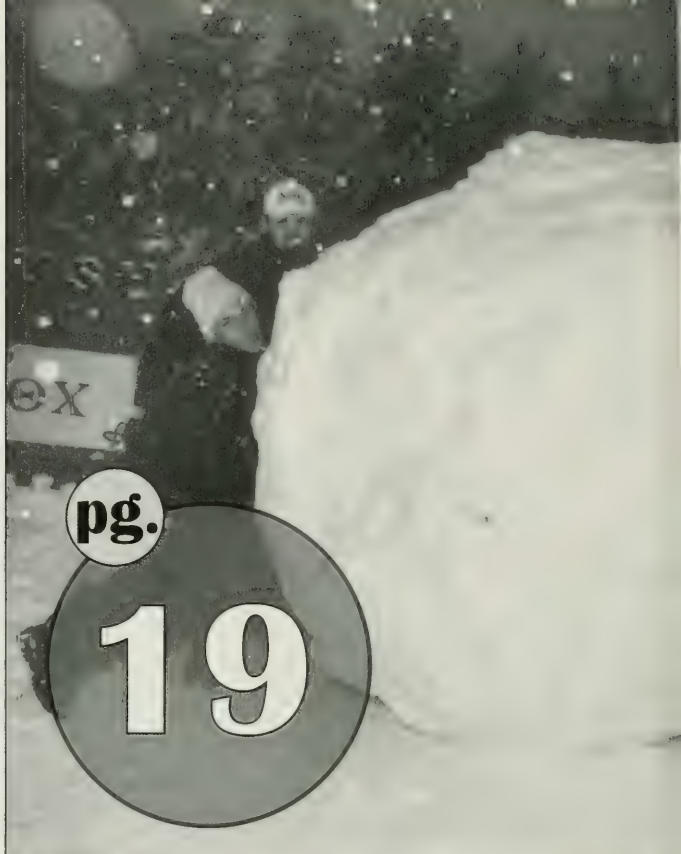

as part of Appalachian Campus media!

It's been a pleasure sharing the office!

Deleted Scenes • The Past 11 years section covered entertainment, weather, construction and news that happened on campus in the years that the University was without a yearbook.

Lights, Camera, Action! • NCAA sports, club sports, fan support and coverage of the history of yosef were all found in the Sports section.

Sideshows • Clubs, organizations and Greeks that were willing to participate were represented in the Club section.

Last Act

No dramatic comeback would be complete without a fair share of bumps and troubles along the way. The Rhododendron was no different. A year of effort and hard work lasted well into the summer to complete what sometimes seemed like the “never ending book.” After months of training, the staff headed home after school ended leaving the book in the hands of just a brave few. Only more complications were around the corner. The summer crew realized that finishing up the book would prove more difficult than hoped. The offices in the Student Union only stayed open until 10 p.m. making it very difficult to finish deadlines. The crew also had to work around holiday closings and the tedious task of indexing the entire book manually. To add to all the drama, the hoards of students that had been around campus during the fall and spring semesters had dwindled down to a bare minimum.

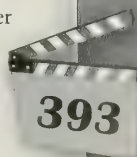

The hopes of finishing the book by mid-July diminished when the proofs for the last two deadlines were lost in the mail for close to two weeks. At the same time, concerned parents and students continued to call about delivery of their book in fear that they had somehow been overlooked. Ironically, the staff still toiled away pulling together pages and badgering innocent University employees over miniscule facts. Due to this hectic summer schedule, an earlier production of the book will seriously be considered for the following editions.

The office was rearranged for a more work friendly environment for upcoming years. This will make both staffs feel more compatible, yet separate in their work space. Each staff will have their own end of the room, but also a middle ground with extra computers, the printer and work tables for all to use.

This year was called by all a “learning experience.” Many plans and organizational schedules will be set in place. There will also be a new payroll system set up for a more efficient use of resources. Highly intensive training in writing, design, photography and software will be implemented for both new and returning members of the staff.

The entire staff contributed to make the 71st volume of The Rhododendron a success. After making a dramatic comeback this edition of The Rhododendron will be a hard act to follow.

Setting the Stage • All of the Colleges and some of their departments were explained in the Academics section.

Special Thanks

First and foremost, we would like to thank Taylor Publishing for financing the comeback of The Rhododendron; without their support we would not be here today. A big "thanks" goes out to Stephanie Petrovich, our yearbook representative. She has spent many a late night in Boone helping us to finish deadlines, index pages or simply edit copy. Her guidance, advice and humor are greatly appreciated. Glenn Russell, our plant contact in Dallas, has had the utmost patience and understanding when it came to turning our pages in, and he answered any questions about production that we threw his way. • There are many people on campus that made it possible for us to complete this book. David Freeman and Dino DiBernardi got the ball rolling by accepting Taylor's offer and by also organizing the core leadership group. They have been there for us whenever we might have needed them. Tina Parlier from CSIL has assisted us whenever we needed her. She posted numerous messages for us on AppalNet and sent us the member rosters for many clubs. Thanks so much for your promptness and never wavering sweet attitude and support. We would like to thank the Administration for believing in us enough to take on this project. We hope that we have exceeded your expectations. • This book would not be complete if not for the University Photographer, Mike Rominger. We could never thank Mike enough for letting us use all of his pictures. We are amazed how Mike was at every important event; a big thanks goes out to you. All of the photo credits that read "Courtesy of Public Affairs" are indeed the work of Mike. • APPS assisted us by letting us into many campus events for our coverage, as well as being an established campus resource. We are gracious for the many questions you answered about concerts and such. The Registrars Office helped us out with last minute graduation questions. Thank you Don Rankins and Connie Morefield for totaling the number of graduates in each department and for collecting the programs for each ceremony. All of the Department Chairs, Deans, Assistant Deans, and Professors that helped us by scrounging up pictures and information for the pages, we really appreciate it. The Academics section would not be complete without your vast knowledge. To all those students that submitted spring break and club pictures, thanks! • We really would like to tell all the students and clubs and organizations that responded to us in a timely manner that we really do appreciate your prompt response. For those clubs, organizations and Greeks that showed up to your photo shoot when scheduled, thank you! • A big thanks goes out to all of the Coaches and the staff of Sports Information. Many of our sports pages would be blank if you all had not lent us your pictures. Many of the teams had already started to play by the time we became a staff this year. Almost all of the team shots came from Sports Information and family members submitted many of the pictures. We'll talk to you again next year. • A special thanks goes out to the Student Union Supervisors. Thank you all for your patience and for not kicking us out or yelling at us when we promised we'd be gone by eleven and we weren't. • I don't think we could have made it through the year without our Graduate Assistant, Adam Bennett. I know he tired of hearing us yell his name, he probably had nightmares about it, but he was always there to help even when he wasn't sure it was in his job description. Whether it was problems with the computer, server, software or a bit of advice, Adam was always there to help. He even left us with his home and cell numbers so we could contact him for emergencies, and those many times that we interrupted his personal life, he still helped! Thanks Adam! You are the man! This book would honestly not be complete if not for you. • We really appreciate the help of Chad Treadway for his Photoshop knowledge and helping us to design the Title Page. If not for his comic relief, we might have gone insane. We greatly appreciate the staff of The Appalachian for accepting us into their office. Although not always convenient to have us here, we appreciate the concessions you made for us. It will only get better in years to come. We look forward to working with you again next year. • For those of you who got your portrait taken, THANK YOU! We hope more of you participate next year. Of course we would like to thank each and every Student and Parent who bought our book. Our success really depends on how supportive the ASU community is. We really are grateful for your purchase. We would also like to thank Carl Wolf Studio, Inc. for taking the student portraits. • Last, but not least, we would like to thank Yosef for lending us his image and for standing through the grueling photo shoot at the beginning of the year. Without your image we wouldn't have our beautiful cover.

Looking forward to the future, I would have never guessed that my college career would have ended up here. This fifth and final year has been one I never could have imagined. After 11 years there would finally be the opportunity to work on The Rhododendron, an opportunity that I could not miss, but one I could not do alone. Thank you so much to all of those who worked on the book this year, without each of your contributions the book would never have been the same. Thank-you especially to Leslie, without you the book would never have gotten done, best of luck next year; we now know so much. Thank- you to Stephanie, your help and patience has meant so much. Thank you also to my loving roommate Rachel, your support and friendship through this trying year made so many things possible. When I look back a million years from now you will still have a special place in my heart. To my family and friends that heard endlessly about the book but listened anyway, thank you. There is sometimes no better gift than someone to talk to. To the future, best of luck while you are in school, make the most of it. These are your college years. To The Rhododendron, the road ahead is long but you may pave it well, just stay focused and work hard.

"Shoot for the Moon. Even if you miss, you will land among the Stars."

As I drove up the mountain almost everyday during this summer, while also juggling work, classes and family, I kept thinking that I'm almost done. I imagined myself as the little train that could, almost there, almost to the top of the hill! I may seem to be exaggerating, but many people do not understand the time and effort that goes into creating a book filled with events and memories of an entire year at a large university. Many of you have no idea what roadblocks we have had to overcome this year. I worked on the yearbook in high school and thought it would be a great experience for me to get involved with in college. Why not? Believe me, I had no idea what I was getting myself into. Besides making my college year memorable, the yearbook has taught me much more than just how to use software, such as InDesign and Photoshop. All of the things I have learned this year will help me in my future career. I take with me the knowledge of what it feels like to really be dedicated to a cause, so much so that I put deadlines before my family and friends. (Not in a bad way, I love my family, but when you have deadlines, they can't be late!) But with that dedication I have also learned where to draw the line and when to leave the yearbook at school.

I have also gained great leadership training that I only could have possessed with the hands-on experience I have encountered in this office. As a Graphic Arts major the layout and design skills that I have obtained, help me more than any design class ever could. This has been a very long, hard and trying experience, but looking back, I have to say that I would not change those memories. The staff has learned so much this year, the most important thing being what to do and definitely what NOT to do next year. As the Editor-in-Chief next year, I plan on taking everything I have been taught to improve the next edition.

Unquestionably, I could not have made this journey on my own. I want those of you out there that helped me through to know that I greatly appreciate your help: • Joshua - I love you! You have stood by me throughout this entire time. I really am glad that I have you to support me. There's only one more year to go baby! • My family - Thanks for your unwavering support, confidence and love. • Adam - What can I say? Thanks so much for making the computer behave and for helping out with tedious tasks. I look forward to working with you again next year. • John - You're a great photographer. Thanks for running around and taking pictures for me at the last minute. We would have many pages blank if not for your help. • The Rhododendron staff, Heather and Susan- I appreciate all of you hard work and for making this first year a success. • Stephanie and Glenn - Thanks so much for understanding my situation this summer and for helping me so much with computer and proof problems. I look forward to next year. • I also would like to re-thank all the people that are listed on the "Special Thanks" page.

“ I am so glad that I had the opportunity to be on staff my first year here. It's one of the best things to be on my resume for all my years at school. It was very challenging at times, but I think we all managed to get a few laughs in and make some friendships along the way. ”

Meeting Time • Sports Section Editor Josh Tucker and Copy Editor Brandon Eudy work on the ladder for the Sports section during the weekly Monday night meetings. The ladder consisted of every spread in the yearbook and the intended topic for each page. “Working with the sports section was a lot of work, but it was also a lot of fun. It is difficult trying to organize and arrange every single sports activity going on around Appalachian, but it is also so much fun because it is something I truly enjoy,” Justin Tucker, sports designer and writer, said.

David Freeman

The Rhododendron has returned to Appalachian State University thanks to a new program offered to us by Taylor Publishing Company, and a group of students dedicated to telling the story of the University. While my job was to serve as a cheerleader, adviser, and friend, the students are the heart and soul of this publication. Without them and their hard work and long hours, this yearbook would not exist. They have worked diligently this year to produce a book that honors the University and the student body. I'm proud of the student staff and the work they did to bring back our yearbook after a decade without one.

Team Work • The Student Life Crew, Rachel Williams, Sara Hyde and Jenna Starnes, all brainstorm on what an article for the Student Life section. This section included pictures of students across campus, local concerts, and coverage of homecoming. “Working on the Student Life section was challenging, but fun because of the creative freedom I experienced with the pages. Being part of the 2004 Rhododendron staff, after a long absence of the book, was an honor, and I enjoyed helping make the book the best it could be,” Jenna said.

“ I have had the pleasure of working with a very talented staff that have all done a great job working together to produce what we hope will be a memorable book. Working on the Sports section gave me the opportunity to see how hard sporting teams work to achieve their goals. I have gained the most respect for the players as they strive to become the best athlete they can while juggling their class load and other aspects of their lives. This year on staff has been a great year for me to be involved in my love of collegiate sports and I am grateful for this opportunity.”

Organize It! • Associate Editor, Leslie Miller and Clubs and Organizations Section Editor Laurie Tracey, discuss the easiest way to record all of the club contacts into the address book. Having easy access to all club contact information made it easier to obtain information for the club pages. “The Clubs and Organizations section was definitely one of the most difficult sections to complete. Having to rely so much on the participation of others made this section very challenging. I hope we find a better way to communicate with clubs next year,” Laurie said.

The 2004 Rhododendron was printed by Taylor Publishing Company in Dallas, Texas. The books were ran on Komori presses with a press run of 2800 copies. The book contains 488 pages with 9x12 trim size. The cover was silkscreened with a clear varnish using black matte cover material on 160 point binders board. The endsheet material was 80# passport granite. The content pages were 80# enamel. Stephanie Petrovich served as our local sales representative and Glenn Russell served as our account representative in Dallas.

The staff used Adobe InDesign 2.0.2 and Photoshop 7.0 during production.
